(a) The provisions contained in the twenty-sixth and following sections (except the thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth) of the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 19, relating to binding apprentices to the sea service are nearly the same as those contained in the repealed statutes 2 & 3 Anne, c. 6; 4 Anne, c. 19; 13 Geo. II. c. 17; 2 Geo. III. c. 15, s. 22 & 25, and 4 Geo. IV. c. 25.

As to the law of apprentices in general and parish apprentices, a considerable portion of which will be here applicable, see title "Apprentices," Vol. I. By the common law, an apprentice cannot be compelled to go beyond sea, see Vol. I. p. 183, 191. As to the settlement of sea service apprentices, see 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 76, s. 67, ante, title "Paor," Vol. IV.

ciating minister of such parish without fee or reward; and in cases where no such entry of baptism can be found, the justices aforesaid shall inform themselves as fully as they can of such boy's age, and from such information shall insert the same in his said indenture, and the age of every such boy so inserted therein shall (in relation to the continuance of his service) be taken to be his true age without any further proof thereof."

5 & 6 Wil. 4, c. 1

Sect. 27. "It shall be lawful for any master or person to whom any poor parish apprentice shall have been or shall be hereafter bound to a service on shore according to the statutes already in force relating to such apprentices, or for the executors or administrators, or, there being none such, for the widow of any such deceased master, with the concurrence of two or more justices of the peace residing in or near to the place where such poor boy shall have been bound apprentice, to assign and turn over such poor boy, with his consent but not otherwise, apprentice to any master or owner of any ship not having her complement of apprentices as hereinafter required, to be employed by such master or owner in the sea service during the period then remaining unexpired of his apprenticeship."

Parish apprentices may be turned over to the sea service.

Sect. 28. "In the event of the death of the master of any such poor or parish apprentice to the sea service, it shall be lawful for the widow or the executor or administrator of such deceased master to assign the indenture of any such apprentice for the residue of the term then unexpired therein to any master or owner of any such ship not having the complement of apprentices as hereinafter required; all which assignments, if executed within the limits of the port of London, shall be attested by the said registrar or one of his assistants or clerks, and if at any other port shall be attested by the collector or comptroller of the customs of such port."

Indentures may be assigned on the death of the master (a).

Sect. 29. "Such overseers or other persons as aforesaid shall cause the indentures of apprenticeship to be prepared and transmitted in duplicate, if the master or owner of the ship to whom such apprentice is to be bound shall be or reside within the limits of the port of London, to the said registrar, and if at any other port to the collector or comptroller of the customs at such port; and the said overseers or other persons as aforesaid shall cause each such poor boy to be conducted and conveyed to such port or place by the constable and at the expense of the parish or township sending him thither, and shall also, upon the execution by the master of the counterpart of the indentures, cause to be paid down to the master the sum of five pounds, to be expended in providing such boy with necessary sea clothing and bedding; which sum, as well as the expenses to be incurred in the conveyance of the boy as aforesaid shall, when paid, be allowed to them in their accounts of monies expended in relation to the poor."

Parish officers to prepare indentures.

Constable to convey the apprentice.

Sect. 30. "The counterparts of all such indentures shall, if the master shall be or reside within the limits of the port of London, be executed in the presence of and attested by the said registrar or one of his assistants or clerks, and if at any other port by the collector or comptroller of the customs at such port, and also in both cases by the constable or other officer who shall convey such apprentices thither, and such indentures shall bear date respectively on the days on which they are executed; and the constable on his return shall deliver such counterparts to the overseers or other persons as aforesaid, to be by them registered and preserved."

How counterparts of indentures to be attested.

Sect. 31. "The master of every ship belonging to any subject of the United Kingdom, and of the burthen of eighty tons and upwards, shall have on board thereof, at the time of clearing out from any port of the United Kingdom, one apprentice or more, in the following proportions to the number of tons of his ship's admeasurement, according to the certificate of registry; that is to say, every ship of eighty tons and under two hundred tons shall have one apprentice at the least, every ship of two hundred tons and under four hundred tons shall have two apprentices at the least, every ship of four hundred tons and under five hundred tons shall have three appren-

Sect. 32. "No apprentice bound or assigned pursuant to this act, nor any master or owner in respect of any such apprentice, shall be liable to the payment of any contribution towards the support of any hospital or institution."

Sect. 33. "The said registrar in London and the collector and comptroller of the customs at each other port shall, in a book to be kept for that purpose, cause to be entered from time to time all such indentures and assignments of parish apprentices as aforesaid, specifying therein the dates thereof, the names and ages of the apprentices, the parishes or places from whence sent, the names and residences of the masters to whom bound or assigned, and the names, ports, and burthen of the respective ships to which such masters belong, and shall make and subscribe on each indenture or assignment respectively an indorsement purporting that the same hath been duly registered pursuant to this act; and every such collector and comptroller shall also at the end of each quarter of the year transmit a list of the indentures and assignments so registered by him within the preceding quarter, containing all the particulars aforesaid, to the said registrar, for the purposes of this act" (a).

Sect. 34. "In every case of a person voluntarily binding himself apprentice to the sea service, the indentures to be executed on such occasions shall be registered in a book to be kept for that purpose by the said registrar in London and by the collector and comptroller of the customs at each other port at which the indenture shall be executed, in which book shall be expressed the dates of the several indentures, the names and ages of the apprentices, the names and residence of their masters, and (if known) the names, port, and burthen of the several ships on board which they are respectively to serve; and such registrar and collector or comptroller respectively shall indorse and subscribe upon each indenture a certificate purporting that the same hath been duly registered pursuant to this act, and the said collector and comptroller shall also at the end of each quarter of the year transmit a list of the indentures so registered by them within the preceding quarter, containing all the particulars aforesaid, to the said registrar, for the purposes of this act; and that it shall be lawful for the master, or in case of his death his executor or administrator, with the consent of the apprentice, if of the age of seventeen years or upwards, and if under that age with the consent of his parent or guardian, to assign or transfer the indenture of any

(a) It was held that the indentures of a mariner's apprentice, bound under 5 Eliz. c. 5, s. 12, must be enrolled in the next corporate town, according to the statute, in order to sustain an action of covenant, and not in the Trinity-house, according to the charter of that company; for the king cannot by his charter alter the place of enrolment, but it must be according to the direction of the statute; otherwise the covenants should be according to the common law, and the apprentice not bound by them. (Poulson's case, 3 Lev. 389; 1 Bott, 634; Barber v. Dennis, 6 Mod. 69; 1 Bott, 527.) The provision, however, contained in that clause, was intended for the benefit of the apprentice, and as a check upon the master. Therefore, where the indenture was not enrolled in the town where the apprentice was then inhabiting, nor in the next corporate town to the habitation of the apprentice, pursuant to the stat. 5 Eliz. c. 5, nor with the collector of the customs, pursuant to the 2 & 3 Ann. c. 6, it was holden that the apprentice should not be prejudiced by the neglect of the master to enrol the indenture, although the stamp duties were thereby evaded. (R. v. Gainsborough, Burr. S. C. 586; 1 Bott, 635.)

such apprentice to any other person who may be the master or owner of any registered ship; and all such voluntary apprentices may, during the term for which they shall be bound, be employed in any ship of which the master of any such apprentice may be the master or owner: provided always, that every such assignment shall be registered and indorsed by the said registrar, or by the collector or comptroller of the customs at the port where the master shall be resident, or to which his ship shall belong, in which latter case the said collector or comptroller shall notify the same to the said registrar as is hereinbefore provided with regard to the indenture of such apprentice."

Sect. 35. "All agreements with the crew of a ship made in pursuance of and in conformity with this act, and all indentures of parish and voluntary apprentices to the sea service, and all counterparts and assignments of such indentures to be respectively executed after the passing of this act, shall be wholly exempt from stamp duty." [The 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 89, s. 11, imposing a duty of 2s., is repealed by this enactment.]

Sect. 36. "If any master to whom any apprentice mentioned in this act shall be bound or assigned shall neglect to cause the indenture or the assignment thereof (as the case may be) to be registered as required by this act, or shall, after the ship shall have cleared outwards on the voyage upon which such ship may be bound, suffer his apprentice to quit his service (not entering into that of his majesty), except in case of death, desertion, sickness, or other unavoidable cause, to be certified in the log book of the ship, every such master shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of ten pounds."

Sect. 37. "Any two or more justices of the peace residing at or near to any port at which any ship as aforesaid, having on board thereof any sea apprentice, shall at any time arrive, shall have full power and authority to inquire into and examine, hear and determine, all claims of apprentices upon their masters under their indentures, and all complaints of hard or ill usage exercised by their respective masters towards any such their apprentices, or of misbehaviour on the part of any such apprentice, and to make such orders therein as they are empowered by law to do in other cases between masters and apprentices."

Sect. 38. "And whereas by an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for consolidating and amending the statutes in England relative to offences against the person, a summary jurisdiction is provided for the punishment of persons guilty of common assaults and batteries: and whereas it is expedient that the provisions of the said act should be extended to similar offences committed on board merchant ships as hereinafter provided; be it therefore further enacted, that in the case of any assault or battery which shall after the commencement of this act be committed on board any merchant ship belonging to any subject of the United Kingdom in any place at sea, or out of his majesty's dominions, it shall be lawful for any two justices of the peace in any part of his majesty's dominions, upon complaint of the party aggrieved, to hear and determine any such complaint, and to proceed and make such adjudication thereon as by the said act any two justices are empowered to do, subject however to such provisos and limitations as are contained in the said act with respect to the cases of assault and battery therein mentioned; and the fine or forfeiture to be imposed in any such case shall be payable to the merchant seamen's hospital or institution at or nearest to the port or place where such adjudication shall be made."

Sect. 39. "No parish or voluntary apprentice to the sea service shall be at liberty to enter into the naval service of his majesty during the period of his apprenticeship without the consent of his master; but if nevertheless he shall voluntarily enter on board any of his majesty's ships of war, and shall

Sect. 40. "And whereas great mischiefs have arisen from masters of merchant ships leaving seamen in foreign parts, who have been thus reduced to distress, and thereby tempted to become pirates, or otherwise misconduct themselves, and it is expedient to amend and enlarge the law in this behalf; be it therefore further enacted, that if any master of a ship belonging to any subject of the United Kingdom shall force on shore and leave behind, or shall otherwise wilfully and wrongfully leave behind on shore or at sea, in any place in or out of his majesty's dominions, any person belonging to his crew, before the return to or arrival of such ship in the United Kingdom, or before the completion of the voyage or voyages for which such person shall have been engaged, whether such person shall have formed part of the original crew or not, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer such punishment by fine or imprisonment or both as to the court before which he shall be convicted shall seem meet; and the said offence may be prosecuted by information at the suit of the attorney general on behalf of his majesty, or by indictment or other proceeding in any court having criminal jurisdiction in his majesty's dominions at home or abroad, where such master or other person as aforesaid shall happen to be, although the place where the offence may be therein averred to have been committed (which averment is hereby required to be substantially according to the fact) shall appear to be out of the ordinary local jurisdiction of such court; and such court is hereby authorized to issue a commission or commissions for the examination of any witnesses who may be absent or out of the jurisdiction of the court; and at the trial the depositions taken under such commission or commissions, if such witnesses shall be then absent, shall be received in evidence." (a) As to the impressment of apprentices, it was held in R. v. Edwards, MS. (D.) S. C. reported 7 T. R. 745, that an apprentice is protected from being impressed. Upon showing cause against a rule obtained for quashing a writ of habeas corpus, to bring up the body of an apprentice detained on board a king's ship at the Nore, per Lord Kenyon et tot. Cur. To impress an apprentice is an illegal act; and the party impressed may regain his liberty by applying for an habeas corpus, or his master may bring an action for the detention of his apprentice. The writ of habeas corpus being a writ specially granted by the legislature for the liberty of the subject, it can be granted only at the instance of the party detained, and not on the application of any other person. Lord Kenyon observed, that he remembered Lord Mansfield to have said, that for a long time he was not aware that he had a power, as chief justice, to relieve the party by his warrant for his discharge, but that he had been informed by Mr. Way that such a power had existed ever since the time of Lord Holt. Lord Kenyon declared, that he should not hesitate a moment to grant his warrant on the present occasion, though the writ, having been moved on behalf of the master, and not of the party impressed, must be quashed. An apprentice, his lordship observed, could not even enter voluntarily, for his time was his master's property. Lawrence, J., mentioned the case of an apprentice who had absconded from his master and enlisted as a soldier, but was immediately restored upon application to the war office by his master, in consequence of the apprentice disliking his situation, and expressing a wish to return to his master's service. The war office, however, though they restored the apprentice, were advised to indict him for taking the bounty. The learned judge said, that Mr. J. Buller had informed him that Lord Mansfield had frequently by his warrant discharged persons in the situation of this apprentice at the request of their masters. The power to grant such a warrant was given by a clause in some act of parliament in the time of Hen. VII. or VIII.; he did not recollect exactly which.

Sect. 41. "No such master shall discharge any individual person of his crew, whether British subject or foreigner, at any of his majesty's colonies or plantations, without the previous sanction in writing of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary, or other officer appointed in that behalf by the government there, or in the absence of all such authorities at or near to the port or place at which the ship shall be then lying, then of the chief officer of customs of such colony or plantation resident at or near to such port or place; nor shall he discharge any such person at any other place abroad without the like previous sanction in writing of his majesty's minister, consul, or vice-consul there, or in the absence of any such functionaries respectively are hereby authorized and required, and all which said merchants are hereby authorized, in a summary way, to inquire into the grounds of any such proposed discharge by examination on oath, and thereupon to grant or refuse such sanction according to their discretion, having regard to the objects of this act."

Sect. 42. "No such master shall be at liberty to leave behind at any place abroad, either on shore or at sea, any person of his crew as aforesaid, on the plea of such person not being in a condition to proceed on the voyage, or having deserted from the ship, or otherwise disappeared, unless upon a previous certificate in writing of one of such functionaries or merchants as aforesaid, if there be any such at or within a reasonable distance from the place where the ship shall then be, if there be time to procure the same, certifying that such person is not in such condition, or has deserted or disappeared, and cannot be brought back; and all such functionaries as aforesaid are hereby authorized and required, on the application of any such master, to inquire by examination on oath into the circumstances, and to give or refuse such certificate according to the result of such examination."

Sect. 43. "If any such master shall leave behind any one of his crew as aforesaid contrary to this act, in any indictment or proceeding the proof of his having obtained such sanction or certificate as aforesaid shall be upon him, it being the intention hereof that, except in the case of entering into his majesty's naval service, no person of the crew shall be discharged, either with or without his consent, in any place abroad where such functionary can be found, unless he shall have given such sanction thereto."

Sect. 44. "Every such master who shall leave any person of his crew as aforesaid on shore at any place abroad, under a certificate of his not being in a condition to proceed on the voyage, shall deliver to one of the said functionaries, or if there be none such to any two respectable merchants there, or if there be but one then to such one merchant, a just and true account of the wages due to such person, and pay the same to the seaman either in money or by a bill drawn upon the owner of his ship; and if by bill, then such functionary or merchant, according to the case, is hereby authorized and required by certificate indorsed on such bill to testify that the same is drawn according to this act for money due on account of wages of a seaman, or to that effect; and any such master who shall deliver a false account, or refuse or neglect to deliver a just and true account of the wages due to such person, and to pay the amount thereof in money or by bill as aforesaid, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay, in addition to the wages due, the penal sum of twenty-five pounds."

Sect. 45. "Provided always, that nothing in this act or in any agreement contained shall be deemed to extend to prevent any seaman or person belonging to any merchant ship whatever from entering or being received into the naval service of his majesty, nor shall any such entry be deemed a desertion from the merchant ship, nor incur any penalty or forfeiture whatever, either of wages, clothes, or effects, or other matter or thing, notwithstanding any agreement made to the contrary hereof; and all masters and owners of ships are strictly prohibited from introducing into any ship's articles or agreement with the crew any clause or matter by which any penalty or forfeiture of any kind is agreed to be incurred by a seaman upon his entry into his majesty's service."

Sect. 46. "When any seaman shall quit a merchant ship in order to enter into his majesty's naval service, and shall thereupon be actually received into such service, not having previously committed any act amounting to and treated by the master as a total desertion, he shall be entitled immediately upon such entry to the delivery up of all his clothes and effects on board such merchant ship, and (in case the ship shall have earned freight) to receive from the master the payment of the proportionate amount of his wages up to the period of such entry, either in money or by a bill on the owner thereof; all which clothes, effects, money, and bill such master is hereby required to deliver up to him accordingly, under a penalty of twenty-five pounds for any refusal or neglect, to be recovered, with full costs of suit, by such seaman: provided always, that if no freight shall have been earned at the time of such entry, then the master shall and he is hereby required to give the seaman so entering a bill upon the owner for his wages to the period of such entry, payable on the ship's safe arrival at her destined port; but in case the master shall have no means of ascertaining the balance justly due, he shall make out and deliver to such seaman a certificate of the period of his services and the rate of wages he is entitled to, producing at the same time to the commanding or other officer of his majesty's ship the agreement entered into with the seaman for the voyage; and every such master, upon the delivery up of such clothes and effects and the settlement of such wages in manner herein mentioned, shall be entitled to receive from the officer in command of the ship of his majesty into which such seaman shall have entered a certificate signed by the said officer, which such officer is hereby required to give upon the request of the master, testifying that such seaman has entered into such ship of his majesty to serve, as proof that the master had not parted with the seaman contrary to the provisions of this act."

Sect. 47. "In all cases where any master shall have forced on shore or left behind any person against the provisions of this act, and such person shall become distressed and be relieved under the provisions of an act passed in the eleventh year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for amending and consolidating the laws relating to the pay of the royal navy (a), or under any act hereafter to be passed, then, in addition to the wages due from and the penalties imposed on such master, his majesty shall be entitled to sue such master or the owner of the ship, at the option of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral of the United Kingdom, for all the charges and expenses which shall have been incurred in the subsistence, necessary clothing, and conveyance home of any such person, as so much money paid, laid out, and expended to the use of the defendant, which, together with full costs of suit, may be recovered in the same manner as other debts due to his majesty are recoverable in any court having jurisdiction in cases of debts due to the crown; and in any proceeding for that purpose proof of the account furnished to the said commissioners by any one of such functionaries, or by such two merchants or one merchant, according to the case, as provided by the said act of the eleventh year of king George the Fourth, shall, together with proof of payment by the said commissioners or by the treasurer of the navy of the charges incurred on account of any such person, be sufficient evidence that such person was relieved and conveyed home, according to the intent of the said act, at his majesty's expense; and the court in which any proceeding for the recovery of the said money shall be instituted is hereby authorized to issue a commission or commissions for the examination of witnesses abroad, and the depositions taken under such commission or commissions shall be received as evidence."

Sect. 48. "And in order the more effectually to secure a compliance with the provisions of this act, be it further enacted, that every master of a ship belonging to any subject of his majesty, on his arrival at any foreign port where there shall be a British consul or vice-consul, shall deliver to such consul or vice-consul the agreement with his ship's crew, to be by such consul or vice-consul preserved during the ship's stay there, and to be returned to the master before his leaving the port, without any fee or charge being made for the same; and if any such master shall refuse or neglect to deliver any such agreement to the consul or vice-consul, as is hereby required, he shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of twenty-five pounds."

Sect. 49. "During the ship's stay at any such foreign port no seaman shall be shipped by any such master except with the privity of such consul or vice-consul, to be indorsed or certified on the agreement, under a penalty of twenty-five pounds to be forfeited by any such master for every seaman who shall be so shipped in breach of this act."

Sect. 50. "The master of every ship belonging to any subject of his majesty as aforesaid shall and he is hereby required to produce and show the muster roll of the ship and the agreement with his crew to the captain, commander, or other commissioned officer of any of his majesty's ships requiring a production and sight thereof; and that it shall be lawful for any such officer in his majesty's naval service, if he shall think it necessary so to do, to muster the crew and passengers (if any) of any ship belonging to any subject as aforesaid, in order to be satisfied that the provisions of this act and of any other act by which the crews of merchant ships are regulated, and the laws relating to navigation, with respect to the crews of merchant ships, have been duly complied with; and if any such master shall, upon being required so to do by any such officer, neglect or refuse to produce such muster roll or such agreement, or shall obstruct any such officer in the execution of his duty in mustering the said crew or passengers, or shall produce any false muster roll, he shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of twenty-five pounds."

Sect. 51. "For the better carrying into effect the purposes of this act it shall be lawful for the said registrar and his assistants, and also for the respective collectors or other chief officers of the customs at the several ports of the United Kingdom and of the British possessions abroad, to demand from the master of every ship hereby required to enter into an agreement with his crew the production of the muster roll of the ship and also of such agreement, with liberty to take a copy of either or both, and to muster the crew and apprentices of such ship, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the provisions of this act and of the laws relating to navigation have been complied with; and if any such master, on such demand being made, shall refuse or neglect to produce such muster roll or agreement, or shall refuse to allow a copy of either document to be taken, or shall refuse to permit or shall prevent his crew and apprentices from being so mustered, he shall for every such neglect, refusal, or offence forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds."

Sect. 52. "And to avoid doubts in the construction of this act, be it further enacted, that every person having the charge or command of any ship belonging to any subject of the United Kingdom shall, within the meaning and for the purposes of this act, be deemed and taken to be the master of such ship; and that every person (apprentices excepted) who shall be employed or engaged to serve in any capacity on board the same shall in like manner be deemed and taken to be a seaman within the meaning and for the purposes of this act; and that the term 'ship,' as used in this act, shall be taken and understood to comprehend every description of vessel navigating on the sea; and that the term 'owner,' as applied to a ship, shall be understood to comprehend all the several persons, if more than one, to whom the ship shall belong; and that all steam and other vessels employed in carrying passengers or goods shall be deemed trading ships within the meaning and for the purposes of this act."

SCHEDULE (B.)

AN AGREEMENT made, pursuant to the Directions of an Act of Parliament passed in the Sixth Year of the Reign of His Majesty King William the Fourth, between the Master of the ship , of the Port of , and of the Burthen of tons, and the several Persons whose Names are subscribed thereto.

It is agreed by and on the part of the said persons, and they severally hereby engage, to serve on board the said ship in the said several capacities against their respective names expressed, which ship is to be employed in [here the nature of the ship's employment is to be described, whether in the fisheries, on the coast, or in trading from one part of the United Kingdom to another, or to any of the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Man, or to any port on the continent of Europe between the river Elbe inclusive and Brest]; and the said crew further engage to conduct themselves in an orderly, faithful, honest, careful, and sober manner, and to be at all times diligent in their respective duties and stations, and to be obedient to the lawful commands of the master in every thing relating to the said ship, and the materials, stores, and cargo thereof, whether on board such ship, in boats, or on shore [here may be inserted any other clauses which the parties may think proper to be introduced into the agreement, provided that the same be not contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions and spirit of this act]. In consideration of which services, to be duly, honestly, carefully, and faithfully performed, the said master doth hereby promise to pay to the said crew, by way of compensation or wages, the amount against their names respectively expressed: provided always, and it is hereby declared, that no seaman shall be entitled to his discharge from the ship during any voyage in which she may be engaged, nor at any other than a port in the United Kingdom. In witness whereof the said parties have hereto subscribed their names on the days against their respective signatures mentioned.

Note.—Any embezzlement or wilful or negligent loss or destruction of any part of the ship's cargo or stores may be made good to the owner out of the wages (so far as they will extend) of the seaman guilty of the same; and if any seaman shall enter himself as qualified for a duty to which he shall prove to be not competent, he will be subject to a reduction of the rate of wages hereby agreed for in proportion to his incompetency.

Indictment for forcing seamen on shore, &c. see Forms, title "Assault," Vol. I.

Search-Warrant.

BY 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, (the Larceny Consolidation Act,) s. 63, "If any credible witness shall prove, upon oath before a justice of the peace, a reasonable cause to suspect that any person has in his possession, or on his premises, any property whatsoever, on or with respect to which any such offence (a) shall have been committed, the justice may grant a warrant to search for such property, as in the case of stolen goods; and any person, to whom any property shall be offered to be sold, pawned, or delivered, if he shall have reasonable cause to suspect that any such offence has been committed on or with respect to such property, is hereby authorized, and, if in his power, is required to apprehend and forthwith to carry before a justice of the peace the party offering the same, together with such property, to be dealt with according to law." Search-warrants.

As to felonies, this new enactment makes no alteration in the law; but as to misdemeanors, it much extends the authority of the magistrate.

There are other statutes relative to coining, having in possession naval and military stores, and to the taking of idle and disorderly persons, in order to recruit the land forces and marines, containing powers to issue search-warrants; and under the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 8, a justice may order the trunks, bundles, &c. of vagrants to be inspected; and by sect. 13, he may grant his warrant to search lodging-houses, &c. suspected to conceal vagrants. See the respective titles. Other statutes.

By stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 29, "in all cases where it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of any justice of peace in England or Ireland that there is reason to suspect and believe that property of the bankrupt is concealed in any house, premises, or other place not belonging to such bankrupt, such justice of peace is hereby directed and authorized to grant a search warrant to the person so deputed by the commissioners as aforesaid, and it shall be lawful for such person to execute the same in like manner, and such person shall be entitled to the same protection, as is allowed by law in execution of a search-warrant for property reputed to be stolen or concealed." (See Sly v. Stevenson, 2 C. & P. 464, post, 483.) In Bankruptcy.

As to the apprehension of the offenders themselves, see "Arrest," Vol. I., post, "Warrant," and the general provisions of the statutes, under titles "Larceny," and "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. III. Apprehension of offenders.

Although it hath been usual for justices to grant general warrants, to search all suspected places for stolen goods, and there is a precedent in Dalton, requiring the constable to search all such suspected places as he and the party complaining shall think convenient; yet such practice is generally condemned by the best authorities. Thus, Lord Hale, in his Summary of Pleas of the Crown, says, a general warrant to search all places for felonies or stolen goods, is not good. (Hale's Sum. 93.) Mr. Hawkins says: "I do not find any good authority, that a justice can justify sending a general warrant, to search all suspected houses in general for stolen goods: because such warrant seems to be illegal on the very face of it; for it would be extremely hard to leave it to the discretion of a common officer to arrest what persons, and search what houses, he thinks fit; and if a justice cannot legally grant a blank warrant for the arrest of a single person, leaving it to the party to fill up, surely he cannot grant such a general warrant, which might have the effect of a hundred blank warrants." (2 Haw. c. 13, s. 10, 17.) Again, Lord Hale, in his History of the Pleas of the Crown, expresseth himself thus: "I do take it, that a general warrant to search in all suspected places is not good, but only to search in such particular places where the" General warrants condemned.

(a) That is, any offence punishable by indictment under the act, for which see "Larceny," Vol. III.

Search

party assigns before the justice his suspicion, and the probable causes thereof; for these warrants are judicial acts, and must be granted upon examination of the fact." (2 Hale, 150.) "And therefore I take those general warrants dormant, which are many times made before any felony committed, are not justifiable, for it makes the party to be in effect the judge; and therefore searches made by pretence of such general warrants give no more power to the officer or party, than what they may do by law without them." (2 Hale, 150.)

As to a general warrant in the case of inspectors of weights and measures, see post "Weights and Measures."

Warrant not to
bare surmise.

Likewise, upon a bare surmise, a justice cannot make a warrant to break any man's house, to search for a felon, or for stolen goods; for the justices, being created by act of parliament, have no such authority granted to them by any act of parliament; and it would be full of inconvenience that it should be in the power of any justice of the peace, being a judge of record, upon a bare suggestion, to break the house of any person, of what state, quality, or degree soever, either in the day or night, upon such surmises. (4 Inst. 177.)

But may, on oath of suspicion.

But in the case of a complaint, and oath made of goods stolen, and that the party suspects that goods are in such house, and shows the cause of his suspicion, the justice of peace may grant a warrant to search in those suspected places mentioned in his warrant, and to attach the goods, and the party in whose custody they are found, and bring them before him, or some other justice of peace, to give an account how he came by them, and farther to abide such order as to law shall appertain. (Vide Dalt. c. 169, p. 403; 2 Hale, 113, 150; 2 Wils. 291; and see the express provisions of the above 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 63.)

However, a positive oath that a felony is actually committed, is not necessary to justify a magistrate in granting his warrant to search the premises and apprehend the person of a party suspected of felony. Else v. Smith, 1 D. & R. 97, in error; et per Abbott, C. J.:—"There are many cases in which a cautious man might not choose to swear that his property is stolen, and, nevertheless, he might have great reason to suspect a particular party, and the magistrate would be well warranted in granting his search-warrant. Suppose the case of a horse, which has been lost by its owner, and it is found in the possession of another person; the owner, in that case, might not like to take upon himself to swear that the horse has been stolen, for it might have strayed; but when he finds his horse concealed in the stable of another person, he may very naturally conclude it must have been stolen, from the circumstance of the concealment; and, therefore, he may very conscientiously swear he suspects it to have been stolen. If, under such circumstances, the magistrate is not authorized in issuing his search-warrant, it might happen, in many cases, that felonies would go undetected."

Form of warrant.

Lord Hale says, "It is fit that these warrants to search do express that search be made in the day-time; and though I will not say that they are unlawful without such restriction, yet they are very inconvenient without it; for many times, under pretence of searches made in the night, robberies and burglaries have been committed; and at best it creates great disturbances." (2 Hale, 150.)

But, in cases not of probable suspicion only, but of positive proof thereof, it is right to execute the warrant in the night-time, lest the offenders and goods also be gone before morning. (Barl. Search-War.)

Furthermore, such warrant ought to be directed to a constable, or other public officer, and not to any private person; though it is fit the party complaining should be present and assistant, because he knows his goods. (2 Hale, 150.)

It should also command, that the goods found, together with the party in whose custody they are taken, be brought before some justice of the peace, to the end that, upon further examination of the fact, the goods and the prisoner may be disposed of as the law directs. (2 Hale, 150.)

The search-warrant granted under the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 29, in bankruptcy, should not be so to any one but the messenger under the fiat. (Sly v. Stevenson, 2 C. & P. 464.)

So much for granting a search-warrant; next touching the execution of it. Execution of.

As regards the power of constables to act in any place within the jurisdiction of the justices who grant the warrant, see the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 6, tit. "Arrest," Vol. I.

Whether the stolen goods are in a suspected house or not, the officer and his assistants in the day-time may enter, the doors being open, to make search, and it is justifiable by the warrant. (2 Hale, 151; see further, "Warrant," post.)

If the door be shut, and, upon demand, it be refused to be opened by them within, if the stolen goods be in the house, the officer may break open the door. (2 Hale, 151.)

If the goods be not in the house, yet it seems the officer is excused that breaks open the door to search, because he searched by warrant, and could not know whether the goods were there till search made: but it seems that the party that made the suggestion is punishable in such case; for, as to him, the breaking of the door is, in eventu, lawful or unlawful,—to wit, lawful, if the goods are there; unlawful, if not there. (2 Hale, 151.)

The officer must strictly observe the directions of the warrant, and if he be directed to seize only stolen sugar, and seize tea, he will be a trespasser. (Price v. Messenger, 2 B. & P. 158; Bell v. Oakley, 2 M. & Sel. 261.)

So, a warrant, under the Vagrant Act, to search all suspected houses, for idle and disorderly persons, is strictly confined to persons of that description, and the officer will not be justified if he attempt to execute it in any other places than those intended by the statute. (1 Leach, 208.)

A warrant directing a search in a particular house only, would not justify a search in another.

Where a constable, having a warrant to search for specific articles alleged to have been stolen, found and took away those, and certain others supposed to have been also stolen, but which were not mentioned in the warrant, and not likely to be of use in substantiating the charge of stealing the goods that were specified, it was held that the constable was a trespasser. (Crozier v. Cundey, 9 D. & R. 224; 6 B. & C. 232.)

Where officers went with a search-warrant, and, at the desire of the party, gave it to him for his perusal, and he would not return it, it was held that they had a right to take it from him, and even to coerce his person to obtain the possession of it, provided they used no more violence than was necessary. (R. v. Mitton, 3 C. & P. 31.)

As to general search-warrants, see ante, 481.

Before noticing the various laws and regulations relative to servants, it is important to observe, that magistrates have not, as has frequently been supposed, any peculiar jurisdiction over domestic or menial servants; such jurisdiction is confined to servants in husbandry, manufacturers, journeymen, artificers, and labourers, and other such class of servants. I. Who are to serve.

Who compellable to serve by the year in husbandry. p. 173.

BY the common law, no one is compellable to serve another.

As to who may be compelled to be apprentices, see "Apprentice." Vol. I.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 7, "every person between the age of twelve years and the age of sixty years, not being lawfully retained, nor apprentice with any fisherman or mariner hunting the seas; nor being in service with any kidder or carrier of any corn, grain, or meal, for provision of the city of London, nor with any husbandman in husbandry, nor in any city, town corporate, or market-town, in any of the arts or sciences limited or appointed by this estatute to have or take apprentices; nor being retained by the year, or half the year at the least, for the digging, seeking, finding, getting, melting, fining, working, trying, making of any silver, tin, lead, iron, copper, stone, sea-coal, stone-coal, moor-coal, or chark-coal; nor being occupied in or about the making of any glass; nor being a gentleman born; nor being a student or scholar in any of the universities, or in any school; nor having lands, tenements, rents, or hereditaments, for term of life, or of one estate of inheritance of the clear yearly value of 40s.; nor being worth in goods and chattels to the value of 10*l.*; nor having a father or mother then living, or other ancestor whose heir-apparent he is, then having lands, tenements, or hereditaments of the yearly value of 10*l.* or above, or goods or chattels of the value of 40*l.*; nor being a necessary or convenient officer or servant lawfully retained as is aforesaid; nor having a convenient farm or holding whereupon he may or shall employ his labour; nor being otherwise lawfully retained according to the true meaning of this estatute: shall, after the aforesaid last day of September now next ensuing, be compelled to be retained to serve in husbandry by the year with any person that keepeth husbandry, and will require any such person so to serve within the same shire where he shall be so required."

Sect. 24. "Two justices of peace, the mayor or other head officer of any city, borough, or town corporate, and two aldermen, or two other discreet burgesses of the same city, borough, or town corporate, if there be no aldermen, shall and may, by virtue hereof, appoint any such woman as is of the age of twelve years, and under the age of forty years and unmarried, and forth of service, as they shall think meet to serve, to be retained or serve by the year, or by the week or day, for such wages, and in such reasonable sort and manner as they shall think meet; and if any such woman shall refuse so to serve, then it shall be lawful for the said justices of the peace, mayor, or head officers, to commit such woman to ward, until she shall be bounden to serve as is aforesaid."

An infant of twelve years of age shall be bound by his covenant to serve in husbandry. (2 F. N. B. 168.)

A woman of such age shall also be bound to serve in husbandry by her covenant.

If a man take an infant or other out of another's service, he shall be punished, although the infant or other were not retained.

An infant, by his covenant, shall be bound to serve in husbandry, although he may spend 40s., or twelve marks, by the year.

II. The Contract of Service, and putting an end to.

The contract of service need not be in writing, unless the retainer is by the terms of the bargain to extend beyond a year, in which case a written agreement is necessary, in reference to the 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 4. (Bracegirdle v. Heald, 1 B. & Ald. 722; Chit. junr. Contr. 456.) And it seems that a hiring for a year to commence at a future day, must be reduced into writing. (See Snelling v. Lord Huntingfield, 1 C. M. & R. 20; Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bingh. 309; 12 Moore, 652, S. C.) A consideration and sufficient mutuality must appear on the face of the written agreement, if any. (Lees v. Whitcomb, 5 Bingh. 34; 2 M. & P. 86, S. C.)

By the retainer, the servant is in service presently by the law, although he cometh not into his master's service in deed: for the retainer is the proper inchoation of the service. (Bro. Ab. Labourers, pl. 9, c. 11; Dalt. c. 58; p. 140.)

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 184, a memorandum or agreement for the hire of any labourer, artificer, manufacturer, or menial servant, is exempt from stamp duty. (See R. v. St. Paul's, Bedford, 6 T. R. 452.)

Whether or not a contract by a party to remain in the service of his employer during the life of the former, is valid, may admit of some doubt. It would seem that such a contract is not illegal, although but slight damages would probably be given for violating so improvident a bargain. (See 1 Bla. Com. 424, n. 3, by Christian; Chit. jun. on Contracts, 458.)

2. Contract of Service. Putting an end to. If a person retain a servant generally, (except in the case of a domestic or menial servant,) without expressing any time, the law shall construe it to be for one year, for that retainer is according to law; (2 Inst. 42; Burr. S. C. 299, 513; see Spain v. Arnott, 2 Stark. 257; Huttman v. Bullnois, 2 C. & P. 511;) and this it seems is applicable to servants in husbandry. (Id.) And so of clerks, warehousemen, and servants in general; and the service cannot be put an end to before the end of the current year; (Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 309; 12 Moore, 552; 2 C. & P. 607, S. C.; Fawcett v. Cash, 3 Nev. & M. 177; 5 B. & Adol. 904; Turner v. Robinson, Id. 789; 2 Nev. & M. 829; Huttman v. Bullnois, 2 C. & P. 510; Atkin v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 208;) unless upon some ground of misconduct on the part of either party, as presently noticed. (Id.)

By the general understanding on the subject, and without an express agreement or understanding to the contrary, domestic or menial servants (a), though hired by the year, are subject to be dismissed or to depart at any time on a month's notice, given by either, or a month's pay by the master. (See Fawcett v. Cash, 3 Nev. & M. 177; 5 B. & Ad. 904, per Littledale, J.; Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235; Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 326.)

In Nowlan v. Ablett, 1 Gale, 72; 2 C. M. & R. 54, S. C., a head gardener was engaged on an agreement that he should have yearly wages and a house to live in rent free. Several inferior gardeners were subject to his directions, and the house he lived in was not under the roof or a part of the master's dwelling-house. The jury having found that he was a menial servant, it was held the verdict was right, and that he was consequently liable to be discharged on a month's notice.

By express agreement, either in writing or otherwise, the hiring may be for more or less than a year.

A hiring at 6s. per week for the winter, and 9s. per week for the summer, is not a yearly hiring. (R. v. Inhabitants of Warminster, 6 B. & C. 77; 9 D. & R. 70, S. C.) And as to quarterly payments being evidence of a quarterly hiring, see Collins v. Price, 5 Bing. 132; 2 Moo. & P. 233.

Proof that the servant was to have wages "at the rate of" 80l. per annum, has been held sufficient presumptive proof of the hiring being for a year. (Turner v. Robinson, 2 Nev. & M. 829; 5 B. & Ad. 789.)

A quarter's warning to be given to husbandry servants, unless reasonable cause against it.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 5, 6, (many of the provisions of which are repealed by the 49 Geo. III. c. 109, see "Apprentices," Vol. I.) no person which shall retain any servant shall put away his said servant, and no person retained according to this statute shall depart, before the end of his term, unless it be for some reasonable cause, to be allowed before one justice, or mayor or other chief officer, of the town corporate wherein the master inhabiteth, to whom the party grieved shall complain: and no master shall put away any such servant at the end of his term, nor shall any such servant depart at the end of his term, without one quarter's warning, on pain hereafter ensuing.

But the power of the justices under this act is confined to servants employed in husbandry. (R. v. Inhabitants of Hulcot, 6 T. R. 583.)

Implied promise to obey commands.

The servant impliedly promises to obey the lawful and reasonable commands of his master within the scope of the services contracted for. (Per Cur. in R. v. St. John, Devizes, 4 Man. & Ry. 681; 9 B. & Cres. 900, 901.)

Putting an end to service for misconduct.

In all cases except apprenticeships in general, (Winstone v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 460; 2 D. & R. 465, S. C.), if either party be guilty of misconduct towards the other, or, in other words, if he break the contract of hiring,

(a) "Menials, or menial servants (a derivative from mœnia, signifying the walls of a house, or other place), are household servants, such as live within the walls of their master's house, mentioned in the stat. 2 Hen. IV. c. 21," — Cowell's Law Dict. By the stat. 2 Hen. IV. c. 7, the giving of liveries is prohibited, "save that the king shall give only his honourable livery to his lords temporal who shall please him, and also to his knights, and esquires menial, and which be of his retinue, and do take of him their yearly fee for term of life;" and by c. 21, it is enacted, that the "prince may give his honourable livery (a swan) to his menial gentlemen." (1 Gale, 72, n.)

the other may put an end thereto and the service. But he must, it should seem, put an end thereto within a reasonable time after the misconduct, and not waive the right to put an end to it by any delay.

2. Contract of Service. Putting an end to.

As to what shall amount to sufficient misconduct for this purpose, must depend on the particular circumstances of each case. The servant, as already observed, impliedly contracts to obey the lawful and reasonable orders of his master within the scope of the services contracted for.

In the case of Spain v. Arnott, Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., at N. P., held, that if a servant hired for a year refuse to obey his master's orders, the master is justified in dismissing him before the end of the year, and the servant cannot recover any wages. (Spain v. Arnott, 2 Stark. N. P. 256.) This was an action brought by the plaintiff to recover wages for his service from Michaelmas to July. The plaintiff was a yearly servant to the defendant, who was a farmer. The plaintiff usually breakfasted at five o'clock in the morning, and dined at two. One day the master ordered the servant to go with the horses to the marsh, which was a mile off, before dinner, dinner being then ready. The plaintiff said, that he had done his due, and would not go till he had had his dinner: the defendant told him to go about his business, and the plaintiff went accordingly, without offering any submission, or to obey his master's orders. On the part of the defendant, it was contended, that the action was not maintainable, since the contract was a year's service in husbandry, which had not been performed. Scarlett, for the plaintiff, contended that, if the master had had any reason to complain of the conduct of the servant, he ought to have complained to a magistrate for relief. That the master could not, by turning the servant away before the completion of the year, dissolve the contract, and bereave him of his wages; it would be exceedingly hard if he could, for then he might put an end to the contract on the very last day. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J.: "If the contract be for a year's service, the year must be completed before the servant is entitled to be paid. If the plaintiff persisted in refusing to obey his master's orders, I think he was warranted in turning him away. He might have obtained relief by applying to a magistrate; but he was not bound to pursue that course, the relation between master and servant, and the laws by which that relation is regulated, existed long before that statute. There is no contract between the parties, excepting that which the law makes for them; and it may be hard upon the servant, but it would be exceedingly inconvenient if the servant were to be permitted to set himself up to controul his master in his domestic regulations, such as the time of dinner. After a refusal on the part of the servant to perform his work, the master is not bound to keep him on, as a burdensome and useless servant, to the end of the year. In the present instance, it might be very convenient for the master to change the hour of dinner: the question really comes to this—whether the master or the servant is to have the superior authority?"—A juror was afterwards withdrawn by consent.

Disobeying orders.

Where a courier or valet drove the plaintiff's family to an hotel where he had been desired not to stop, and had been occasionally sulky and negligent and once insolent in his manner, it was considered a sufficient ground for dismissing him. (Callo v. Brouncker, 4 C. & P. 518.)

Sulky and negligent.

A servant betraying the secrets of his master would be guilty of misconduct, for which he might be discharged. (See per Best, C. J., in Beeston v. Collyer, 2 C. & P. 609.)

Betraying secrets.

Being absent when wanted, sleeping from home at night repeatedly without his master's leave, &c., is a sufficient cause for dismissal. (Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235; and see Crawford v. Reid, 1 Show. P. C. 124.)

Absence.

Where a clerk and traveller, hired by the year, assaulted his employer's maid servant, with intent to take liberties with her against her consent, it was held to be a good cause of immediate dismissal. (Atkin v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 208.)

Assaulting female servant.

In the case of R. v. Brampton, Cald. 11, the principal question was, whether a maid servant hired for a year could be discharged by her master three weeks before the end of the year (she being with child), by his own authority, without the intervention of a magistrate, so as to prevent her gaining a settlement. By Ld. Mansfield, C. J.: "The question is, has the master done right or wrong in discharging his servant for this cause? I think he did not do wrong. Shall the master be bound to keep her in his house? To do so would be contra bonos mores; and, in a family where there are young persons, both scandalous and dangerous." Willes, J., said, that "This case differs from those of R. v. Richmond, Burr. S. C. 740, and R. v. Islip, 1 Str. 423 (see "Poor, Settlement by Service, Vol. IV.), where the cause of the discharge of the servant by the master was not reasonable. Here, if the master had daughters, it would not be fit that he should keep such a servant, though I think he could not avail himself of the authority of a magistrate, the jurisdiction of justices being confined to cases in husbandry" (a).

Being with child.

2. Contract of Service. Putting an end to.

Alleged criminality.

Where the master discharged a yearly servant on account of a supposed criminal intimacy with a servant girl, who had previously left the service big with child, the Court of King's Bench seemed clear, that if the criminality had really existed, the case would have come within the principle of the above case of R. v. Brampton. (R. v. Welford, Cald. 57.)

Previous immorality.

But in R. v. Westmeon, Cald. 129, it was said by Ld. Mansfield, C. J., that the servant being the father of a bastard child, prior to the master's hiring him, and the crime not committed when in his own house, the master shall not discharge him under this pretence: it is not a debauching of his servant, or turning his house as it were into a brothel.

When a magistrate discharges a labouring or other such servant from the service of his master, it must appear on the face of the order itself to be a case within the jurisdiction of the magistrate. (R. v. Hulcott, 6 T. R. 583.)

Insanity.

It does not appear to be settled whether the insanity of a servant be a good cause for discharging him. In R. v. Sutton, 5 T. R. 659, Ld. Kenyon, C. J., appeared to be of opinion that insanity was not a legal cause for discharging a servant; but this opinion being cited and relied upon in a subsequent case (R. v. Inh. of Hulcott, 6 T. R. 587), his lordship said, "I am not prepared to go that length; in that case there had been no application to a magistrate to discharge, and I think that the master could not of his own authority discharge the servant for that cause."

(a) Upon which case Mr. Caldecott observes, that all that seems established by this case is, that a master may, without the intervention of a magistrate, dismiss his servant for moral turpitude, even though it be not such for which the servant may be prosecuted at common law. Whether he may or not for any other species of misconduct or general misbehaviour, though there are authorities to show that he cannot, seems, from this case, not to be fully and absolutely settled. By the general practice throughout the kingdom, and particularly in large towns, this power, however warranted, is exercised by masters; certainly, this question has not of late years been brought before the court for argument, except in the case of Burrow v. Sayer, T. T. 27 Geo. II. But at the sittings at Westminster, 1773, it arose before Ld. Mansfield. A wet-nurse retained for the year, was discharged by her mistress, who tendered her her wages in proportion to the time she had served: this was refused, and the action brought for the whole year. It was proved, on behalf of the defendant, that the plaintiff had been frequently insolent to her mistress, the defendant's wife; and was subject to violent fits of passion, in which she had several times frightened, and once awakened her mistress while sleeping, before her recovery. It was also proved, that these fits of passion must be injurious to her milk; and it was insisted, that all these circumstances amounted to reasonable cause, and even created a necessity, of discharging the plaintiff. But, per Ld. Mansfield, "No person can be judge in his own cause; and this first principle could never be meant to be overturned by any law or usage whatsoever;" and though it was stated as the general usage or practice in London, Westminster, and the environs, to dismiss servants with a month's wages, it was disregarded by the court, and the servant had a verdict for the whole year. Temple v. Prescott. But see, ante, 487—post, 492, as to this latter doctrine.

A servant's marrying is no reasonable cause for discharge, for it is not a 3. Wages of misdemeanor, and nothing else is a cause. (Com. Dig. tit. "Justices of Domestic, Peace," (B. 63.) Sed quære as to nothing else being a cause. See ante, 490.) Clerks, &c.

If a woman who is a servant shall marry, yet she must serve out her time, and her husband cannot take her out of her master's service. (Dalt. c. 58; Wood's Inst. b. 1, c. 6.) Servants marrying.

If a married man and his wife do bind themselves to serve, they shall be compelled to serve according to their covenant or agreement. (Dalt. c. 58.)

If a servant retained for a year happen within the time of his service to fall sick, or to be hurt or disabled by the act of God, or in doing his master's business, yet the master must not, therefore, put such servant away, nor abate any part of his wages for such time. (Dalt. c. 58, p. 141; see further Chandler v. Grieves, 2 H. Bla. 606; R. v. Winter, Dalt. Cald. 298.) Sickness.

Sickness does not put an end to the service on the part of the servant, neither does it authorize the master to put him away. (Per Le Blanc, J., R. v. Sudbrooke, 1 Smith's Rep. 59.)

As to the liability to pay the doctor's bill, see post, 492.

A servant's embezzling his master's property, is a good ground for dismissal. (Brown v. Croft, Chit. Gen. Prac. 81.) Embezzlement.

A game-keeper guilty of disobedience, may be discharged as other servants, and his residence in a house by permission of the lord of a manor is lawful only whilst he is game-keeper. (Litt. Rep. 139; 16 East, 33.) Gamekeeper, &c., holding a house.

It may be observed that one of two partners, joint-tenants of a house where their joint business is carried on, has a right to authorize a joint-weekly servant to remain in the house, though the other partner has regularly given him a week's notice to leave his service. (Donaldson v. Williams, 1 C. & M. 345.) Partnerships.

We have already seen that a domestic or menial servant may be dismissed at any time, on giving him a month's warning, or a month's pay; ante, 488. Domestic servant may be dismissed without cause, &c.

The bankruptcy of the parties does not operate as a dissolution of the contract of service, and the certificate of the master under it discharges only from wages provable under the commission. (See Thomas v. Williams, 1 Ad. & Ell. 685. See the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 48, as to the payment of clerks and servants' wages in case of bankruptcy; and Ex p. Gough, 1 Mon. & B. 417; Ex p. Humphreys, Id. 413; Ex p. Skinner, Id. 417; and cases there cited.) Bankruptcy of master.

III. Wages of Domestic Servants, Clerks, &c.

The amount of wages of domestic servants, clerks, and others, is regulated by the contract entered into by them. Wages of domestics and others.

"It is clearly agreed that if a person retain a servant and agree to pay him so much by the day, month, or year, that the servant may have an action against the master on the contract, or against his executors, and that every such retainer will be presumed to be in consideration of wages, unless the contrary appear." (Bac. Ab. Master and Servant (n.); Pinchon's case, 9 Co. 88, a. b.; Sands v. Leake, 2 Roll. Rep. 269.)

But if there be no express or implied agreement for wages, as if the servant merely came on trial, or the like, he can claim none.

And in Alfred v. Fitzjames, 3 Esp. 3, it was held that a servant who comes over from the West Indies, where he had been a slave, and who continues in the service of his master in England, is not entitled to wages without an express agreement; and see Wilkins v. Wells, 2 C. & P. 231; Osborn v. Governors of Guy's Hospital, Stra. 728; Le Sage v. Coussmaker, 1 Esp. R. 188.

So, if A. agrees to serve B. as an apothecary's assistant at such salary as C. should think reasonable, and it appear that no application had been made to C. to fix any salary, A. cannot recover any thing for his services in an action for work and labour. (Owen v. Bowen, 4 C. & P., C. N. P. 93; and see Taylor v. Brewer, 1 M. & Sel. 290; Jewry v. Busk, 5 Taunt. 302; Osborn v. Governors of Guy's Hospital, Stra. 728; Le Sage v. Coussmaker, 1 Esp. 188.)

A domestic servant, hired in the general way, is entitled to his wages up to the time he serves, though he do not continue in the service, either from misconduct or otherwise, during the whole year; for such is the general understanding on the subject. (See Cutler v. Powell, 6 T. R. 326; admitted by Lord Kenyon in Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235; 2 Selw. N. P. 1032.)

But this does not apply to clerks, warehousemen, and other servants, who must in general serve, or be ready and offer to serve, during the whole time of their engagement, whether by the year or otherwise; and if they do not, they are not entitled to wages not accrued due during the time of service or afterwards, for an entire contract cannot be apportioned. (Turner v. Robinson, 6 C. & P. 15; 5 B. & Ad. 789, S. C.; Huttman v. Bullnois, 2 C. & P. 510; per Ld. Ellenborough, 2 Stark. 256; and Atkin v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 208; Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235; and see Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 323, 326, as to death.)

In R. v. Whittlebury, 6 T. R. 467, Lawrence, J., says, "No money is due from the master to the servant until the completion of the year or the end of the service."

If the clerk or servant be improperly dismissed before the end of the year or other time of his hiring, he may, on showing his readiness to complete the service, recover wages for the full time of his hiring, on pleadings properly framed. (See Archer v. Horner, 3 C. & P. 349; Gandell v. Pontigny, 4 Camp. 375; 1 Stark. 198, S. C.; Collins v. Price, 2 M. & P. 233; 5 Bingham. 132, S. C.)

In Dalt. c. 58, p. 141, Com. Dig. Justices, (B. 63,) it is said, that if a servant (id est, a labourer, &c.) of his own accord shall depart from his master before his time expire, he shall lose all his wages. But if he depart with the consent of his master, he shall have his wages for the time he served.

Sickness.

A servant incapacitated from actual service during part of the time of his living, by sickness, is still entitled to wages during that period. (Ante, 491.)

But a master is not bound to provide a domestic or other servant with medical attendance and medicines during sickness; but if a servant fall sick, and the master call in his own medical man to attend such servant, or otherwise render himself liable, the master will be liable, and cannot deduct the charges for such medical attendance out of the servant's wages, unless there be a special contract between the master and servant to that effect. (Sellon v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80; and see Cooper v. Phillips, Id. 581; Newby v. Wiltshire, 2 Esp. 739; Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 247; Watling v. Walters, 1 C. & P. 132; sed vide Scarman v. Castell, 1 Esp. 91.)

Breakages.

Against the claim for wages, the master cannot, without an express agreement to that effect, set off the value of goods lost or broken by the servant's carelessness, however gross. (See Le Loir v. Bristow, 4 Camp. 134.) The master's remedy, in such case, would be by cross action.

Clothes.

A servant, engaged at thirty guineas a year and a suit of clothes, was provided with a livery suit on his entering into the service. He was wrongfully turned away in the year: held, he could not maintain trover for the suit of clothes. (Crocker v. Molyneux, 3 C. & P. 470; and see Archard v. Hornor, Id. 349.)

Presumed payment.

If a servant has left his service for a considerable time, without claiming wages, the presumption is, that all his wages have been paid. (Sellon v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80.) And in a case cited in 4 C. & P. 81, n., tried some time back at Guildhall, which was an action by a workman at a sugar-refiner's, a witness proved that the plaintiff had worked there for more than two years. But Abbott, C. J., said that he should direct the jury to presume that men employed in that way were regularly paid every Saturday night, unless some evidence was given on the part of the plaintiff to satisfy the jury that the plaintiff had, in point of fact, never been paid; and, as no such evidence was produced, the plaintiff was nonsuited. (And see 3 Camp. 10; 1 Stark. 136.)

4. Wages of Artificers, Labourers, &c.

IV. Wages of Artificers, Labourers, &c.

Amount of.]—By the 53 Geo. III. c. 40, after reciting the several acts of 5 Eliz. c. 4, 1 Jac. I. c. 6, and the Scotch acts of the twenty-second parliament of Jac. I. and the first parliament of Car. II., and that it is expedient that the powers given by the said acts, and by various other acts passed in the parliaments of Scotland, to justices of the peace and magistrates of cities and boroughs, to rate wages or fix prices for work, for artificers, labourers, and craftsmen, should be repealed: it is therefore enacted, “that so much of the said recited acts, and of each of them, or of any other act of parliament in force in Scotland, as authorizes and empowers any justices of the peace or magistrates of cities and burghs to rate wages or fix prices of work for artificers, labourers, and craftsmen, shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and all orders heretofore made by any justice or justices of the peace or magistrates, in England or Scotland respectively, under the authority of the said recited acts, or any or either of them, for or in relation to the rating any wages, or settling or fixing any prices of work to be done or performed by any artificers, labourers or craftsmen, or servants, shall be and the same are hereby declared to be void and of none effect; any thing in the said acts, or any or either of them, to the contrary notwithstanding.”

Empowering magistrates to fix wages, repealed.

Orders made by magistrates under such acts, repealed.

The amount of such servants' wages, therefore, remains regulated as at common law, viz. by the agreement between the parties.

Mode of paying the wages of artificers, labourers, &c.]—By the 1 & 2 Wil. IV. c. 36, intituled “An Act to repeal several Acts and Parts of Acts prohibiting the Payment of Wages in Goods, or otherwise than in the current Coin of the Realm,” [15th October, 1831,] reciting that, “By certain provisions contained in an act of parliament passed in the fourth year of the reign of king Edward the Fourth, intituled ‘An Act for improving the Manufacture of Cloths, and preventing the Importation thereof;’ and by certain provisions of an act passed in the eighth year of the reign of queen Elizabeth, intituled ‘An Act touching Drapers, Cottoners, and Frizers in the Town of Shrewsbury:’ and whereas by certain provisions of an act of parliament passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of queen Elizabeth, intituled ‘An Act for the Repeal of a Statute made Anno Octavo of the Queen's Majesty's Reign, touching the Town of Shrewsbury;’ and by certain provisions of an act passed in the first year of the reign of her late majesty queen Anne, intituled ‘An Act for the more effectual preventing the Abuses and Frauds of Persons employed in the working up the Woollen, Linen, Fustian, Cotton, and Iron Manufactures of this Kingdom;’ and by certain other provisions of an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of her said late majesty queen Anne, intituled ‘An Act for reviving and continuing an Act made in the First Year of Her Majesty's Reign, for the more effectual preventing Abuses and Frauds of Persons employed in the working up the Woollen, Linen, Fustian, Cotton, and Iron Manufactures of this Kingdom;’ and by certain other provisions of an act passed in the tenth year of the reign of her said late majesty queen Anne, intituled ‘An Act for regulating, improving, and encouraging the Woollen Manufacture of Mixed and Medley Broad Cloth, and for the better payment of the Poor employed therein;’ and by certain other provisions of an act passed in the first year of the reign of his late majesty king George the first, intituled ‘An Act to make an Act of the Tenth Year of

Sect. 3. "The entire amount of the wages earned by or payable to any artificer in any of the trades hereinafter enumerated, in respect of any labour by him done in any such trade, shall be actually paid to such artificer in the current coin of this realm, and not otherwise; and every payment made to any such artificer by his employer, of or in respect of any such wages, by the delivering to him of goods, or otherwise than in the current coin aforesaid, except as hereinafter mentioned, shall be and is hereby declared illegal, null, and void."

Sect. 4. "Every artificer in any of the trades hereinafter enumerated shall be entitled to recover from his employer in any such trade, in the manner by law provided for the recovery of servants' wages, or by any other lawful ways and means, the whole or so much of the wages earned by such artificer in such trade as shall not have been actually paid to him by such his employer in the current coin of this realm."

Sect. 5. "In any action, suit, or other proceeding to be hereafter brought or commenced by any such artificer as aforesaid, against his employer, for the recovery of any sum of money due to any such artificer as the wages of his labour in any of the trades hereinafter enumerated, the defendant shall not be allowed to make any set-off, nor to claim any reduction of the plaintiff's demand, by reason or in respect of any goods, wares, or merchandise had or received by the plaintiff as or on account of his wages or in reward for his labour, or by reason or in respect of any goods, wares, or merchandise sold, delivered, or supplied to such artificer at any shop or warehouse kept by or belonging to such employer, or in the profits of which such employer shall have any share or interest."

Sect. 6. "No employer of any artificer in any of the trades hereinafter enumerated shall have or be entitled to maintain any suit or action in any court of law or equity against any such artificer, for or in respect of any goods, wares, or merchandise sold, delivered, or supplied to any such artificer by any such employer, whilst in his employment, as or on account of his wages or reward for his labour, or for or in respect of any goods, wares, or merchandise sold, delivered, or supplied to such artificer at any shop or warehouse kept by or belonging to such employer, or in the profits of which such employer shall have any share or interest."

Sect. 7. "If any such artificer as aforesaid, or his wife or widow, or if any child of any such artificer, not being of the full age of twenty-one years, shall become chargeable to any parish or place, and if within the space of three calendar months next before the time when any such charge shall be incurred such artificer shall have earned or have become entitled to receive any wages for any labour by him done in any of the said trades, which wages shall not have been paid to such artificer in the current coin of this realm, it shall be lawful for the overseers or overseer of the poor in such parish or place to recover from the employer of such artificer in whose service such labour was done the full amount of wages so unpaid, and to proceed for the recovery thereof by all such ways and means as such artificer himself might have proceeded for that purpose; and the amount of the wages which may be so recovered shall be applied in reimbursing such parish or place all costs and charges incurred in respect of the person or persons to become chargeable, and the surplus shall be applied and paid over to such person or persons."

Sect. 8. "Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent or to render invalid any contract for the payment, or any actual payment, to any such artificer as aforesaid, of the whole or any part of his wages, either in the notes of the governor and company of the bank of England, or in the notes of any person or persons carrying on the business of a banker, and duly licensed to issue such notes in pursuance of the laws relating to his majesty's revenue of stamps, or in drafts or orders for the payment of money to the bearer on demand, drawn upon any person or persons carrying on the business of a banker, being duly licensed as aforesaid, within fifteen miles of the place where such drafts or orders shall be so paid, if such artificer shall be freely consenting to receive such drafts or orders as aforesaid, but all payments so made with such consent as aforesaid, in any such notes, drafts, or orders as aforesaid, shall for the purposes of this act be as valid and effectual as if such payments had been made in the current coin of the realm."

Power to levy penalties by distress (a).

Sect. 12. "All justices of the peace shall and are hereby empowered, on the conviction of any person or persons for any offence against this act, in default of payment of any penalty or forfeiture, together with the reasonable costs and charges attending such conviction, to cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant or warrants under the hands and seals of such justices, together with the reasonable costs of such distress and sale; and in case it shall appear to the satisfaction of such justices, either by the confession of the offender or offenders or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, that he, she, or they hath not or have not goods and chattels within the jurisdiction of such justices sufficient whereon to levy all such penalties and forfeitures, costs and charges, such justices may, without issuing any warrant of distress, commit the offender or offenders to the common gaol for three calendar months (unless the same be sooner paid), in such manner as if a warrant of distress had been issued, and a return of nulla bona made thereon."

Commitment (b).

A partner not to be liable in person for the offence of his co-partner, but the partnership property to be so liable.

Sect. 13. "No person shall be liable to be convicted of any offence against this act committed by his or her copartner in trade, and without his or her knowledge, privity, or consent; but it shall be lawful, when any penalty, or any sum for wages, or any other sum, is ordered to be paid, under the authority of this act, and the person or persons ordered to pay the same shall neglect or refuse to do so, to levy the same by distress and sale of any goods belonging to any copartnership concern or business in the carrying on of which such charges may have become due or such offence may have been committed; and in all proceedings under this act to recover any sum due for wages it shall be lawful in all cases of copartnership for the justices, at the hearing of any complaint for the nonpayment thereof, to make an order upon any one or more copartners for the payment of the sum appearing to be due; and in such case the service of a copy of any summons or

Sect. 15. "The justices before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against this act, or by whom any person shall be committed to the common gaol, in default of a sufficient distress, or for not appearing as a witness or not submitting to be examined, shall cause all such convictions, and the summonses for the attendance of witnesses, and the warrants or orders for such commitments, and the warrant or order for any such distress, to be drawn up in the form or to the effect set forth in the schedule to this act annexed, with such additions or variations as may be necessary for adapting the same to the particular circumstances of the case."

Form of conviction and other proceedings (a).

Sect. 16. "The justices before whom any conviction shall be had under this act shall cause the same to be returned to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace holden for the county or place wherein the offence shall have been committed, and the same shall then and there be delivered to the clerk of the peace, or other person acting as such, to be by him filed among the records of the said court; and such clerk of the peace, or other person acting as such, is hereby required, on the tender and payment to him of the sum of one shilling, to grant to any person or persons, on demand, a copy of any such conviction, with a certificate thereupon indorsed or thereunto annexed, that the same is a true and accurate copy of the original conviction returned to such general or quarter sessions as aforesaid."

Justices to return convictions to clerk of peace, who is to deliver copies to persons applying.

Sect. 17. "No conviction, order, or adjudication made by any justices of the peace under the provisions of this act shall be quashed for want of form, nor be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any of his majesty's superior courts of record; and no warrant of distress, or of commitments in default of sufficient distress, shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same."

Convictions not to be quashed for want of form (b).

Sect. 18. "Out of any penalty or forfeiture incurred by any offence committed against this act it shall be lawful for the court or justices imposing the same to award any sum to the informer, not exceeding in any case the sum of twenty pounds; and the rest of any such pecuniary penalty or forfeiture shall go to the treasurer of the county in which the offence shall be committed, in aid of the rates of such county: provided always, that every proceeding whatsoever for any offence against this act shall be commenced within three calendar months after such offence shall have been committed."

and dinner; upon pain to lose and forfeit one penny for every hour's absence, to be deducted and defaulted out of his wages that shall so offend."

Sect. 13. "Every artificer and labourer that shall be lawfully retained in and for the building or repairing of any church, house, ship, mill, or every other piece of work taken in great, in task, or in gross, or that shall hereafter take upon him to make or finish any such thing or work, shall continue and not depart from the same, unless it be for not paying of his wages or hire agreed on, or otherwise lawfully taken or appointed to serve the queen's majesty, her heirs, or successors, or for other lawful cause, or without licence of the master or owner of the work, or of him that hath the charge thereof, before the finishing of the said work; upon pain of imprisonment by one month, without bail or mainprize; and the forfeiture of the sum of 5*l.* to the party from whom he shall so depart; for the which the said party may have his action of debt against him that shall so depart, in any of the queen's majesty's courts of record, over and besides such ordinary costs and damages as may or ought to be recovered by the common laws, for or concerning any such offence: in which action no protection, wager of law, or essoin, shall be admitted."

VI. Working in Harvest.

Artificers compellable to work in hay-time and harvest.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 22, "in the time of hay or corn harvest, the justices of peace, and every of them, and also the constable, or other head officer of every township upon request, and for the avoiding of the loss of any corn, grain, or hay, shall and may cause all such artificers and persons as be meet to labour, by the discretions of the said justices or constables, or other head officers, or by any of them, to serve by the day for the mowing, reaping, shearing, getting, or inning of corn, grain, and hay, according to the skill and quality of the person; and that none of the said persons shall refuse so to do, upon pain to suffer imprisonment in the stocks by the space of two days and one night: and the constable of the town, or other head officer of the same, where the said refusal shall be made, upon complaint to him made, shall have authority, by virtue hereof, to set the said offender in the stocks for the time aforesaid, and shall punish him accordingly, upon pain to lose and forfeit for not doing thereof the sum of 40*s.*"

A proviso for some that go into other shires for work in hay-time and harvest.

Sect. 23. "All persons of the counties where they have accustomed to go into other shires for harvest-work, and having, at that time, no harvest-work sufficient in the same town or county where he or they dwelt in the winter then last past, bringing with him or them a testimonial, under the hand and seal of one justice of the peace of the shire, or other head officer of the town or place that he or they come from, testifying the same, for the which he shall pay not above one peny* (other than such persons as shall be retained in service, according to the form of this estatute), may repair and resort in harvest of hay or corn, from the counties wherein their dwelling-places are, into any other place or county, for the only mowing, reaping, and getting of hay, corn, or grain, and for the only working of harvest-works, as they might have done before the making of the estatute; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Persons going to work in harvest.

By 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 3, "that (this act notwithstanding) it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons to go into any county, parish, or place, to work in time of harvest, or at any time to work at any other work, so that he or they carry with him or them a certificate from the minister of the parish, and one of the churchwardens and one of the overseers for the poor for the said year, that he or they have a dwelling-house or place in which he or they inhabit, and hath left wife and children, or some of them there (or otherwise, as the condition of the persons shall require), and is declared an inhabitant or inhabitants there; and, in such case, if the person or persons shall not return to the place aforesaid, when his or their work is finished, or shall fall sick or impotent whilst he or they are in the said work, it shall not be accounted a settlement in the cases abovesaid, but that it shall and may be lawful for two justices of the peace to convey the said person or persons to the place of his or their habitation as aforesaid, under the pains and penalties in this act prescribed; and if such person or persons shall refuse to go, or shall not remain in such parish where they ought to be settled as aforesaid, but shall return, of his own accord, to the parish from whence he was removed, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace of the city, county, or town corporate, where the said offence shall be committed, to send such person or persons offending to the house of correction, there to be punished as a vagabond, or to a public work-house in this present act hereafter mentioned, there to be employed in work or labour: and if the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish to which he or they shall be removed, refuse to receive such person or persons, and to provide work for them, as other inhabitants of the parish, any justice of peace of that division may and shall thereupon bind any such officer or officers in whom there shall be default, to the assizes or sessions, there to be indicted for his or their contempt in that behalf."

7. *Improperly Serving, or putting an of Labourers,

&c.*

VII. Improperly Serving, or putting an End to Service of Labourers, &c.

We have already seen how far domestic servants and others are entitled to wages, or actions in case of their improper dismissal, ante, 487 to 493.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 8, "if any person, after he hath retained any servant (viz. in husbandry, &c., see, ante, p. 486), shall put away the same servant before the end of his term, unless it be for some reasonable and sufficient cause, to be allowed as is aforesaid, (viz. sect. 5, ante, 488); or if any such master, mistress, or dame shall put away any such servant at the end of his time, without one quarter's warning given before the said end, as is above remembered, that then every such master, mistress, or dame so offending, unless he or they be able to prove by two sufficient witnesses such reasonable and sufficient cause of putting away their servant or servants during their term, or a quarter's warning given afore the end of the said term as is aforesaid, before the justices of oyer and terminer, justices of assize, justices of peace in the quarter sessions, or before the mayor or other head officer of any city, borough, or town corporate, and two aldermen, or two other discreet burgesses of the same city, borough, or town corporate, if there be no aldermen, or before the lord president and council established in the marches of Wales, or before the lord president and council for the time being established in the north parts, shall forfeit the sum of 40s."

Penalty for putting away servant within his term, or at the end of term without warning.

Sect. 9. "If any servant retained according to the form of this estatute, depart from his master, mistress, or dame's service, before the end of his term, unless it be for some reasonable and sufficient cause to be allowed as is aforesaid; or if any servant at the end of his term depart from his said master, mistress, or dame's service without one quarter's warning given before the end of his said term, in form aforesaid, and before two lawful witnesses; or if any person or persons compellable and bounden to be retained, and to serve in husbandry, or in any other the arts, sciences, or mysteries above remembered, by the year or otherwise, do (upon request made) refuse to serve for the wages that shall be limited, rated, and appointed, according to the form of this statute, or the promise or covenant to serve, and do not serve according to the tenor of the same; that then every servant so departing away, and every person so refusing to serve for such wages, upon complaint thereof made by the master, mistress, or dame of the said servant, or by the party to or with whom the said refusal is made, or promise not kept, to two justices of peace of the county, or to the mayor, or other head officer of the city, borough, or town corporate, and two aldermen, or two other discreet burgesses of the same city, borough, or town corporate, if there

Sect. 39. "The one-half of all forfeitures and penalties, expressed and mentioned in this estatute, other than such as are expressly otherwise appointed, shall be to our sovereign lady the queen's majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other moiety to him or them that shall sue for the same in any of the queen's majesty's courts of record, or before any of the justices of oyer and terminer, or before any other justices, or president and council before remembered, by action of debt, information, bill of complaint, or otherwise; in which actions or suits, no protection, wager of law, or essoin shall be allowed; and that the said justices, or two of them, whereof one to be of the quorum, and the said presidents and council, as is aforesaid, and the said mayors or other head officers of cities or towns corporate, shall have full power and authority to hear and determine all and every offence and offences that shall be committed or done against this estatute, or against any branch thereof, as well upon indictment to be taken before them in the sessions of the peace, as upon information, action of debt, or bill of complaint to be sued or exhibited by any person; and shall and may by virtue hereof make process against the defendant, and award execution, as in any other case they lawfully may by any the laws and statutes of this realm; and shall yearly in Michaelmas Term certify, by estreat, the fines and forfeitures of every the offences contained in this estatute, that shall be found before them, into the Court of Exchequer, in like sort and form as they be bound to certify the estreats for other offences and forfeitures to be lost before them; any thing in this statute contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 45. "All manner* amerciaments, fines, issues, and forfeitures which shall arise, grow, or come by reason of any offences or defaults mentioned in this act, or any branch thereof, within any city or town corporate, shall be levied, gathered, and received by such person or persons of the same city or town corporate, as shall be appointed by the mayor or other head officers mentioned in this act, to the use and maintenance of the same city or town corporate, in such case and condition as any manner other amerciaments, fines, issues, or forfeitures have been used to be levied and employed within the same city or town corporate, by reason of any grant or charter from the queen's majesty that now is, or of any her grace's noble progenitors, made and granted to the same city, borough, or town corporate; any thing or clause before mentioned and expressed in this act to the contrary notwithstanding."

VIII. Testimonials on Labourers, &c. quitting Service.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4. s. 10, "None of the said (ante, sec. 7, p. 486) retained persons in husbandry, or in any the arts or sciences above remembered, after the time of his retainer expired, shall depart forth of one city, town, or parish, to another, nor out of the lath, rape, wapentake, or hundred, nor out of the county or shire where he last served, to serve in any other city, town corporate, lath, rape, wapentake, hundred, shire, or county, unless he have a testimonial under the seal of the said city or town corporate, or of the constable or constables, or other head officer or officers, and of two other honest householders of the city, town, or parish where he last served, declaring his lawful departure, and the name of the shire and place where he dwelled last before his departure, according to the form hereafter expressed in this act; which certificate or testimonial shall be written and delivered unto the said servant, and also registered by the parson, vicar, or curate of the parish where such master, mistress, or dame doth or shall dwell, taking for the doing thereof 2*d.*, and not above; and the form thereof shall be as followeth:

“Memorandum, that A. B., late servant to C. D., of E., [husbandman, or, tailor, &c.] in the county, is licensed to depart from his said master, and is at liberty to serve elsewhere, according to the statute in that case made and provided. In witness whereof, &c. Dated the” [day, month, year, and place, &c., of the making thereof].

Form of testimonial.

Sect. 11. “No person or persons that shall depart out of a service, shall be retained or accepted into any other service, without showing, before his retainer, such testimonial as is above remembered, to the chief officer of the town corporate, and in every other town and place, to the constable, curate, churchwarden, or other head officer of the same, where he shall be retained to serve, upon the pain that every such servant so departing without such certificate of testimonial, shall be imprisoned until he procure a testimonial or certificate, the which if he cannot do within the space of one-and-twenty days next after the first day of his imprisonment, then the said person to be whipped and used as a vagabond according to the laws in such cases provided; and that every person retaining any such servant without showing such testimonial or certificate as is aforesaid, shall forfeit for every such offence 5*l.*; and if any such person shall be taken with any counterfeit or forged testimonial, then to be whipped as a vagabond.”

No servant shall be retained without showing his testimonial.

By the common law, if a man retained another man's servant, not knowing that he was retained with him, this ignorance excused him of the offence; but now the master may and must take notice whether such servant hath a testimonial or no; otherwise, if he hath no testimonial, such master is liable by the statute to the penalty of 5*l.* (D. & St. 256.)

IX. Labourers, &c., Fleeing into another Shire.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 47, it is enacted, “that* if any servant or apprentice of husbandry, or of any art, science, or occupation aforesaid, unlawfully depart or flee into any other shire, that* it shall be lawful to the said justices of peace, and to the said mayors, bailiffs, and other head officers of cities and towns corporate, for the time being justices of peace there, to make and grant writs of capias, so many, and such as shall be needful, to be directed to the sheriffs of the counties, or to other head officers of the places whither such servants or apprentices shall so depart or flee, to take their bodies, returnable before them at what time shall please them; so that, if they come by such process, that† they be put in prison till they shall find sufficient surety well and honestly to serve their masters, mistresses, or dames, from whom they so departed or fled, according to the order of the law.”

II. c. 15, s. 6, "every silk winder and doubler, who shall at any time hereafter unjustly or deceitfully and falsely purloin, embezzle, pawn, sell, or detain, any part of silk delivered or to be delivered by any silk thrower or other person, to them or any of them, to wind or double, that in every such case and cases, as well the winder or journeyman so offending as the buyer and buyers, receiver and receivers of such silk, being thereof lawfully convicted, by confession of the party or parties so offending, or by one witness upon oath before one or more of the justices of peace of the county or liberty where the same offence or offences shall be committed; or if it be within any city or town corporate, before the mayor, bailiff, or chief officer of the said city or town corporate, who by force of this act are empowered and authorized to minister the same oath, and finally to hear and determine all and every the offences aforesaid, and to give and make to the party and parties grieved such recompense and satisfaction for such their damage and loss, and charges thereabouts, as by the said justice or justices, or chief officers, shall be ordered and appointed."

Sect. 7. "No more damage be given or awarded, than the party grieved shall prove he is damnified, and hath expended in looking after the same; and if the party or parties so offending shall not be able or sufficient to make recompense or satisfaction for the said offence, nor do make recompense or satisfaction for the same offence or offences within fourteen days next after such conviction, in such manner and form as by the justice or justices, or chief officers, shall be ordered and appointed, as aforesaid; then the party or parties so offending, for the first offence, shall be apprehended and whipped, or set in the stocks in the place where the offence is committed, or in some market town in the said county, near unto the place where the offence or offences aforesaid shall be committed, as shall be limited and appointed by the said justice or justices of the peace, or chief officers; and for the second offence, to incur the like, or such further punishment, by whipping, or being put in the stocks, as the said justice or justices of the peace, or chief officers, shall in their discretion think fit and convenient."

By the 20 Car. II. c. 6, s. 3, "If any silk winder or doubler shall hereafter be found faulty, in unjustly, deceitfully, or falsely purloining, embezzling, pawning, selling, or detaining, any silk committed to his or their trust, that then any justice of peace, mayor, bailiff, or chief officer of any county, liberty, or corporation, shall immediately upon conviction, by confession of the party, or upon the oath of one witness before any of the said justice or justices of the peace, or other officer, commit to prison, or to the house of correction, the offender, till satisfaction be given to the party wronged, or punishment inflicted, as by an act of parliament, intituled 'An Act for regulating the Trade of Silk-Throwing,' made this present parliament, is directed and appointed; any thing in the said act contained to the contrary hereof in anywise notwithstanding."

And by the 8 & 9 Wil. c. 36, s. 6, "All and every person or persons whatsoever, that shall embezzle, pawn, sell, or detain any of the silk so delivered, or after the same is wrought up, and also all and every receiver and receivers, buyer and buyers, or such as take to pawn any of the said goods, shall be subject and liable to all the penalties, forfeitures, and punishments contained, mentioned, and provided, in one act of parliament made in the thirteenth and fourteenth years of the reign of king Charles the Second, intituled 'An Act for regulating the Trade of Silk-Throwing;' and in another act made in the twentieth year of the said king Charles the Second, intituled 'An Act to regulate the Trade of Silk-Throwing.'"

By the 7 Jac. I. c. 7, s. 2, "All and every such lewd person and persons, who shall at any time after twenty days next after the end of this session of parliament, unjustly, falsely, or deceitfully convey away, embezzle, purloin, sell, or detain any part of the wool or yarn delivered by any clothier, maker of bays, says, or by any other person or persons making any such cloths or

Sect. 16. "Every penalty or punishment directed by, or other provision contained in the said recited act, in respect to the said materials, so far as the said recited act is not varied by this act, and all the provisions in this act contained in respect to the said materials, shall extend and be applicable to any tool or tools, and implement or implements, with which any person or persons shall be entrusted for making, working up, or manufacturing, the said materials, and also to any drug or drugs, ingredient or ingredients, with which any person or persons shall be entrusted, for the purpose of dyeing, preparing, or manufacturing such of the aforesaid materials as are usually dyed, prepared, or manufactured, in the same manner as if the said tools and implements, drugs and ingredients, were particularly mentioned, both in the said recited act and in the preceding provisions of this act."

Provisions extended to tools and implements.

By the 14 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 1, "If any picker, scribbler, spinner, or weaver, or other person or persons whatsoever, who shall be any ways employed in or about the making or manufacturing of woollen cloth, or in preparing materials for that purpose, shall not return all working tools or implements, wool, yarn, chain, woof, or abb, delivered out to be worked up and manufactured, and all such materials as aforesaid, wherewith he, she, or they shall be intrusted, or give a satisfactory account touching the same respectively, to his, her, or their employer, when thereunto required by the person or persons by whom he, she, or they shall have been so intrusted, or by his, her, or their known clerk or servant, or shall fraudulently steam, damp, or water the wool or yarn delivered to him, her, or them, to be worked up; or if any person or persons shall take off, cut, or pick out the list, forrel, or other mark of any piece of cloth, and shall be convicted of any such offence before some justice or justices of the peace for the county, division, liberty, or place where the person or persons so offending shall reside, either by the confession of the party or parties, or by the oath or oaths of one or more credible witness or witnesses; every such person so convicted shall be committed to the house of correction for the space of one calendar month."

Workmen in woollen manufactures, not returning implements.

Cutting, &c., off list or mark of cloth.

respectively before one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county, division, liberty, or place where any such offence was committed; such justice shall thereupon issue his warrant to any constable or constables, or other peace-officer or peace-officers, to enter into and search, in the day-time, the place of dwelling or residence of such person or persons so offending, and also such other house or place, houses or places of which the clothier, clerk, or servant as aforesaid, shall make oath that he, she, or they have just cause to suspect (it appearing to the said justice to be reasonable suspicion) that the said working tools, or the said materials or some part or parts thereof, to * have been embezzled or kept back, sold, bought, or received, as aforesaid, may be secreted and lodged: and if, upon search, any of the said working tools, wool, yarn, chain, woof, or abb, or any cloth with the list, forrel, or other marks taken off, cut, or picked out, shall be found, the said constable or constables, peace-officer or peace-officers, shall seize the same, and apprehend the person or persons in whose custody or possession the same shall be found, and bring him, her, or them, before the same, or some other of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county, division, liberty, or place, aforesaid; and unless such person or persons, in whose custody the same shall be found, can give a good account how he, she, or they came by the same, to the satisfaction of such justice or justices; then, and in such case, such person or persons shall be thereof convicted, and suffer such punishment as is hereinbefore directed to be inflicted on persons not returning the tools or materials as aforesaid; and all such tools, wool, yarn, chain, woof, or abb, or such cloth as aforesaid, so seized, and not accounted for as aforesaid, shall, upon such conviction, be delivered over to the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the parish where the same were seized, to be by them sold; and the monies arising by such sale, after defraying the expenses of such sale, shall be applied to the use of the poor of the said parish."

Sect. 3. "In case the person or persons accused shall request of such justice to appoint a reasonable time to produce the person or persons of or from whom he, she, or they, bought or received the same, or some one or more credible witness or witnesses, to prove the sale or delivery thereof; then, and in such case, it shall and may be lawful for the said justice, and he is hereby authorized and required to appoint such reasonable time as aforesaid, and to issue out a summons to the constable, or other peace-officer, of the parish or place where such person or persons, or such witness or witnesses shall respectively reside, requiring him, her, or them, to appear before such justice, at such time and place as shall be so appointed by such justice, in order to be examined and give evidence, on oath, of the several matters aforesaid; but such person or persons, at the time of making such request, shall enter into a recognizance, with or without surety or sureties, as such justice shall think proper, for his, her, or their appearance before him at the time so to be set, or, for want of such recognizance as aforesaid, shall be committed until the time that shall be so set or appointed by the said justice for the appearance of such party or parties, witness or witnesses: and if at such appointed time such person or persons shall be convicted of any of the offences aforesaid; then, and in such case, he, she, or they shall suffer such punishment as is hereinbefore directed to be inflicted on persons not returning such tools or materials as aforesaid."

Sect. 4. "It shall and may be lawful for any justice or justices, upon information made to him or them, on oath, by any credible person or persons, that there is just cause to suspect that any ends of yarn, wefts, thrums, short yarn, or other refuse of cloth, drugget, or of other woollen goods, or of goods mixed with wool (flocks and pinions only excepted,) have been collected and received and are lodged or concealed in any dwelling-house, warehouse, outhouse, yard, or other place, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause every such dwelling-house, warehouse, outhouse, yard, and other place to

Sect. 8. "The justice or justices before whom any offender shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall cause the said conviction to be made out in the manner and form following; that is to say:—

Form of conviction (a);

"Be it remembered, that on the _____ day of _____, in the year of our Lord _____, A. B. is convicted before me [or, us], _____ of his majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county, division, liberty, or place [as the case may be], of having [here specify the offence, and the time and place when and where the same was committed]. Given under my hand and seal [or, our hands and seals, as the case may be], the day and year aforesaid."

Sect. 9. "The justice or justices, before whom any offender shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall cause the said conviction to be fairly wrote over upon parchment; and also to be returned to the next general quarter session of the peace to be held in and for the county, division, liberty, or place, where such conviction was made, to be filed by the clerk of the peace, and remain and be kept among the records of the said sessions."

to be written on parchment, and returned to quarter sessions.

Sect. 7. "If any person or persons shall think him, her, or themselves aggrieved, by the judgment of any justice or justices before whom he, she, or they shall have been convicted of any of the offences aforesaid, such person or persons may appeal; and the said justice or justices is and are hereby required to make known to such person or persons, at the time of such conviction, his and their right under this act to appeal to the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held for the county, liberty, division, or place where such conviction shall be made, the person or persons, at the time of such conviction, giving to such justice or justices notice in writing, signifying, his, her, or their intention to appeal, and also entering into a recognizance at the time of such notice, with sufficient sureties, conditioned to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of, and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such sessions; and the justices at such sessions are hereby authorized and required, upon due proof made of such notice, and of such recognizance being entered into, to hear and determine the matter of the said appeal in a summary way, and award costs to the party or parties appealing or appealed against, if the said justices shall think proper; but if upon such hearing the judgment of the justice or justices, before whom such appellant shall have been convicted as aforesaid, shall be affirmed, then, and in such case, such appellant shall suffer such punishment, in consequence of such conviction, as is hereinbefore directed to be inflicted on persons not returning the tools or materials as aforesaid."

Sect. 6. " If it shall appear to the justices, at their general quarter sessions, that such person or persons have or hath already been convicted, at some general quarter sessions, of any offence against this act ; then, and in such case, the said justices shall, upon a like inquiry and conviction, in a summary way, direct the said offender or offenders to be committed to the house of correction, for any time not exceeding six calendar months, and also to be once publicly whipped at such time and place as such justices at their said quarter sessions shall direct."

Sect. 10. " No person or persons shall be proceeded against for any offences against this act as aforesaid, unless information shall be made thereof, upon oath, before one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, division, liberty, or place, where such offence shall be committed, within three calendar months after such offence shall be committed ; and no order made, touching or concerning any of the matters in this act contained, or any proceedings to be had touching the conviction or convictions of any offender or offenders against this act, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed or removable by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

By the 12 Geo. I. c. 34, s. 2, " if any wool-comber, weaver, servant, or person hired, retained, or employed in the art or mystery of a wool-comber or weaver, shall wilfully damnify, spoil, or destroy (without the consent of the owner) any of the goods, wares, or work committed to his care or charge, or wherewith he shall be entrusted, every such offender, being thereof lawfully convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay to the owner or owners of such goods or wares so damnified, spoiled, or destroyed, double the value thereof, to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, by warrant or warrants under the hands and seals of any two or more justices of the peace within their respective jurisdictions, and for want of sufficient distress, such justices shall commit the party or parties offending to the house of correction, there to remain and be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three months, or until satisfaction be made to the party or parties aggrieved for the same."

Sect. 11. "Every peace-officer, constable, headborough, or tithingman, in every county, city, town corporate, or other place, where there shall be officers, and every beadle within his ward, parish, or district, and every watchman, during such time only as he is on his duty, shall and may apprehend, or cause to be apprehended, all and every person or persons who may reasonably be suspected of having or carrying, or any ways conveying, at any time after sunsetting and before sunrising, any of such materials suspected to be purloined or embezzled, and the same, together with such person or persons, as soon as conveniently may be, convey or carry before any two justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, within which the suspected person or persons shall be apprehended; and if the person or persons so apprehended in conveying any such materials, shall not produce the party or parties duly entitled to dispose thereof, from whom he, she, or they bought or received the same, or some other credible witness, to testify upon oath, or (being of the people called Quakers) upon solemn affirmation, to the sale or delivery of the said materials (which oath or affirmation respectively such justices are hereby empowered to administer,) or shall not give an account, to the satisfaction of such justices, how he, she, or they came by the same; then the said person or persons so apprehended shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished in manner herein-after mentioned, although no proof shall be given to whom such materials belong."

Sect. 12. "In either of the two cases last before mentioned, when any person or persons, who shall be brought before any two justices of the peace, shall request of such justices to appoint a reasonable time to produce the person or persons duly entitled to sell or dispose of the same, of or from whom he, she, or they bought or received the same, or some one or more credible witness or witnesses to prove the sale or delivery thereof; then, and in such case, it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, and they are hereby authorized and required to appoint such reasonable time as aforesaid, and to issue out a summons to the constable or other peace-officer of the parish or place where such person or persons, or such witness or witnesses, shall respectively reside, requiring him, her, or them, to appear before two or more justices, at such time and place as shall be so appointed by such justices, in order to be examined and give evidence on oath, or (being of the people called Quakers) solemn affirmation, of the several matters aforesaid; but such person or persons, at the time of making such request, shall enter into a recognizance, with or without surety or sureties, as such justices shall think proper, for his, her, or their appearance before them, at the time so to be set, or, for want of such recognizance as aforesaid, shall be committed until the time that shall be set or appointed by the said justices for the appearance of such party or parties, witness or witnesses; and if, at such appointed time, such person or persons shall be convicted of any of the offences aforesaid, then, and in such case, he, she, or they, shall suffer such punishment as is hereinbefore directed to be inflicted on persons guilty of such offences."

Sect. 13. "Where any person or persons shall be convicted of a misdemeanor in either of the two cases last before mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for the justices before whom the conviction shall be, to cause the said materials so found or seized as aforesaid, to be deposited in the hands of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the place where such materials shall be found or seized, or in any other convenient place, for any time not exceeding thirty days; and, in the meantime, to order the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or one of them, to insert an advertisement in some one or more of the public newspapers usually published or circulated in or near such place, or otherwise to cause notice to be given by some public crier, and by fixing on the church or chapel door notice describing such materials, and where the same are so deposited, to the end that persons having lost such materials, or any reputable person or persons in their behalf, may come and claim the same; and in case any person or persons can prove his, her, or their property in the said materials upon oath, or (being of the people called Quakers) upon his, her, or their solemn affirmation, to the satisfaction of any two justices of the peace for such county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, then such justices shall order restitution of such materials to the owner or owners thereof, after paying the reasonable charges of removing, depositing, and giving public notice of the same; but if, before the end of the said thirty days, no person or persons shall come and prove his, her, or their property in such materials, nor any reputable person or persons on his, her, or their behalf, then the said justices shall order and direct the same to be sold for the best price that can reasonably be had, and after deducting such charges as aforesaid, together with the charges of sale, one moiety of the money arising from such sale shall be given to the person or persons, or either of them, who shall apprehend or prosecute the offender or offenders guilty of either of the misdemeanors aforesaid, as the said justices shall appoint; and the other moiety thereof, either to and amongst the poor of the parish, town, or place, where the conviction shall be, or to such public charity or charities as the justices convicting shall appoint."

Sect. 14. "Every person adjudged guilty of any of the misdemeanors in ss. 10—13 of this act, shall forfeit, for the first offence, 20*l.; for the second, 30.*; and for every subsequent offence, 40*l.*; to be levied by distress and sale of the offenders' goods, by warrant of the convicting justices: of which forfeiture, one moiety shall be paid to the informer, and the other to the poor of the parish, or to such public charity as the justices appoint [but these penalties are now otherwise applied, see 58 Geo. III. c. 51, ss. 3, 4, ante, 509]. If no sufficient distress can be found, they may commit the offender to any gaol in their jurisdiction, for one month for the first, two for the second, and six for every subsequent offence."

Sect. 8. "It shall and may be lawful for any person convicted before one or more justice or justices of the peace, of any of the offences in this act mentioned, to appeal to the justices of the peace assembled at the next general quarter-sessions, to be held for the county, city, borough, town, liberty, or place wherein such conviction shall be made, giving immediate notice of the intention of bringing such appeal, and finding security, to the satisfaction of the justice or justices before whom such conviction shall have been made, for being present at such general sessions, or general quarter-sessions, and for prosecuting the said appeal with effect, and abiding the judgment of the court; and such justices, in such general sessions, or general quarter-sessions, shall finally hear and determine the matter, and shall have power to award reasonable costs to either party as to them shall seem just; and if such conviction shall be affirmed at such sessions, such appellant shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction for any time not exceeding three months."

Sect. 9. "No action shall be brought against any justice of the peace, constable, headborough, or other officer, or against any other person or persons whomsoever, for any matter or thing whatsoever done or committed under, or by virtue, or in the execution of this act, unless such action shall be brought within three calendar months next after the doing or committing such matter or thing."

Sect. 10. "If any action or suit shall hereafter be commenced or prosecuted against any person or persons, for any thing done by virtue or in the execution of this act, such person or persons may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence; and if the plaintiff shall become nonsuited, or suffer discontinuance, or forbear further prosecution, or if judgment shall be given for the defendant or defendants, such defendant or defendants shall recover double costs, for which he, she, or they shall have the like remedy as in cases where costs by law are given to defendants."

county [as the case shall be] of]. [Here specify the offence, and when and where the same was committed.] Given under our hands and seals, the day and year first above written."

It seems that it will not be sufficient merely to follow this form of conviction, there being a discretionary punishment as to some of the offences included in this act. (Rex v. Dempsey, 2 T. R. 96; Dick. Sess. 2nd. ed. 701, 3rd. ed. 591; R. v. Barrett, 1 Salk. 383; R. v. Helps, 3 M. & Selw. 331. See Evans, Col. Stat. Part VI., Class XXXI., Vol. 8, p. 217, (I.))

It has also been observed, where there is a discretion as to the duration of imprisonment to be suffered for want of distress, as in cases depending upon sect. 4, the general practice of the sessions has been to require such imprisonment to appear on the face of the conviction, and it seems to be necessary that it should so appear. Upon a conviction under that section, it may be proper, after stating the offence, to proceed as follows:—"And we do adjudge, that for the said offence, being his first offence, the said John Smith hath forfeited the sum of 40*l.*, which we direct shall be applied as follows; that is to say, that, in the first place, the sum of 5*l.*, being the expense of the prosecution, shall be paid to A. B.; that, in the next place, the sum of 15*l.* shall be paid to C. D., being the party injured by the said offence, as a satisfaction for the same; and that afterwards the sum of 10*l.* shall be paid to S. S., who informed us of the said offence; and that the sum of 10*l.*, being the remainder of the said penalty, shall be paid to the overseers of the poor of the town of M. aforesaid, where the said conviction is, to be distributed to and amongst the poor of the said town; and that, in case the said penalty shall not be paid on this conviction, the said J. S. shall be committed to the house of correction at , in the said county, for six months, unless the said penalty shall be sooner paid." (Id. Burn's J., 24 ed., Vol. V.)

By sect. 20, "if any person shall think himself or herself aggrieved by the order or judgment of any justices before whom he or she shall have been convicted of any of the offences in the said acts of the twelfth year of the reign of king George the First, and the twenty-second year of the reign of king George the Second, or in this act, such person may appeal, and the said justices are hereby required to make known to such person, at the time of such conviction, his or her right to appeal, to the next

17 Geo. 3, c. 56.

This section takes away the writ of certiorari only from offences for the first time created by 22 Geo. II. c. 27, and does not apply to those created by 12 Geo. I. c. 34, and extended to the silk and cotton trades by 22 Geo. II. c. 27. This was decided in the case of R. v. Rogers, 5 B. & Ald. 773; S. C. In re Kaye, 1 D. & R. 436, where a rule had been granted for a certiorari to remove an order of sessions, confirming a warrant of distress, signed by two justices, for enforcing the payment of wages, from Thomas Kay to William Rogers, for work done by the latter in the silk manufacture and the cotton manufacture. The wages for which the warrant issued had been previously paid in goods, which payment the justices altogether disallowed. The sessions, on appeal, considered the point of law so doubtful, that they confirmed the order, subject to a special case. The question was, whether the certiorari was taken away. Et per Bayley, J., "By the 22 Geo. II. c. 27, a variety of specific offences were created; and that having been done, by the last clause the provisions of the 12 Geo. I. c. 34, were extended to the silk and cotton trade. Now, I think that the best construction we can give to the 17 Geo. III. c. 56, s. 22, on which the question turns, will be to hold, that it extends only to the offences created for the first time by the 22 Geo. II. c. 27. If so, the writ of certiorari, in the present case, is not taken away." And the writ was granted.

By the 14 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 1, so much of the 22 Geo. II. c. 27, as relates to the punishment for reeling false and short yarn is repealed. False reeling of yarn.

Sect. 2. "From and after the passing of this act, if any person or persons shall reel false or short yarn, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted by the oath of the owner of such yarn, or in case such owner is one of the people called Quakers, then upon the solemn affirmation of such owner, or of any other credible witness or witnesses, or by the confession of the person or persons charged with such offence, before any one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place where such offence shall be committed, or where the person or persons so charged shall reside or inhabit (which oath such justice or justices is and are hereby empowered and required to administer), shall, for the first offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20s., nor less than 5s.; and for the second offence, any sum not exceeding 5*l.*, nor less than 40s.; and for the third and every other offence, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices of the peace to commit the person or persons so convicted to the house of correction, or other public prison of such county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, there to be kept to hard labour for the space of one calendar month, and also to order the person or persons so convicted to be once publicly whipped at the nearest market-town to where the offence was committed, and upon a market day; all which penalties and forfeitures shall go to the party aggrieved."

Sect. 3. "The justice or justices before whom any offender shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall cause the said conviction to be made out in the manner and form following; that is to say,

"Be it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , A. B. is convicted before me, , [or, us], of his majesty's justices of the peace for , [specifying the offence, and the time and place when and where the same was committed, and also specifying that it is the first, second, or third offence, against this act, as the case shall be] (b). XIV. Disputes between Paper-Makers and Workmen.

The 5 Geo. IV. c. 95, s. 1, repeals the 36 Geo. III. c. 111; and the 6 Geo. IV. c. 129, repeals the 5 Geo. IV. c. 95, except as to its repealing clauses.

XV. Disputes between Masters and Servants in Husbandry, Artificers, Calico-Printers, Handicraftsmen, Miners, Colliers, Keelmen, Pitmen, Glassmen, Potters, and other Labourers, and Servants in Husbandry.

By construction of law upon the 5 Eliz. c. 4, the justices had a power of compelling the payment of the wages which they had rated and assessed; but that statute being deficient in two material points, to wit, in extending only to such wages as should be rated, and to servants in husbandry only; and moreover there being therein (as hath been observed) no power to admit the servant's oath in evidence: therefore, Justices may hear and determine complaints by certain servants as to wages (a).

By the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, after reciting, that the "laws now in being, for the better regulation of servants, and for the payment of wages to them, and to artificers, handicraftsmen, and labourers, are insufficient and defective;" for remedy whereof it is enacted, that after the 25th March, 1747, "all complaints, differences, and disputes, which shall happen and arise between masters or mistresses, and servants in husbandry, who shall be hired for one year, or longer, [see 31 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 3, post, 533] or which shall happen or arise between masters and mistresses, and artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers employed for any certain time, or in any other manner, shall be heard and determined (a) by one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county, riding, city, liberty, town corporate, or place, where such master or mistress shall inhabit (although no rate or assessment of wages (b) has been made that year by the justices of the peace of the shire, riding, or liberty, or by the mayor, bailiffs, or other head officers, where such complaints shall be made, or where such differences or disputes shall arise), which said justice or justices is and are hereby empowered to examine upon oath any such servant,

(b) These words imply that the legislature did not contemplate all labourers, but those only with reference to whom the justices had power to make a rate of wages, per Bayley, J., in Branwell v. Penneck, 7 B. & Cres. 539, and 1 M. & R., 409, post; and see the 5 Eliz. c. 4, and 1 Jac. I. c. 6, repealed by 53 Geo. III. c. 40, ante, 493, as to what labourers' wages the magistrates could formerly settle.

The 27 Geo. II. c. 6, s. 1, repeals the seventh section of the 20 Geo. II. c. 19.

Sect. 2. "From and after the first day of May all the provisions and regulations in the said act mentioned and contained, relating to servants in husbandry, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers, shall extend to such tanners and miners as are or shall be employed in the stannaries in the counties of Devon and Cornwall respectively, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the said provisions and regulations were herein particularly repeated and set forth; any law, statute, usage, privilege, or jurisdiction whatsoever, to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding." Provisions extended to tanners, &c.

Sect. 3. "Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to hinder or restrain any person from applying to the stannary courts, or to the warden, vice-warden, or stewards of the stannaries, in relation to any of the matters hereinbefore mentioned, in the same manner as such person might have done before the making of this act." Stannary courts.

The 31 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 3, after reciting the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 1, and that doubts have arisen whether the words, "any labourers employed for any certain time, or in any other manner," extend to servants in husbandry hired for a less time than one year, for obviating the said doubts, enacts, "that the said act, and all and every clause and matter therein contained, shall be deemed and construed to extend to all servants employed in husbandry, though hired for a less time than one year; any thing in the said recited act of the twentieth year of his present majesty's reign or any other act contained to the contrary notwithstanding." 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, extended to servants in husbandry, though hired for less than a year.

By 6 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 4, reciting, that "it frequently happens that artificers, calico-printers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, labourers, and others, who contract with persons for certain terms, do leave their respective services before the terms of their contracts are fulfilled; to the great disappointment and loss of the persons with whom they so contract:" for remedy thereof enacts, "that from and after the said twenty-fourth day of June, 1766, if any artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person, shall contract with any person whomsoever for any time or times whatsoever, and shall absent himself from his service before the term of his contract shall be completed, or be guilty of any other misdemeanor, that then, and in every such case, it shall and may be lawful Justices may grant warrants against artificers, &c. not fulfilling their contract, or being guilty of a misdemeanor, fulfilled such contract, or hath been guilty of any other misconduct or misdemeanor as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for such justice to commit every such person to the house of correction, there to remain and be held to hard labour for a reasonable time, not exceeding three months, and to abate a proportionable part of his or her wages, for and during such period as he or she shall be so confined in the house of correction, or in lieu thereof (a), to punish the offender by abating the whole or any part of his or her wages, or to discharge such servant in husbandry, artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person from his or her contract, service, or employment, which discharge shall be given under the hand and seal of such justice gratis."

Sect. 4, after reciting that "it frequently happens that such masters, mistresses, or employers reside at considerable distances from the parishes or places where their business is carried on, or are occasionally absent for long periods of time, either beyond the seas, or at considerable distances from such parishes or places, and during such residence or occasional absences entrust their business to the management and superintendence of stewards, agents, bailiffs, foremen, or managers, whereby such servants, artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, labourers, or other persons and apprentices, are or may be subjected to great difficulties and hardships, and put to great expense in recovering their wages;" enacts, "that, in either of the said cases, it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice or justices of the county or place where such servant in husbandry, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person or apprentice shall be employed, upon the complaint of any such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person or apprentice, touching or concerning the non-payment of his or her wages, to summon such steward, agent, bailiff, foreman, or manager, to be and appear before him or them at a reasonable time to be named in such summons, and to hear and determine the matter of the complaint in such and the like manner as complaints of the like nature against any master, mistress, or employer are directed to be heard and determined in and by this and the before-recited acts, and also to make an order for the payment by such steward, agent, bailiff, foreman, or manager, to such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person or apprentice, of so much wages as to such justice or justices shall appear to be justly due; provided that the sum in question do not exceed the sum of 10*l.*; and in case of refusal or non-payment of any sum so ordered to be paid by such steward, agent, foreman, bailiff, or manager, for the space of twenty-one days from the date of such order, such justice or justices as aforesaid shall and may issue forth his or their warrant to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such master, mistress, or employer, rendering the overplus to the owner or owners, or to such steward, agent, bailiff, foreman, or manager, for the use of such master, mistress, or employer, after payment of the charges of such distress and sale (b)."

Sect. 5. Every justice or justices of the peace before whom any complaint shall be made in pursuance of the said recited act, 20 Geo. II. c. 19, or the 31 Geo. II. c. 11, shall and may order the amount of the wages that shall appear due to any servants in husbandry, artificers, labourers, or other person named in the said acts, or either of them, to be paid to the person entitled thereto, within such period as the said justice or justices shall think proper; and, in case of refusal or non-payment thereof, shall and may levy the same by distress and sale, in manner directed by the said first-mentioned act; and every order or determination of such justice or justices made under this act shall be final and conclusive, any thing in either of the said acts contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 52, the provisions of this act of 4 Geo. IV. are extended to the servants named in the 17 Geo. III. c. 56. 15. Husbandry Servants' Disputes, &c.

[Decisions on the foregoing enactments.]—In order to found the jurisdiction of magistrates to order payment of wages under the above statutes of 20 Geo. II. c. 19; 31 Geo. II. c. 11; and 4 Geo. IV. c. 36, it should distinctly appear on the order that the party complaining was a servant within the meaning of the acts, and that the relation of master and servant existed between him and the party complained against. Such facts appearing in evidence is not sufficient. (Wiles v. Cooper, 1 H. & W. 560.)

It was formerly supposed, that the words in the statute 20 Geo. II. c. 19, "and other labourers," meant only labourers in any of the enumerated trades; but in the case of Lowther v. the Earl of Radnor and Eyre, 8 East, 113, they received a more enlarged construction. To an action of trespass for taking the plaintiff's goods, the defendants, who were justices of the peace for the county of Wilts, justified under this statute; and, on the trial, a special case was reserved for the opinion of the Court of King's Bench. On the 27th of November, 1804, the defendants made this order:—"Wilts, to wit. To T. Lawes, one of the tithingmen, &c. Whereas J. Sopp, of, &c., labourer, hath complained unto J. T. B., one of the justices, &c., that G. Lowther, Esq., of, &c., refused to pay unto him, the said Sopp, 4*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* for wages justly due to him for work and labour done by the said J. Sopp and by T. Franklin, in the service of the said G. Lowther, by digging and steaning part of a well at," &c. The order then stated that Mr. Lowther was summoned to answer the complaint, but that he did not appear, and that the defendants, as justices, examined, at the time and place appointed, into the complaint, and adjudged it to be true, and ordered Mr. Lowther to pay the money to J. Sopp. Mr. Lowther appealed to the Wiltshire quarter-sessions against this order, where the order was affirmed. After this, the two defendants made a warrant of distress against Mr. Lowther, stating all the above facts, under which the plaintiff's goods were taken. The case also stated, that "steaning a well" means lining it with stones and mortar. That Sopp had, on other occasions, been employed by the plaintiff as a labourer in husbandry. That the work was performed under a contract between the plaintiff and Sopp, by which the latter undertook to dig the well of a sufficient depth to supply the plaintiff's cattle with water, and for which, when it was deep enough to give a supply of water, he was to receive 2*s.* per foot. That, in the execution of the work, Sopp was to employ whom he pleased to assist him, but the money was to be paid to Sopp alone. And that Sopp had before done other work for the plaintiff, for which he was paid by the piece, and not by the day. For the plaintiff, it was contended, 1st, that the justices had no jurisdiction to make the original order; 2ndly, if they had, that they exceeded their jurisdiction, by ordering the money, which had been earned by Sopp and Franklin, to be paid to Sopp alone; 3rdly, that the plaintiff was not precluded from bringing his action by having appealed to the sessions. In the course of the argument, the court seemed to think that the second point was answered by the facts of the case, the contract having been made by Sopp alone, who was at liberty to employ any one under him: but they gave a decided opinion on the third point, that, if there were no original jurisdiction in the magistrates making the order, the appeal would not give it. On the principal question, however, the court took time to consider of their opinion, which was afterwards delivered by Lord Ellenborough, C. J.:—"The question arising on this special case depends on the terms of the complaint made to the magistrates, as recited in the order of the 27th of November 1804; and how far the terms of that complaint bring the complainant within the provisions of the 20 Geo. II. c. 19. This complaint must be taken to be true in the terms of it; no evidence appearing to have been laid before the magistrates to contradict or vary it, and they having adjudged the same to be true. By this it appears that Sopp was a labourer; for he is described as 'J. Sopp, of Shrewton, labourer;' and that his demand was for wages due to him for work and labour done by himself and another person, T. Franklin; by which must be understood, that Sopp was employed to do the work either by the day or the piece, and that Franklin assisted Sopp in the work, under the retainer of Sopp, and not of Mr. Lowther; a common practice with labourers, as well in husbandry as in other business. Is Sopp then such a labourer as is by the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, subjected to the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace; and, of course, entitled to the benefit of that jurisdiction, to recover his wages, being under 5*l.*, by their summary process? The 20 Geo. II. c. 19, begins by reciting, that 'the laws now in being for the better regulation of servants, and for the payment of wages to them, and to artificers, handicraftsmen, and labourers, are insufficient and defective,' and for remedy enacts, that all complaints, differences, and disputes, which shall happen and arise between masters or mistresses, and servants in husbandry, who shall be hired for one year or longer, or which shall happen or arise between masters and mistresses, and artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers, employed for any certain time or in any other manner, shall be heard or determined by one or more justice or justices, although no rate or assessment of wages has been made that year by the justices. The 31 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 3, recites the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, and that doubts had arisen whether the words, 'any labourers employed for any certain time, or in any other manner,' extend to servants in husbandry hired for a less time than a year; and, for obviating the said doubts, enacts, that the said act and every clause and matter therein contained shall extend to all servants employed in husbandry, though hired for a less time than a year. In the argument of this case, it was contended that Sopp did not come within the meaning of the act of Parliament, 20 Geo. II. c. 19, because he was not a servant in husbandry, nor a servant or labourer in any of the trades, callings, or employments enumerated in that act; and that the words used in the act, 'other labourers employed for any certain time or in any other manner,' meant labourers in any of the enumerated trades only, and not labourers generally. With the first part of the argument, that he is not to be taken as a servant in husbandry, we agree; because he is not stated to be so in the order or complaint; and we cannot intend any thing to give the justices jurisdiction beyond what appears in the order. (R. v. The Inhabitants of Hulcott, 6 T. R. 583.) But we cannot accede to the latter part of the argument, that the operation of the statute is to be confined to labourers in the several enumerated employments. The most obvious construction is not so to confine it; and no case has been stated where the construction has been so confined. The mischief recited in the preamble of the act is general, viz. that the laws in being for the better regulation of servants, and the payment of wages to them, and to artificers, handicraftsmen, and labourers, are insufficient. The remedy provided by the act is, that all differences between masters or mistresses and servants in husbandry, who shall be hired for a year or longer (these words certainly restrain the operation of the remedy, as to servants, to those in husbandry only, and to such as are hired for a year or longer; the act then proceeds), or (differences) which shall happen or arise between masters and mistresses and artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers employed for any certain time, or in any other manner. Now, unless these words, 'other labourers,' mean to comprehend a different description of persons from those before particularly mentioned, it is difficult to account for their insertion at all; but applying them to other labourers in any other trade or business, the sense will be perfect, and each word will have its meaning. But it may be said, that if such an extensive construction be put on these last words of the sentence, the former part, specifying certain trades, becomes nugatory. That, however, will not follow; for artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, &c., do not necessarily or properly fall under the denomination of labourers; there being, as I take it, a known distinction between a journeyman in any art, trade, or mystery, or other workmen employed in the different branches of it, and a labourer. It does not appear to us to be an objection to this construction, that by other acts of parliament, passed subsequent to the 20 Geo. II., workmen or labourers in other particular trades or manufactures, or labourers generally, are subjected to certain regulations, which appear to clash with some of the provisions of this act; as the 22 Geo. II. c. 27, s. 9, for regulating certain manufactures therein mentioned; and the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, for better regulating apprentices and persons working under contract; and other statutes which may be pointed out. The true answer seems to be, that, at the time of passing one act, the legislature has not always had every other act containing provisions bearing on the same subject brought under its consideration. The act now under our consideration appears to have had for its object the affording to certain servants and workmen, and to labourers in general, a speedy, easy, and cheap mode of recovering their wages, when they amount to a small sum; and to masters an easy method of correcting trifling misdemeanors and ill behaviour in their workmen and labourers. These benefits are by the words of the act extended to servants in husbandry, to workmen in different branches of trade, and to other labourers employed for any certain time or in any other manner. The latter words are as general as may be; and we cannot find any reason in law or policy to say that they do not comprehend the case of Sopp, as stated in the order of the two magistrates. For these reasons, we are of opinion, on the questions submitted to us by the special case, that the justices making the original order had jurisdiction to make that order; and of course that the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to make the order on the appeal." And judgment was given for the defendants.

4 Geo. 4, extended to servants named in 17 Geo. 3, c. 56.

It must appear on order that the character of master and servant exists.

The 20 Geo. II. c. 19, was not intended to include all labourers, but those only with reference to whom the justices had power to make a rate of wages (per Bayley, J., 7 B. & Cres. 539; 1 M. & R. 409).

The acts extend only to cases where the relation of master and servant exclusively exists. They do not extend therefore to any case where work is done under a contract for a sum certain, or when the hours of work are entirely left in the discretion of the contracting party; and therefore, where A. had contracted with B. to build a wall for a certain price, within a certain time, and having performed a part of the work, refused to complete it, this was held not to be within the 4 Geo. IV. c. 34, s. 3, and that a magistrate, who acted upon the complaint of B. and convicted and committed A. to prison, was liable to an action for false imprisonment. (Lancaster v. Greaves, 9 B. & C. 628.)

So, where A. contracted with B. to weave for him certain pieces of silks at certain prices, agreed on between them, it was held, on a commitment stating such a contract, that A. was not a servant within the 4 Geo. IV. c. 3 & 4, s. 3, and that the magistrates had no jurisdiction over him. (Hardy v. Ryle, 9 B. & C. 603.)

And in another case it was held that a person whose name is added to that of the regular officer in a warrant, under a fi. fa., by the plaintiff's attorney, and who is employed to watch the goods after they have been taken by the officer, is not a labourer within the jurisdiction of the justices under the 20 Geo. II. c. 19; (Bramwell v. Penneck, 1 M. & R. 409, 1 M. & R. M. C. 109; 7 B. & C. 536, S. C.;) and Bayley, J., delivered his judgment in that case as follows: "I am of opinion that the magistrate had not any jurisdiction to make the order for payment of wages to Richards; for it seems to me that Richards was not that sort of labourer, nor the service rendered by him that sort of labour, which is mentioned and intended in the 20 Geo. II. c. 19. That statute recites, that the existing laws for payment of wages to servants, and to artificers, handicraftsmen, and labourers, were defective, and then provides a mode of settling disputes between masters and certain descriptions of persons and other labourers, although no rate or assessment of wages has been made that year by the justices of the peace for the shire, &c. where such complaint shall be made, or such dispute arise. Those words imply, that the legislature did not contemplate all labourers, but those only with reference to whom the justices had power to make a rate of wages. Now, looking at the statute 5 Eliz. c. 4, the justices are thereby empowered to settle the rate of wages 'of such artificers, handicraftsmen, husbandmen, or other labourers, servants, or workmen, whose wages had in time past been fixed by law, and also of all other labourers, artificers, workmen, or apprentices of husbandry, whose wages had not been fixed; and these wages are to be fixed by the year, day, week, or month, and what wages every workman or labourer shall take by the great, for mowing, reaping, or threshing of corn, or for mowing or making of hay, or for ditching, paving, &c., and for any other kind of reasonable labour and service.' This latter part shows that the legislature had principally in view out-door work or country labour. And the statute appears to have received this construction; for by the 1 Jac. I. c. 6, after reciting that questions had arisen, whether the former act gave any new jurisdiction except as to persons that worked in husbandry, it was enacted, 'that the provisions should extend to any labourers, weavers, spinsters, and workmen whatsoever, either working by the day, week, month, or year, or taking any work to be done in great or otherwise.' That explains still further the various descriptions of persons whose wages might be fixed by the magistrates at the time when the 20 Geo. II. passed; and for the work to be done by the several persons mentioned, there would be no difficulty in fixing a rate of payment. In Lowther v. Lord Radnor, the work done was digging, the workman was clearly a labourer, and within the statute. In the present case, there was no work or labour done by Richards; his was not an employment for which it could be expected that magistrates could fix the proper remuneration. For these reasons, I think that the defendant went beyond his jurisdiction in making the order in question, and that the rule for a new trial must be discharged. It appears to me that there is weight also in the argument derived from the second section of the 20 Geo. II. c. 19; for this was not a case in which it could be intended that the magistrate should interfere in the manner pointed out by the statute."

Who the employer.

The employer is the person on whose farm the employment is, and not the bailiff, though the contract of hiring may have been made personally with the bailiff. (R. v. Hoseason, 14 East, 605.) The defendant, a magistrate, having heard a complaint referred to him in his judicial character by the bailiff of his own farm against one G. Battersby, a labourer in husbandry, who had been employed upon the farm by the bailiff, and was charged by him for misconduct in his business and refusal to perform his work, had sentenced Battersby to be committed to the house of correction, there "to be corrected, and kept to hard labour for one calendar month," whereupon a criminal information was moved for against the defendant, grounded upon special circumstances of alleged misconduct, as well in respect of the general complexion of the case, as having been guilty of particular oppression in giving that judgment. In the course of the discussion, a question arose, whether, if the defendant committed Battersby to the house of correction at all, he was not bound to sentence him also to be there corrected, by which was understood to be corporally corrected by whipping, as had, in fact, been done. [See the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 2, and the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, for the better regulating apprentices and persons working under contract.] The court, upon consideration of the two statutes, were of opinion, that if the commitment in question (which was for one calendar month) were intended by the magistrate to be made under the 20 Geo. II., the correction thereby directed (by which they understood corporal punishment by whipping, and which they considered the sentence in question to import by the commitment to the house of correction, there to be corrected) was a necessary part of the judgment. But that, under the latter statute, which enabled the justice to commit the offender to the house of correction for any time not exceeding three months, nor less than one month, bodily correction was no part of the sentence; and they thought that the punishment inflicted by the two acts could not be blended together, as they appeared to be by the precedent in Burn's Justice, which they said was incorrect in that respect. But though the court thought that the sentence pronounced by the defendant in this case was legal in the form of it under the 20 Geo. II., yet Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in delivering their opinion upon that point, strongly expressed his disapprobation of the conduct of the defendant for sitting in judgment as a magistrate upon the imputed misconduct of his own labourer, of which he himself was to be considered as the complainant, though in form the complaint was preferred by his bailiff. It was impossible, he observed, to consider the defendant's bailiff as the employer of the labourer upon the defendant's own farm, with the sense of that word in the act, though the contract of hiring was made personally by the bailiff; and that it was a most abusive interpretation of the law for a man to erect himself as a criminal judge over the servants on his own farm for an offence against himself. However, as the defendant appeared, from the circumstances of the whole case, to have acted in this respect from an error of judgment, rather than from any bad motive; and in the mode of punishment adopted by him, which had been urged in aggravation, as evincing a vindictive motive, was probably misled by the erroneous precedent in Burn's Justice, which appeared to leave him no discretion in ordering corporal punishment, the court finally discharged the rule upon the defendant's payment of all the costs of the application.

Upon comparing the two statutes, viz. 20 Geo. II. c. 19, and 6 Geo. III. c. 25, there appears to be a distinction as to the applicants. In the former act, it is to be on application by any master, mistress, or employer; by the latter act, the complaint is to be made by "the person with whom the labourer shall have contracted, or by his steward or agent:" and perhaps the punishment which may be legally affixed, may depend upon the station which the applicant may hold: and it also seems that the words guilty of any misdemeanor, in the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, are much more general than the words "any misdemeanor in his service," in the 20 Geo. II. c. 19.

In the case of R. v. Heywood and another, 1 M. & Sel. 624, it was determined that the sect. 5 of the 13 Geo. I. c. 23, for settling "disputes between clothiers or makers of woollen goods, and weavers, or persons employed in such manufactures," repealed, ante, 525, does not relate to demands against clothiers by the owner of a scribbling and carding-mill, for work done by him for the clothiers, in teasing, scribbling, carding, and stubbing the wool at his mill: therefore, the court refused a mandamus to two justices to hear and examine such demands. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., said, "the penal provisions of this statute show that it is not applicable to the adjustment of debts between parties of equal rank in trade. 'Wages,' is the emphatical word denoting the character of the person who is authorized to apply, and all the words seem to express the relation between master and servant." This view of the statute is confirmed by reference to other statutes on the same subject, especially the 14 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 1, 2, ante, 513.

A commitment in execution by a magistrate (on the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, or any other act) must state that the party has been convicted: setting forth that he was charged on oath with the offence, is not sufficient. (R. v. Cooper, 6 T. R. 509; and see Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 78; R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 575.) In the case of R. v. Rhodes, 4 T. Rep. 220, it was objected that the warrant of commitment did not include a conviction, but only stated that the offender was charged before the justice with being a rogue and vagabond; and it did not proceed, as it ought to have done, to adjudge the defendant to be guilty of the offence charged; and it was held bad; see also "Commitment in Execution," Vol. I.

No appeal lies to the sessions against a record of conviction and commitment in execution, under the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, ante, 533, 534, for three months, of a collier for absenting himself from his master's service. (R. v. the Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 572.) Lord Ellenborough, C. J., there said, "It is not for us to say whether it may be convenient and proper to provide a remedy by appeal for a party grieved by a commitment in execution under this act; we can only declare what the legislature have said in this case: and when by excepting an order of commitment out of the appeal clause, they have said that there shall be no appeal against such an order, and when the commitment must for this purpose be taken to be one and the same thing with the conviction, we have no discretion left to exercise upon the subject, and it does not become us to scan the wisdom of the provision which the legislature have enacted."

Where a magistrate, in his adjudication on this act, avers a complaint made on oath, and an examination on oath, it is not competent, in replevin for taking the plaintiff's goods, for the plaintiff to plead, in bar of a cognizance made under a warrant of distress and sale founded on that adjudication, that the servant did not duly make oath before the magistrate that the sum claimed was justly due to him for wages. Nor can he plead that the sum claimed was not due. (Wilson v. Weller, 1 B. & B. 57; 3 Moore, 294; 8 Taunt. 521, S. C.) And, in the same case, Richardson, J., said, that where a magistrate has competent jurisdiction, and adjudges, and, on refusal to pay, issues a warrant of distress and sale, the goods taken under it are not replevisable. See further as to Replevin lying, Vol. I., title "Distress under Justice's Warrant."

Magistrates have no power under the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, to imprison a master for nonpayment of his servant's wages, in case of there being no sufficient distress. (Wiles v. Cooper, 1 H. & W. 560.) See "Distress under Justice's Warrant," Vol. I.

XVI. Tailors and Workmen within the Bills of Mortality.

Repeal of acts.

The 5 Geo. IV. c. 95, s. 1, repeals the 8 Geo. III. c. 17, regulating the wages and working-hours of tailors; and also the 7 Geo. I. st. 1. c. 13, excepting so much thereof as relates to the recovery of wages, or to journey-men tailors, or servants departing from their service, or refusing to enter into work or employment, as therein mentioned.

Leaving work unfinished.

By 7 Geo. I. st. 1, c. 13, s. 6, "if any person actually retained or employed as a journeyman tailor, or servant, in the art or mystery of a tailor, as aforesaid, within the limits aforesaid, shall at any time or times after the first day of May, 1721, depart from his service before the end of the term or time for which he is or shall be hired or retained, or until the work for which he was hired or retained shall be finished, or, not being retained or employed, shall refuse to enter into work or employment (after request made for that purpose by any master tailor, for the wages and hours limited, or to be limited and appointed as aforesaid), unless it be for some reasonable or sufficient cause, to be allowed by two justices of the peace within the limits aforesaid; then and in every such case, every person so offending, being thereof lawfully convicted as aforesaid, shall be sent to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding two months."

Appeal(a).

Sect. 9. "It shall and may be lawful for any person aggrieved by any order or orders to be made by any two or more justices of the peace, as aforesaid, to appeal to the justices of the peace assembled at the next general quarter-sessions to be holden for the city, division, parish, or place where such order shall be made, giving six days' notice of such appeal; and such justices in such general quarter-sessions, shall finally hear and determine the matter, and shall have power to award reasonable costs to either party, as to them shall seem just."

XVII. Disputes between Shoemakers and Workmen within the Bills of Mortality.

Purloining shoes or materials.

By 9 Geo. I. c. 27, s. 1, "if any journeyman shoemaker, or other person, hired or employed as such, within the bills of mortality, shall after the twenty-fourth day of June, in the year of our Lord, 1723, be accused by the master so hiring or employing such journeyman or other person

XIX. Arbitration between Masters and Workmen.

By 5 Geo. IV. c. 96, s. 1 (b), after reciting that it is expedient that the laws relative to the arbitration of disputes between masters and workmen should be consolidated and amended, and one general law made applicable to every description of trade and manufacture; it is enacted, that the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 90, c. 106, 41 Geo. III. United Kingdom, c. 38, and 44 Geo. III. c. 87, shall be and are repealed, save and except in as far as the same may have repealed any prior acts or enactments.

Sect. 2. "The following subjects of dispute arising between masters and workmen, or between workmen and those employed by them, in any trade or manufacture in any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, may be settled and adjusted in manner hereafter mentioned; that is to say, disagreements respecting the price to be paid for work done, or in as aforesaid, shall be and is hereby indemnified of, from, and against any information to be laid, or prosecution to be commenced, against him or her, for having offended in the matter wherein or relative to which he, she, or they shall have given testimony or evidence as aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "For the more effectually enforcing and carrying into execution the provisions of this act," enacts, "that on complaint and information on oath before any one or more justice or justices of the peace, of any offence having been committed against this act, within his or their respective jurisdictions, and within six calendar months before such complaint or information shall be made, such justice or justices are hereby authorized and required to summon the person or persons charged with being an offender or offenders against this act, to appear before any two such justices, at a certain time or place to be specified: and if any person or persons so summoned shall not appear according to such summons, then such justices, (proof on oath having been first made before them of the due service of such summons upon such person or persons, by delivering the same to him or them personally, or leaving the same at his or their usual place of abode, provided the same shall be so left twenty-four hours at the least before the time which shall be appointed to attend the said justices upon such summons), shall make and issue their warrant or warrants for apprehending the person or persons so summoned, and not appearing as aforesaid, and bringing him or them before such justices; or it shall be lawful for such justices, if they shall think fit, without issuing any previous summons, and instead of issuing the same, upon such complaint and information as aforesaid, to make and issue their warrant or warrants for apprehending the person or persons by such information charged to have offended against this act, and bringing him or them before such justices; and upon the person or persons complained against appearing upon such summons, or being brought by virtue of such warrant or warrants before such justices, or upon proof on oath of such person or persons absconding, so that such warrant or warrants cannot be executed, then such justices shall and they are hereby authorized and required forthwith to make inquiry touching the matters complained of, and to examine into the same by the oath or oaths of any one or more credible person or persons, as shall be requisite, and to hear and determine the matter of every such complaint; and upon confession by the party, or proof by one or more credible witness or witnesses upon oath, to convict or acquit the party or parties against whom complaint shall have been made as aforesaid."

Sect. 8. "It shall be lawful for the justices of the peace before whom any such complaint and information shall be made as aforesaid, and they are hereby authorized and required, at the request in writing of any of the parties, to issue his or their summons to any witness or witnesses to appear and give evidence before such justices, at the time and place appointed for hearing and determining such complaint, and which time and place shall be specified in such summons; and if any person or persons so summoned to appear as a witness or witnesses as aforesaid, shall not appear before such justices, at the time and place specified in such summons, or offer some reasonable excuse for the default, or appearing according to such summons, shall not submit to be examined as a witness or witnesses, and give his or their evidence before such justices, touching the matter of such complaint, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for such justices, and they are hereby authorized (proof on oath, in the case of any person not appearing according to such summons, having been first made before such justice of the peace, of the due service of such summons on every such person, by delivering the same to him or her, or by leaving the same twenty-four hours before the time appointed for such person to appear before such justices, at the usual place of abode of such person), by warrant under the hands of such justices, to commit such person or persons so making default in appearing, or appearing and refusing to give evidence, to some prison within the jurisdiction of such justices, there to remain without bail or mainprize, for three calendar months, or until such person or persons shall submit to be examined and give evidence before such justices as aforesaid."

Sect. 9. "The justices before whom any person or persons shall be convicted of any offence against this act, or by whom any person shall be committed to prison for not appearing as a witness, or not submitting to be examined, shall cause all such convictions and the warrants or orders for such commitments, to be drawn up in the form or to the effect set forth in the schedule to this act annexed."

Sect. 10. "The justices before whom any such conviction shall be had, shall cause the same (drawn up in the form or to the effect hereinbefore directed) to be fairly written on parchment, and transmitted to the next general sessions or general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place wherein such conviction was had, to be filed amongst the records of the said general sessions or general quarter sessions; and in case any person or persons shall appeal, in manner hereinafter mentioned, from the judgment of the said justices, to the said general sessions or general quarter sessions, the justices in such general sessions or general quarter sessions, are hereby required, upon receiving such conviction, to proceed to the hearing and determination of the matter of the said appeal, according to the directions of this act."

Sect. 11. "In Scotland all prosecutions under this act may be insisted on at the instance of the public prosecutor, and may be judged of, either by two justices of the peace, or by the sheriff of the county within which the offence may have been committed."

Sect. 12. "If any person convicted of any offence or offences punishable by this act, shall think himself or herself aggrieved by the judgment of such justices, before whom he or she shall have been convicted, such person shall have liberty to appeal from every such conviction to the next court of general sessions or general quarter-sessions of the peace which shall be held for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town or place wherein such offence was committed; and that the execution of every judgment so appealed from shall be suspended, in case the person so convicted shall immediately enter into recognizances before such justices (which they are hereby authorized and required to take), himself in the penal sum of 10*l.*, with two sufficient sureties in the penal sum of 10*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain, upon condition to prosecute such appeal with effect, and to be forthcoming to abide the judgment and determination of the said next general sessions or general quarter-sessions, and to pay such costs as the said court shall award on such occasion; and the justices in the said next court of general sessions or general quarter-sessions are hereby authorized and required to hear and determine the matter of the said appeal, and to award such costs as to them shall appear just and reasonable, to be paid by either party, which decision shall be final; and if, upon hearing the said appeal, the judgment of the justices before whom the appellant shall have been convicted shall be affirmed, such appellant shall immediately be committed by the said court to the common gaol or house of correction, without bail or mainprize, according to such conviction, and for the space of time therein mentioned."

Sect. 13. "No justice of the peace, being also a master in the particular trade or manufacture, in or concerning which any offence is charged to have been committed under this act, shall act as such justice under this act."

XXI. Assaults on Conspiracy to raise Wages.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 25, enacts, that where any person shall be charged with and convicted of any of the following offences as misdemeanors; that is to say, amongst others, of any assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages; in any such case, the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years; and may also (if it shall so think fit) fine the offender, and require him to find sureties for keeping the peace. See this offence fully considered, title "Assaults," Vol. I. p. 289.

XXII. Assaults on Seamen, &c. to prevent them Working.

Assault on any keelman, &c., to prevent him from working.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 26, enacts, that if any person shall unlawfully and with force hinder any seaman, keelman, or caster from working at or exercising his lawful trade, business, or occupation, or shall beat, wound, or use any other violence to him, with intent to deter or hinder him from working at or exercising the same; every such offender may be convicted thereof before two justices of the peace, and imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding three calendar months: provided always, that no person who shall be punished for any such offence by virtue of this provision shall be punished for the same offence by virtue of any other law whatsoever. See this provision, and the general clauses and law, more fully collected, title "Assault," Vol. I. p. 293.

See also, as to seamen in general, ante, "Seamen."

XXIII. Servants Firing Houses.

Servants firing houses.

By the 6 Anne, c. 31, s. 3, if any menial or other servant, through negligence or carelessness, shall fire or cause to be fired any dwelling-house or out-house, and be convicted thereof, by oath of one witness before two justices, he shall forfeit 100*l.* to the churchwardens, to be distributed amongst the sufferers by such fire, as to the said churchwardens shall seem fit; and if he shall not pay the same immediately on conviction, on demand by the churchwardens, he shall be committed by the said justices to some workhouse or house of correction, for eighteen months, there to be kept to hard labour. Vide title "Burning," Vol. I. p. 558, and a form there, p. 561.

By the 14 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 84, the same offence is provided against in exactly the same words, and the same penalty is imposed; but the words "common gaol" are added to the words "workhouse or house of correction." But this act is only applicable to offences of this kind in the bills of mortality, &c.

XXIV. Servant Stealing or Embezzling his Master's Goods.

Larceny.

In title "Larceny," Vol. III., full information as to this offence will be found.

Soliciting servant to steal master's goods.

It is an indictable offence to incite and solicit a servant to steal his master's goods, though the servant do not steal the goods, and no other act be done, except the soliciting and inciting. This was decided in the case of R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5; et vide Vol. I., p. 304.

And from the same case it appears that such offence is indictable at the quarter-sessions, as falling in with that class of offences, which, being violations of the law of the land, have a tendency, as it is said, to a breach of the peace, and are therefore cognizable by that jurisdiction. See ante, "Attempts," Vol. I.

Embezzlement by the servant is a good cause for his dismissal, ante, 491.

XXV. When Master may beat his Servant.

Master beating servant.

The master is allowed by law, with moderation, to chastise his apprentice for negligence, or other misbehaviour, 1 Bla. Com. 428; 1 Haw. c. 29; Winstone v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 469; 2 D. & Ry. 465; 1 D. & R. M. C. 339,

S. C.; title "Apprentice," Vol. I.; though he cannot delegate that authority to another. (9 Co. 76.)

But a master has no such power over a domestic servant. (Winstone v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 469; 2 D. & R. 465; 1 D. & R. M. C. 339, S. C.)

27. When Master answerable for Servant's Acts.

And if the master or mistress beat any workman or labourer, it may be a good cause of discharge, on complaint to the justices. (Dalt. c. 58, p. 141; F. N. B. 168; 1 Bla. Com. 428; 1 B. & Cres. 469; 2 D. & R. 465.)

Where a master, in correcting his servant, happens to occasion his death, it shall be deemed homicide by misadventure; yet if in his correction he be so barbarous as to exceed all bounds of moderation, and thereby occasion the servant's death, it is manslaughter at least; and if he make use of an instrument improper for correction, and apparently endangering the servant's life, it is murder. (1 Haw. c. 29, s. 5; title "Homicide," Vol. III. p. 316.)

And if the workman or labourer shall depart out of his master's service, and the master happen afterwards to lay hold of him, yet the master in this case may not beat or forcibly compel such workman or labourer against his will to return or tarry with him, or do his service; but either he must complain to the justice, for such workman or labourer's departure, or he may have an action of covenant against him. (Dalt. c. 121, p. 281, 282.)

See, further, title "Assault," Vol. I. p. 280, 281.

If a sailor or soldier be guilty of disobedience, disorderly conduct, or mutiny, he may be corrected in a reasonable manner to secure subordination and prevent mutiny. (See Abbott on Ship. 160; B. N. P. 19; 2 C. & P. 148; Watson v. Christie, 2 B. & P. 224; Capt. Kidd's case, 5 State Trials, 287; Chit. General Prac. 73.)

Sailor or soldier.

XXVI. Master may beat another in Defence of his Servant, or Servant in Defence of Master.

According to some opinions, a master shall not forfeit a recognizance of the peace for beating another in defence of his servant; nor the servant for beating another in defence of his master. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 24.)

Master beating another in defence of servant.

But in Leeward v. Basilee, 1 Salk. 407; 1 Ld. Raym. 62; B. N. P. 18; it was held by the court, that a servant may justify an assault in defence of his master, but not a master in defence of his servant; because he might have an action for the loss of his service.

In the case of Tickel v. Read, on an action of assault and battery, the defendant pleaded a special plea in justification, that he assisted his servant, whom the plaintiff was beating. It was contended, that the law will not justify a master interposing on an assault against his servant, by assaulting the person who beats the servant, as it doth a servant in like case interposing for his master; because it is the duty of the servant, who is hired to serve and be assistant to his master's person, but not so the master to his servant. On the other hand, it was contended that the duty of the master and servant is reciprocal; and if the servant owe to the master fidelity and obedience, the master owes to the servant protection and defence; and therefore that the defendant might well justify by this plea. Ld. Mansfield, C. J.: "I cannot say that a master interposing, when his servant is assaulted, is not justifiable, under the circumstances of the case, as well as a servant interposing for his master: it rests on the relation between master and servant." (Lofft, 215.)

See, further, title "Assault," Vol. I. p. 280, 281; Chit. Gen. Prac. 79.

XXVII. When Master answerable for Servant's Acts.

The master is indictable for a nuisance done by his servant, as for throwing dirt in the highways. (Tuberville v. Stampe, 1 Ld. Raym. 264; Carth. 425, S. C.)

Crimes and torts.

The proprietor of a newspaper is liable, criminally as well as civilly, for misconduct in the paper, e. g., for the publication of a libel, though he has nothing to do with the publication, and the whole is conducted by his servants. (R. v. Walter, 3 Esp. 21; R. v. Alexander, M. & M. C. N. P.; and see, further, title "Libel," Vol. III.)

27. When Master answerable for Servant's Acts.

But nevertheless it seemeth, that the servant also is indictable in these cases; for Mr. Hawkins says, that a servant is not excused the commission of any crime by the command or coercion of his master. (1 Haw. c. 1, s. 14.)

A baker is indictable for the sale of bread in which his servant had improperly mixed alum. (3 M. & Sel. 11.)

A master is liable in penalties for the illegal act of his servant, done in the conduct of the master's business, with a view to protect the master's property, though the master be absent at the time, and the act be done by the servant upon the exigency of the occasion. Where, therefore, upon the detection of smuggled tobacco in the house of his master, a servant, in his master's absence, and without his knowledge, procured a fabricated permit, with a view to protect the goods, it was holden, that the master was liable to the penalty for using the permit, because the circumstances in the case clearly showed it to be that of the servant of a fraudulent master attempting to conceal his master's offence, and to avert its consequences. And where the master is thus engaged in carrying on an illegal traffic, if the servant adopts means calculated to save the master, and which can have no other object, the act of the servant must be taken to be committed by him in the service and for the benefit of such master, and to be within the authority probably given by him in such a conjuncture. (Attorney-General v. Siddon, 1 Cromp. & Jerv. 220; 1 Tyrw. 41, S. C.)

If a servant commit a trespass by the command or encouragement of his master, the master shall be guilty of it, though the servant is not thereby excused, for he is only to obey his master in matters that are honest and lawful. (1 Bla. Com. 429.)

A master is not liable for the wilful act of his servant, as by driving his master's carriage against another, done without the direction or assent of the master. But he is liable to answer for any damage arising to another from the negligence or unskilfulness of his servant acting in his employ. (M. Manus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106; Comyn's Rep. 469; Sanderson v. Baker, 3 Wils. 317.)

If a servant driving a carriage, in order to effect some purpose of his own, wantonly strike the horses of another person, and produce an accident, the master will not be liable. But if, in order to perform his master's orders, he strikes, but injudiciously, and in order to extricate himself from a difficulty, that will be negligent and careless conduct, for which the master will be liable, being an act done in pursuance of the servant's employment. (Per Cur. in Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & Ald. 590; and see Bowcher v. Noidstrom, 1 Taun. 568.)

If horses are hired out to draw a private carriage, but are driven by the servant of the person who let them, he shall be liable for any injury done by them. (Samnell v. Wright, 5 Esp. 263.)

A person occasionally employed by the defendant as his servant, being sent out by him on his business, took the horse of another person, in whose service he also worked, and, in going, rode over the plaintiff. At the trial, it was left to the jury to say whether or not the horse was taken by the servant with the implied consent or authority of the defendant; and they having found a verdict for the plaintiff, the court refused to grant a new trial. (Goodman v. Kennell, 1 M. & P. 241; 3 C. & P. 167, S. C.)

The owner of a carriage hired four post-horses and two postillions of a livery-stable keeper for the day, to take him from London to Epsom and back. In returning, the postillion damaged the carriage of C.: held, that the livery-stable keeper, as owner of the horses and master of the postillions, was liable to C. for such damage. (Smith v. Lawrance, 2 M. & R. 1; see the case of Laugher v. Pointer, 5 B. & C. 547.)

A. and B. are partners in the business of public carriers: by a contract between them, A. finds horses and drivers for certain stages, and B. supplies for the remaining stages. They are, notwithstanding this division of the concern, jointly responsible for the misconduct and negligence of their drivers and servants throughout the whole distance; and it is no defence to B. that the servant by whom an injury is committed was the special servant of A., and hired and paid by A. alone. (Weyland v. Elkins, Holt, 227; Waland v. Elkins, 1 Stark. 272; see Moreton v. Hardern, 4 B. & C. 223; 6 D. & R. 275, S. C.)

A master is liable for the contracts of his servants, within the scope of his employment, on the ground of an authority delegated by the master expressly or impliedly to the servant. (Bac. Ab. Master and Servant, (K.)) The responsibility for the act of a domestic servant does not rest on the circumstance of the master being paterfamilias. The master's assent must in all cases appear either by express evidence thereof, or by the proof of facts, from which the law raises an inference that such assent was given. (Chit. Jun., Contr. 174.)

If a person, who has been in the habit of paying ready money, gives his servant money to buy meat for the use of the family, and the servant, instead of paying ready money, orders the meat on credit, and embezzles the money, the master is not liable. (Stubbing v. Heintz, Peake, 47.)

And so, where the master gives the servant money beforehand to pay for goods. (Rusby v. Scarlett, 5 Esp. 76, Ellenborough.)

But where he authorizes his servant to take up goods, and afterwards gives him money to pay, if the servant embezzle the money, the master is liable for the goods. (Id.)

When the master of a family is in the habit of paying ready money for articles furnished in certain quantities to his family, if the tradesman suffers other goods of the same sort to be delivered without informing the master, or satisfying himself that they were for his use, when, in fact, they were not, the master shall not be liable. (Pearce v. Rogers, 3 Esp. 214; and see Stubbing v. Heintz, Peake, 47; Filmer v. Lynn, 4 Nev. & M. 559; 1 Harr. & W. 59.)

A master is not liable for spirituous liquors ordered by his butler in the name of the master, unless he had on former occasions paid for goods so ordered, or there is evidence to show that the butler had authority from the master for so doing. (Maunder v. Conyers, 2 Stark. 281, Ellenborough.)

Where articles are furnished to the use of a master, though the servant was by agreement to provide them, the master is liable to the tradesman who furnished them. (Precious v. Abel, 1 Esp. 350.)

If a coachman go in his master's livery, and hire horses, which his master afterwards uses, the master is bound to pay for the hire of the horses, although he had previously agreed to pay the coachman a large salary to provide horses; unless the person of whom the horses were hired had some notice that the coachman hired them on his own account, and not for his master. (Rimell v. Sampayo, 1 C. & P. 254.)

But if a servant employ a tradesman to do any work who has not been employed before by the master, and the tradesman does the work without communication with the master, though the thing to which it was done was the property of the master, he is not liable. (Hiscot v. Greenwood, 4 Esp. 174.)

See, further, Chit. Jun., Contr. 174, 2nd. ed.

XXVIII. Enticing away, &c. a Servant, and Right to his Services.

The remedy now pursued for retaining a servant in the service of another is an action by the old master against the new one, and the servant, or either of them, for damages. But, in order to entitle a man to the action, it is as necessary now as when the 35 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 1 (repealed by the 5 Eliz. c. 4), was in force, that the new master should know of the servant's engagement with the other at the time of his retaining him, or that he should afterwards refuse to restore him upon information or demand. (Fawcett v. Beavres et ux. 2 Lev. 63; 1 Leon. 240.)

The retaining another person's servant during the time he has agreed to serve his present master, as it is an ungentlemanlike, so it is also an illegal act: for every master has, by his contract, purchased for a valuable consideration the service of his domestics for a limited time. The inveigling or hiring his servant, which induces a breach of this contract, is therefore an injury to the master; and for that injury the law has given him a remedy by a special action on the case; and he may also have an action against the servant for the non-performance of his agreement. (3 Bla. Com. 142; F. N. B. 167.)

And an action will lie for receiving or continuing to employ the servant of another after notice, without enticing him away. Therefore, where no fault could be imputed to the defendant for taking the party into his service in the first instance, because then he had no notice of such party's prior engagement, yet, as soon as he had notice of that fact, he ought to have discharged him. A person who contracts with another to do certain work for him is the servant of that other till the work is finished, and no other person can employ such servant to the prejudice of the first master: the very act of giving him employment is affording him the means of keeping out of his former service. (Blake v. Lanyon, 6 T. R. 221.)

(Hart v. Aldridge, 1 Cowp. 54.) On a special verdict, the jury found that the plaintiff, being a shoemaker, employed a journeyman to make up shoes for him, and retained him by the piece, but not for any certain time. This man being hired by another, and leaving his service, the work being unfinished, the shoemaker brought his action against the person so hiring him for enticing his servant out of his service. The question was, whether this person be a servant of the plaintiff, so that he may maintain an action and recover damages on his being enticed from his service; and whether there be sufficient upon the verdict to entitle the plaintiff to recover. Lord Mansfield, C. J., asked how they defined the word journeyman. It was answered, that they apprehended it to mean no more than a man who was out of his time, and was not master. Lord Mansfield said further, "Doth not a journeyman imply the particular relation of servant to the man? It is apparently a service. The jury have found expressly that he was hired by the piece; and this is a sufficient retainer. Journeyman, in the original etymology, is a servant for the day, in whose service the master hath certainly an interest. Many servants are taken to work by the piece; if otherwise, they would often be idle. This case lies upon the circumstance of his being found a journeyman; otherwise it might have been that the master took any who pleased to work for him to stay as long as he pleased, and go when he pleased." And Aston, J., said, "Every man is entitled to an action who hath sustained damages by wrong: therefore, if a servant be retained for any special work, and departs from this unfinished, an action will lie against any who seduces him to depart. And the seducer or enticer is much the greater offender." Judgment for the plaintiff.

No action lies for seducing a servant from his master, who had paid the penalty stipulated by his articles for leaving him. (Bird v. Randall, 3 Burr. 1345; 1 Bla. R. 373, 387, S. C.)

Nor for inducing a servant to leave his master's service at the expiration of the time for which he had hired himself, although he had no previous intention of quitting his master's service. (Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 734.)

Where negroes, in a state of slavery in a colony of Spain, escaped from their master's plantation, and took refuge and were received on board a British ship of war, whilst she was stationed at an island captured by his majesty's arms from the United States in time of war, and, after notice given to the officers commanding on the station that they were runaway slaves, the officers carried them to and left them at a British colony: held, by the Court of King's Bench, that a British merchant, resident in the colony, who claimed the slaves as his property, could not maintain an action against the officers for harbouring and detaining such negroes, although, by the lex loci from whence they escaped, slavery was permitted and tolerated. (Forbes v. Cochrane, 3 D. & R. 679; 2 B. & C. 448, S. C.)

See, further, title "Apprentice," Vol. I. p. 182.

A servant while in his master's service, in a trade, may solicit business from his customers for himself, when his service is at an end, and he sets up on his own account. (Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732.) And therefore if any loss is to be apprehended from such an attempt, it should be specially prohibited and limited to a certain distance from the place of employment, so as not to constitute too general a restraint of trade. (Young v. Timmins, 1 C. & J. 331.)

When servant may solicit customers.

If a servant, while in the employ of his master, make an invention, that invention belongs to the servant, and not to the master; but semble, that if the master employ a skilful person for the express purpose of inventing, the inventions made by him will so much belong to the master, as to enable him to take out a patent for them. (Bloxam v. Elsee, 1 C. & P. 558.)

When master entitled to servant's inventions, &c.

XXIX. Characters of Servants.

By the 32 Geo. III. c. 56, "for preventing the Counterfeiting of Certificates of the Characters of Servants," after reciting, that "many false and counterfeit characters of servants have either been given personally or in writing by evil-disposed persons, being, or pretending to be, the master, mistress, retainer, or superintendent of such servant, or by persons who have actually retained such servants in their respective service, contrary to truth and justice, and to the peace and security of his majesty's subjects; and whereas the evil herein complained of is not only difficult to be guarded against, but is also of great magnitude, and continually increasing, and no sufficient remedy has hitherto been applied:" it is enacted, "that if any person or persons shall falsely personate any master or mistress, or the executor, administrator, wife, relation, housekeeper, steward, agent, or servant of any such master or mistress, and shall either personally or in writing give any false, forged, or counterfeited character to any person offering him or herself to be hired as a servant into the service of any person or persons, then, and in such case, every such person or persons so offending shall forfeit and undergo the penalty and punishment hereinafter mentioned and in that behalf provided."

Sect. 5. "If any person or persons, having before been in service, shall, when offering to hire himself, herself, or themselves, as a servant or servants in any service whatsoever, falsely and wilfully pretend not to have been hired or retained in any previous service as a servant, that then, and in such case, such person or persons shall forfeit and undergo the penalty or punishment hereinafter mentioned and in that behalf provided."

Sect. 6. "If any person or persons shall be convicted of any or either of the offence or offences aforesaid, by his, her, or their confession, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before two or more justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, where the offence or offences shall have been committed (which oath such justices are hereby empowered and required to administer), every such offender or offenders shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*.; one moiety whereof shall be paid to the person or persons on whose information the party or parties offending shall have been convicted, and the other moiety thereof shall go and be applied for the use of the poor of the parish wherein the offence shall have been committed; and if the party who shall have been so convicted shall not immediately pay the said sum of 20*l*. so forfeited, together with the sum of 10*s*. for the costs and charges attending such conviction, or shall not give notice of appeal, and enter into recognizance in the manner hereinafter mentioned and in that behalf provided, such justices shall and may commit every such offender to the house of correction, or some other prison, of the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, in which he or she shall have been convicted, there to remain, and be kept to hard labour, without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding three months, nor less than one month, or until he or she pay the said sum so forfeited, together with such costs and charges, as aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "Whereas it most frequently happens, that no person is present at or privy to the giving of the character of a servant, except the persons by and to whom the same is given;" it is enacted, "that the informer, in any of the cases aforesaid, shall be, and shall be deemed and taken to be, a good and competent witness in law, notwithstanding he shall be entitled to a part of the said penalty where the same shall be levied, as aforesaid."

Sect. 8. "If any servant or servants, who shall have been guilty of any of the offences aforesaid, shall, before any information has been given or lodged against him, her, or them for such offence, discover and inform against any person or persons concerned with him, her, or them in any offence against this act, so as such offender or offenders be convicted of such offence in manner aforesaid, every such servant or servants so discovering and informing shall thereupon be discharged and indemnified of, from, and against all penalties and punishments to which, at the time of such information given, he, she, or they might be liable by this act, for or by reason of such his, her, or their own offence or offences."

Sect. 9. "For the more easy and speedy conviction of offenders against this act," it is enacted, "that all justices of the peace, before whom any person or persons shall be convicted of any offence against this act, shall and may cause the conviction to be drawn up in the following form of words, or in any other form of words to the same effect, as the case shall happen: videlicet,

Mr. Christian mentions a case tried at the sittings after Trinity Term, 1792, at Guildhall, against a person who had knowingly given a false character of a man to the plaintiff, who was thereby induced to take him into his service. But this servant soon afterwards robbed his master of property to a great amount, for which he was executed. And the plaintiff recovered damages against the defendant to the extent of his loss. This was an action of great importance to the public, and there can be no doubt but it was founded on strict principles of law and justice. (Parley v. Freeman, 1 Bla. Com. 432, Christian's Edit.)

Liability for giving false character.

In an action on the case, the declaration stated that the plaintiff's wife, having been retained by the defendant as a servant, was dismissed from the said service; that, after she was so dismissed, she had applied to a person of the name of Stewart, for the purpose of being retained and hired as a servant; that Mrs. Stewart was ready and willing to have hired and taken her into her service, if the defendant would have given her a character, and such character was satisfactory; that it was the duty of the defendant by law to have given her such character as she deserved; and then assigned a breach, that the defendant, not regarding such her duty, wholly refused to give her any character whatever; by reason whereof the said Mrs. Stewart refused to hire her into her said service. Plea of not guilty. On opening the pleadings, Ld. Kenyon, C. J., addressing himself to the plaintiff's counsel, said, "Can you make any thing of this action? I have read an abstract of the record; it is impossible to support this action." Upon the plaintiff's counsel replying, that he had no case, his lordship proceeded to observe, "There is no case; there is no foundation in law for this action. What one's real feeling would dictate, is one thing; but can you say that there is a legal obligation on one to give a servant a character at all? You are, indeed, to take care, if you do give a character, to give a true one; but you are not bound to give a character at all. I am confident that this action cannot be maintained." (Carrol v. Bird, Sittings at Westm. after T. T. 40 Geo. III.; 3 Esp. 201, S. C. And see Ashover v. Brampton, Cald. 11, ante; Chit. Gen. Prac. 78.)

Master not bound to give a character.

And when a master gives a bad character of a servant, the latter cannot maintain an action against the former, unless the account given be malicious as well as false. (B. N. P. 8.)

When liable to action for slander.

(b) As to this, see Vol. I., title "Conviction."

Even though the master make specific charges of fraud. (Weatherstone v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110.)

In an action for libel, it appeared that the defendant, with whom the plaintiff had lived as servant, in answer to inquiries respecting her character, wrote a letter imputing misconduct to her whilst in that service, and after she left it; and the defendant also made similar parol statements to two persons that had recommended the plaintiff to her. Held that neither the letter itself nor the parol statements proved malice, and that consequently the letter was a privileged communication, and the plaintiff not entitled to recover. (Child v. Affleck, 4 Man. & Ry. 338; 9 B. & C. 403.)

In order to maintain an action against a master for giving a false character of a servant, extraordinary circumstances of express malice must be proved. (Per Ld. Mansfield, C. J., Hargrave v. Le Breton, 4 Burr. 2425.)

To prove such express malice, evidence that the character given is false, is admissible. (Rogers v. Clifton, 3 B. & P. 587; King v. Waring, 5 Esp. 13.)

A. having discharged his servant, and hearing that he was about to be engaged by B., wrote a letter to B., and informed him that he had discharged him for misconduct. B., in answer, desired further communication. A. then wrote a second letter to B., stating the grounds on which he had discharged the servant. In an action by the servant against A., for a libel contained in this letter, it was held, that, assuming the letter to be a privileged communication, it was properly left to the jury to consider whether the second letter was written by A. bonâ fide, acting under a belief that he was discharging a duty which he owed to the party who was about to take the plaintiff into his service, or with an intention to injure the servant. (Pattison v. Jones, 3 Man. & R. 101; 8 B. & C. 578.) Et per Bayley, J.:—"Generally speaking, any thing said or written by a master when he gives the character of a servant is a privileged communication. But if the supposed libel be not communicated bonâ fide, it does not fall within the protection which the law gives to a privileged communication." (And see Kelly v. Partington, 2 Nev. & M. 460; Warr v. Solly, 6 C. & P. 497.)

 was convicted before us, W. G. and R. G., Esqs., two of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of , for that the said J. B., on the day of , in the year aforesaid, at the parish aforesaid, in the said county of , unlawfully did buy and receive, and take by way of sale, a certain quantity of silk, to wit, one bobbin of silk, the property of W. T., and of the value of 5l., of and from one M. D., who was then and there hired and employed by the said W. T., to prepare and work up for him the said silk, the said J. B. then and there well knowing the said M. D. to be so hired and employed as aforesaid, and the said J. B. not then having first obtained the consent of the said W. T. in that behalf, and the said W. T. not having at any time given his consent to the said J. B.'s so buying, receiving, or taking the said silk, or any part thereof, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And we, the said justices, do adjudge, that the said J. B., for his said offence, being his first offence, hath forfeited the sum of twenty pounds, to be applied as the law directs, and in default of payment of the same, we, the said justices, do further adjudge that the said J. B. be committed to the house of correction, to be kept to hard labour for the space of three months, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid (b).

(6.) Conviction under the 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 6, for buying embezzled silk, &c. (a).

Given under our hands and seals the day and year first above written.

Sessions of the Peace.

THE term "Session of the Peace" is used to designate a sitting of justices for the execution of those purposes which are confided to them by their commission, and by several acts of parliament. Of these sessions there are four kinds—petit, special, quarter, and general sessions: the first of which is a mere private meeting of justices, on their own motion; and the second an assembly summoned for a particular purpose,—as, licensing alehouses, or appointing the overseers of a parish, or the like.

Under this head, we are to treat only of the latter, which are similar in every respect, except as to the time of holding. Petit and special sessions will be noticed in another place, post, “Sessions, Petit and Special,” p. 622.

A general sessions of the peace is a court of record, holden before two or more justices, whereof one is of the quorum, for execution of the authority given them by the commission of the peace, and certain statutes and acts of parliament. (Dalt. c. 185; Cro. Cir. C. 13.)

It is a meeting of justices for the execution of their general authority. (Lamb. 379.)

The sessions cannot be held without the presence of two justices. (1 Bla. Com. 354, n.) And so strict is this law, that if there be not enough justices to hold a sessions, they cannot adjourn it to hold same legally. (R. v. Westington, 2 Bott. 733.)

The king may grant a commission of the peace for a county, and under such commission the jurisdiction of the justices named in it will extend over the whole of such county; or he may grant it for any particular district or portion of a county, exclusive of the jurisdiction of the justices of the county at large; or he may by charter give the power of acting as justices to certain officers in towns corporate, cities, and other places. In the latter cases, however, the justices of the county at large in which such district, town corporate, city, or other place, shall happen to be situate, can only be prohibited from interfering by special words in the commission or charter of the inferior jurisdiction, called technically “a non intromittant clause.” (R. v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 456; et vide title “Justices,” Vol. III. p. 554 to 558.)

According to Mr. Lambard, general and quarter sessions are synonymous terms; for he makes no distinction between them. This, however, is erroneous: for it seems that quarter sessions are a species only of the general sessions, and that such sessions only are properly called general quarter sessions, which are holden in the four quarters of the year, in pursuance of the 2 Hen. V.; and that any other sessions, holden at any other time for the general execution of the justices’ authority, which by the said statute they are authorized to hold oftener than at the times therein specified, if need be, may properly be called general sessions, and those holden on a special occasion, for the execution of some particular branch of their authority, may properly be called special sessions. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 47.)

I. Time and Place of Holding the Sessions.

Time of Holding.—By the 36 Edw. III. c. 12, it is ordered, that the justices shall hold their sessions four times in the year, viz. one session within the Utas of the Epiphany, the second within the second week of Midlent, the third betwixt the feasts of Pentecost and of St. John Baptist, the fourth within eight days of St. Michael.

How many sessions shall be kept.

But by the 12 Ric. II. c. 10, the justices shall keep their sessions in every quarter of the year at least; and by three days, if need be: on pain of being punished according to the discretion of the king's council, at the suit of every man that will complain.

This statute did not specify the periods; but in Henry the Fifth's reign an act was passed for that purpose, 2 Hen. V. st. 1, c. 4, which directs, "that the justices of the peace in every shire named of the quorum be resiant within the same shire, except lords named in the commission of the peace; and also except justices of the one bench and of the other, the chief baron of the Exchequer, serjeants at the law, and the king's attorney for the time that the same justices, chief baron, serjeants at the law, and the king's attorney, be intending, and occupied in the king's courts, or otherwise in some other place occupied in the king's service; and make their sessions four times by the year,—that is to say, in the first week after the feast of St. Michael, [now directed by 54 Geo. III, infra, to be in the first week after the 11th October, except in London and Middlesex,] and in the first week after the Epiphany, and in the first week after the clause of Easter, and in the first week after the translation of St. Thomas the Martyr, and more often, if need be; and that the same justices hold their sessions throughout the realm of England, in the same weeks every year from henceforth."

At what periods.

The strict regular exposition of this statute of 2 Hen. V. is, that if the feast-day fall upon a Sunday, the sessions shall be held in the week following, and not the same week. (2 Hale, 49.)

The holding of the Michaelmas quarter sessions was afterwards altered and regulated by the 54 Geo. III. c. 84, which, after reciting, "whereas the time now appointed for holding the quarter sessions for the Michaelmas quarter might be altered, so as to render the attendance at the same more generally convenient than it is at present," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, the quarter sessions for the Michaelmas quarter shall in every year be holden, for every county, riding, division, city, borough, and place, within England and Wales, and for Berwick-upon-Tweed, in the first week after the 11th day of October, instead of at the time now appointed for holding the same; and that all acts, matters, and things done, performed, and transacted at the time appointed by this act, for holding the said Michaelmas quarter sessions, shall be as valid and binding to all intents and purposes as if the same had been done, performed, and transacted at the time heretofore appointed for the holding of such sessions, notwithstanding any former act or acts to the contrary."

1. Time and Place of Holding the Sessions.

Sect. 2. "Nothing in this act shall extend, or be construed to extend, so as to alter or vary the time at which the sessions for London or Middlesex are now holden."

This enactment of 54 Geo. III. is directory and not imperative, see post, 585.

1 Wil. 4, c. 70.

These enactments still remain unrepealed, but the times of holding the general quarter sessions are now pointed out by the recent act of 1 Wil. IV. c. 70, s. 35, and 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 47, the first of which, after reciting that "the general quarter sessions of the peace are now directed to be held in each year in the first week after the eleventh day of October, in the first week after the Epiphany, in the first week after the clause of Easter, and in the first week after the translation of St. Thomas the Martyr; and whereas it will be expedient that the times of holding the general quarter sessions of the peace should be altered in part:" enacts, "that in the year of our Lord 1831, and afterwards, the justices of the peace in every county, riding, or division, for which quarter sessions of the peace by law ought to be held, shall hold their general quarter sessions of the peace in the first week after the eleventh day of October, in the first week after the twenty-eighth day of December, in the first week after the thirty-first day of March, and in the first week after the twenty-fourth day of June; and that all acts, matters, and things done, performed, and transacted at the times appointed by this act for the holding of the general quarter sessions of the peace shall be as valid and binding to all intents and purposes as if the same had been done, performed, and transacted at general quarter sessions of the peace holden at the times by law limited for the holding thereof before the passing of this act."

4 & 5 Wil. 4, c. 47.

1 Wil. 4. c. 70.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 47, intituled "An Act for preventing the Interference of the Spring Assizes with the April Quarter Sessions," [13th August, 1834], reciting, "Whereas by an act passed in the first year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled 'An Act for the more effectual Administration of Justice in England and Wales,' it is directed, that the justices of the peace in every county, riding, or division for which quarter-sessions of the peace ought by law to be held shall hold their general quarter-sessions of the peace (among other times) in the first week after the twenty-eighth day of December, and in the first week after the thirty-first day of March: and whereas in some counties of England and Wales the time usually fixed for holding the spring assizes interferes with the due holding of the last-mentioned quarter-sessions, and although the justices of the peace have authority to hold general sessions of the peace at other times of the year besides those specified in the said recited act, such sessions are not quarter sessions within the intent of various acts of parliament which give jurisdiction to justices of the peace in their quarter-sessions or in their general quarter-sessions; and for the purpose of preventing the inconvenience arising from such interference as aforesaid, it is expedient to allow to the justices of the peace a discretion as to the time of holding their general quarter-sessions, which they are now required to hold in the week next after the thirty-first day of March:" he it therefore declared and enacted, "That in every county, riding, or division for which general quarter-sessions ought to be held it shall be lawful for the justices assembled in their general quarter-sessions in the week next after the twenty-eighth day of December in every year to name (if they shall see occasion so to do) two justices of the peace, who shall be empowered, as soon as may be after the time for holding the spring assizes shall be appointed, to fix the day for holding the next general quarter-sessions of the peace for such county, riding, or division, so as such time shall not be earlier than the seventh day of March, nor later than the twenty-second day of April, and to give notice of the day so fixed by advertisement in such newspapers as shall be directed by the justices so assembled; and in every such case the general quarter-sessions held on the day so fixed and notified shall be valid, and it shall not be necessary to hold any sessions of the peace for such county, riding, or division, in the week next after the thirty-first day of March, any thing in the said recited act to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, 1. Time and Place of Holding the Sessions. that in every county, riding, and division where no other day shall be fixed in the manner herein-before mentioned, the justices of the peace shall hold their general quarter-sessions of the peace in the week next after the thirty-first day of March, as by the said recited act they are required."

Justices at Epiphany sessions may name two of their body to fix the day for holding the next general quarter-sessions.

The quarter-sessions are in fact variously holden in several counties, some at one day, and some at another; yet it hath been ruled, that these are each of them good quarter-sessions within the several acts that relate to quarter-sessions; for those acts, especially the 2 Hen. V., are only directory, and in the affirmative; and therefore, though the sessions are held on another day, according to the general direction of the 12 Rich. II., yet they are quarter-sessions. (2 Hale, 50.)

Proviso.

Are variously held in different counties.

Statutes 2 Hen. 5,

And, on the same principle, it has been recently decided, that although the 54 Geo. III. c. 84, provides that the quarter-sessions for the Michaelmas quarter shall be holden in the first week after the 11th of October, instead of the time then appointed for holding the same, this act also is only directory, and the Michaelmas quarter-sessions may be lawfully holden in another week than that so specified by the statute. (R. v. Justices of Leicester, 9 D. & R. 772; 7 B. & C. 6.) and 54 Geo. 3, only directory.

An original intermediate general sessions by magistrates, and not merely an adjournment of a quarter-sessions, may be held, under the authority of the 2 Hen. V. st. 1, c. 4. The point was raised on a question as to the validity of an indictment for murder found at such intermediate sessions, which was a sessions held in addition to the eight which are usually holden for Middlesex. (R. v. Mullaney, 6 C. & P. 96.)

Original intermediate session.

Sessions for London, Westminster, and Middlesex.—The sessions in London and Middlesex are, it may be seen, excluded from the operation of the 54 Geo. III. c. 84; and the regulations under which they are held are distinct in many respects from those which govern the other parts of the kingdom.

Sessions for London, Westminster, and Middlesex.

By the 14 Hen. VI. c. 4, in Middlesex, the justices shall keep their sessions twice in the year at least, and more often (if need be) for any riot or forcible entry.

And, in consequence of the large population of the districts of London and Middlesex, their sessions are in fact holden eight times in the year; four as quarter-sessions, not exactly at the times directed by the statutes, but as near to them as convenience will admit, and the other four as original general sessions, in the intervening periods; and both have equal jurisdiction to take and try indictments, except in cases where, by statute, jurisdiction is given exclusively to the quarter-sessions. (Burly v. Watson, 2 Bla. Rep. 1051.)

In Middlesex, the justices have a commission of oyer and terminer, under which they act at the time when their sessions are holden.

The sessions for the liberty of Westminster are only holden four times a year, and under a different commission of the peace from those for Middlesex; yet offences committed within the liberty may be prosecuted and determined at the county sessions; and if a party be bound by recognizance to prefer a bill of indictment, and prosecute for an offence, at the next session of the peace for Westminster, and do in fact prefer a bill at the next sessions for Middlesex, it is holden to be in compliance with the terms of his recognizance. cient number of justices do not appear. And a question arises, what is to be done in such a case? It seemeth to be generally understood that the sessions for that quarter of the year are irrecoverably lost. But the matter seemeth not altogether so desperate. For there are obvious remedies: by the first of which it may be possible to recover the sessions in the very identical week next after any of the respective holidays above-mentioned; by the latter, at all events, a session may be held. As to the former case, there cannot be time, indeed, within that week, to summon a sessions de novo; but neither is that absolutely necessary. A session may be holden without a previous summons; and the justices there may adjourn to another day, and issue their precept to the sheriff against the day of adjournment. To which purpose, Mr. Lambard (380) saith thus: "Albeit that the sessions be commonly, and most orderly, summoned by a precept in writing; yet it is not altogether of necessity (for the making of a lawful sessions) to have it so. For if competent justices of the peace do get men to serve, and thereupon do hold a sessions, without any precept before directed, all presentments made before them by twelve lawful men shall be of force in law; but no man shall lose any thing for his default of appearance there, because no man had notice of their sitting." Thus far as to saving the original sessions' week; for how many adjournments soever shall be holden afterwards in that quarter of the year, all shall refer to the first commencement of the sessions; and thereby some processes or recognizances may be saved which may possibly run for appearance at the sessions to be holden in the week next after any of the holidays above-mentioned (a).

But the general (and better) form of such instruments is otherwise. And certainly, though a session shall not be holden within a week after such feast-day, it doth not follow, that therefore it cannot be holden in any of the twelve weeks after. Undoubtedly, any two justices, one whereof is of the quorum, by the words of the commission of the peace, may issue their precept to the sheriff, to summon a session, for the general execution of their authority. And so far is the statute from saying, that if the sessions be not holden in the week next after such respective feasts as aforesaid, such session shall be void, the very same statute directs, that the justices shall hold their sessions more often if need be; and greater need cannot be than when the former meeting of the justices hath been frustrated. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 41.)

From the case of the King v. the Justices of London, 15 East, R. 632, it appears that, if sufficient justices do not appear on the day appointed for holding sessions, the magistrates may, indeed, afterwards hold a general session for general purposes; but it is not so certain that such session would be good as a quarter session, in respect of such matters as are expressly made cognizable at a quarter session only. The cases which have been supposed to prove that such subsequent session would not be good as a quarter session, do not establish that proposition, but merely prove that, where one original session has been actually holden, a second within the quarter cannot be also good as a quarter session. (R. v. Polstead, 2 Strange, 1263; R. v. West, Torrington, Burr. S. C. 293; see R. v. Mullaney, 6 C. & P. 96; ante, 585.)

The places where county sessions to be holden.

The Places where Sessions are to be held.—The justices by whom the precept to convene a quarter session is issued, may name any place within

(a) In consequence of the unusual pressure of business in the year 1815, the magistrates of Stafford submitted the following queries to the law officers of the crown:—"Whether, either by the commission of the peace or by statute, the justices are empowered to hold a general sessions or an adjournment of the quarter sessions for the trial of prisoners, at such times and places as they may think proper, and for that purpose to summon jurors and compel the attendance of prosecutors and witnesses? and if empowered so to do, whether it would be advisable to hold such sessions?" From the answer given to this, it appears that, where the quarterly meetings of justices are not sufficient for the despatch of business, they may adjourn the sessions to some intermediate day, instead of holding an extra-original session. This course, according to the opinion of the law officers alluded to, is unquestionably legal. See the opinion, 5 Burn's J. 24th ed. tit. "Sessions."

the county, division, riding, or liberty for which it is summoned, as that 2. The Mode of where it is to be holden, according to their discretion; and then all officers Convening, &c. and suitors of the court will be bound to give their attendance. (Dalt. 185.)

The 28 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 4, contains an enactment empowering justices 28 Geo. 3, c. 49. for counties to act, in certain cases, in a city being a county of itself. See the enactment, ante, "Justices," Vol. III. p. 554.

Also the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 63, ante, Vol. III. p. 554, empowers justices 1 & 2 Geo. 4. c. 63. for counties, &c., to act for such counties in exclusive jurisdictions, &c.

Also by the Municipal Corporation Act (5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 76, s. 111, 5 & 6 Wil. 4, c. 76. ante, Vol. III. p. 555,) in every borough in which the king shall not grant a separate court of quarter sessions, the justices of the county within which such borough is situated, shall exercise in it the same jurisdiction as they may in any other part of the county; and see further as to exclusive jurisdictions, ante, Vol. III. p. 555.

II. The Mode of Convening, &c., and who must attend at Sessions. Suitors, Witnesses, Attorneys, &c.

By whom convened.]—A general session may be convened by any two By whom convened. justices within the jurisdiction, one being of the quorum, or by the custos rotulorum, and any one justice, but not by the custos rotulorum alone, or by one justice alone. (Lamb. 375.)

How convened.]—The mode of convening such session is usually by precept, directed under their teste to the sheriff, for the summons of the sessions, thereby commanding him to return a grand jury before them, or their fellow-justices, at a certain day and place, and to give notice to all stewards, constables, and bailiffs of liberties, to be present, and do their duties at such day and place, and to proclaim, in proper places, throughout his bailiwick, that such sessions will be holden at such day and place, and to attend there himself to do his duty. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 42.)

Such precept shall bear teste, or be dated, fifteen days before the return, and ought forthwith to be delivered to the sheriff, to the end he may have sufficient time to proclaim the sessions, to summon and return the several juries, and to warn all officers and others that have business there to attend. (Nels. Introduct. 35.)

Without such precept to the sheriff, no one is bound to attend a general session; but if the session be holden after an irregular precept, and the parties necessary to the despatch of business attend, and the business be regularly transacted, the proceedings will be valid. (Lamb. 375; Reg. v. the Bailiffs of Ipswich, Ld. Raym. 1238; ante, 586.)

A precept for a general session, issued by two justices, cannot be superseded by other justices, but only by a supersedeas issued out of chancery. (Lamb. 378, l. 4, c. 2; 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 43.)

But it is not sufficient that the precept run under the name of the custos rotulorum alone; for he hath no more authority in this behalf than any one of his fellow-justices; and the words of the commission are, that the sheriff shall cause a jury to appear at such days and places as the said justices, or such two or more of them, as aforesaid, shall appoint. (Lamb. 382, supra.)

Mr. Lambard puts a case from Mr. Marrow, That if two or more justices appoint the sessions to be holden in one town, and so many more appoint a sessions in another town the same day, and holds they may be so held, and that the presentments in both are good; but that appearance at one is a discharge of service at the other. But it may be well questioned whether they are not both void; for they make two courts of that which ought to be entire and but one; for it doth not appear that the justices are required or enabled to hold more than one sessions at a time, and so, their authority being equal, and seeing no preference can be made by the priority of time, or nature of the service, they may be taken to be both void. However, the justices, by whose forwardness such division happens, or on whom such mis-

2. The Mode of Carriage is chargeable, are punishable for the same by information and fine, or being put out of the commission, as the case shall require. (Dalt. c. 185, p. 457.)

Proceedings of justices should be decorous.

Indeed, it is of infinite importance that the proceedings of magistrates should not only be substantially good, but also that they should be decorous. Wherefore, where two sets of magistrates have concurrent jurisdictions, and one appoints a meeting to grant ale licences, their jurisdiction attaches so as to exclude the others appointing a subsequent meeting; but they may all meet together on the first day. But if, after such appointment, the other set of magistrates meet on a subsequent day, and grant other licences, their proceeding is illegal, and the subject of an indictment. (R. v. T. Sainsbury, Esq., and another, 4 T. R. 451; see Vol. I. p. 100.)

Who must attend at sessions.

Who must attend at Sessions.—In this place it will not be necessary to do more than mention the names of the persons who constitute these sessions of the peace; information as to their appointment, offices, duty, liability, &c., may be found, under their respective titles, in this work.

They are as follows:—

Justices being interested.

(1.) The Justices of the Peace: these, without doubt, are compellable to appear at the sessions; for, without their appearance, the sessions cannot be holden. (Dalt. c. 185, p. 457.) But a justice ought not to join in an order at sessions wherein himself is concerned, nor ought his name to be in the caption. An order was quashed for that reason. (The case of Foxham Tithing, Wilts, 2 Salk. 607.) In the Queen v. the Bailiffs of Ipswich, it is laid down, that unless a commission of the peace nominates a quorum, all the justices appointed by it must attend at a sessions. (2 Ld. Raym. 1232; and see 9 B. & Cres. 859.) In R. v. Carlile, 4 C. & P. 415, the Court of King's Bench refused to grant a habeas corpus to discharge out of custody a person who had been convicted of libel at the commission of oyer and terminer at the Old Bailey, on the ground that when the verdict was returned only one commissioner was present instead of two, as required by law. It seems questionable, however, whether such a circumstance may not be assigned as error.

Custos rotulorum.

(2.) The Custos Rotulorum, who hath custody of the rolls of sessions, ought (by the commission) to be there by himself, or by his deputy, who is the clerk of the peace. (Dalt. c. 185, p. 458.)

Sheriff.

(3.) The Sheriff, also, by virtue of the commission, by himself or his deputy; to receive the fines, or return jurors, to execute process, and what else to his office doth appertain. (Id.) See post, "Sheriff."

Coroners.

(4.) All Coroners. (Id.) See "Coroner." Vol. I.

High constables.

(5.) The Constables of Hundreds, (that is, high constables,) and all other officers to whom any warrant hath been directed, in order to make return thereof. (Id.) See "Constable." Vol. I.

Bailiffs.

(6.) All Bailiffs of Hundreds and Liberties, in respect they are bound to give an account of all sessions' process. (Id.)

Gaoler.

(7.) The Gaoler; to bring thither his prisoners, and to receive such as may be committed. (Id.) See "Gaol." Vol. II.

Keeper of the house of correction.

(8.) The Keeper of the House of Correction, to give in a calendar and account of persons in his custody. (Id.)

Persons returned by the sheriff,

(9.) All persons returned by the sheriff, by virtue of the aforesaid precept. And the jurors, not appearing according to their summons, are punishable by loss of issues, which usually make part of the estreats of sessions. (Id.) or by recognizance.

(10.) All persons returned by Recognizance to answer, or to prosecute and give evidence. (Dalt. c. 185, p. 458.)

Suitors of the court.

Suitors of the Court, is a term which may be supposed to imply only those who have some voluntary suit to prosecute; but it may be used as descriptive of all persons who have any duty to perform, or any necessary business to execute, voluntary or official, before the court.

Clerk of justices.

A clerk to justices in petty sessions, appointed by order of such sessions, has no legal hold upon his office, nor will the Court of King's Bench inter-here if he is dismissed summarily, and without cause assigned. (Ex parte Sandys, Gent., 1 Nev. & M. 591; 4 B. & Adol. 863.)

As to the office of clerk of the peace, see "Clerk of the Peace," Vol. I.

Witnesses.]—We have already seen, that when a charge is made before a magistrate, he may bind over the party making the charge to prosecute and give evidence, and also all who can give material evidence; and, on their obstinate refusal, may commit them. And as to the proper course to be pursued in different cases of this nature, see title "Examination," Vol. II. p. 99, 101.

It may be now necessary to notice the process by which witnesses are compelled to attend.

When any offender is brought before a justice by warrant, or otherwise, for felony, or breach of the peace, beside the informant, and any witnesses who may happen to be voluntarily present (and whom, it has already been seen, it is the duty of the examining justice to bind by recognizance to appear at the session), there may be others known to him, whose testimony may be necessary, or at least useful, on the occasion. These the justice may issue his warrant to bring before him, to be examined touching the matter in question, [see Form, post, 622]; but it is more common, in the first instance, especially if they be respectable persons, to make it only a summons.

If the evidence be found by the justice on examination to be material, he must then be bound by recognizance, like the rest, to attend at the session of the peace, and give it to the court and juries there, in like form, varied only according to the circumstances of the offence; and if he refuse to enter into such recognizance, the justice may commit him to gaol; (2 Hale, 282; 1 Hale, 586; Bennet et Uxor v. Watson, 3 M. & Sel. 1;) wherein, if he obstinately continue till the session, he may be brought up to the court by writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum. 31 Car. II. c. 2; 44 Geo. III. c. 102. See "Habeas Corpus," Vol. III.

Lord Preston, being committed by the court of quarter-session for contempt, in refusing to be sworn to give evidence to the grand jury, on an indictment of high treason, he was brought, by habeas corpus, into the Court of King's Bench; and Holt, C. J., said, it was a great contempt, and that, had he been there, he would have fined him, and committed him till he paid the fine; but being otherwise, he was bailed. (R. v. Lord Preston, Salk. 278.)

The process, to bring before the grand jury or court such witnesses as have not been bound by recognizance to appear, whether on the part of the prosecution, or for the defendant, is by subpœna; which, whatever might have been the law in former times, (2 Haw. c. 46,) is now to be obtained in all cases whatsoever; (2 Wil. III. c. 3; 1 Anne, c. 9; 4 Bla. Com. 359; 2 Haw. c. 46;) for the assizes, from the Crown Office; for the sessions, from the clerk of the peace, or from the Crown Office. And the service of a subpœna, issued out of any court of competent jurisdiction, is declared to be equally good with service in the particular county where the party is required to attend; 45 Geo. III. c. 92. As to how a party may be punished for disobedience to the subpœna, see "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 101.

The writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum, for a witness in prison, can only be obtained by an affidavit made by the party applying, stating the confinement of the person whose evidence is wanted; that he is a material witness; that the trial cannot safely be proceeded in without his presence; and that it is about to take place at a certain time and place, with such other circumstances (if required) as may show the necessity for the application. It may be granted by any one of the judges of the superior courts in England and Ireland (44 Geo. III. c. 102). It is to be served on the person in whose custody the party is detained. See ante, "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 102.

Protection of Court to Suitors, Freedom of Access, &c.]—All persons may freely attend at the sessions for the advancement of public justice, and for the service of the king. And to this end they are (as it were) invited thither Protection, &c. of court to suitors, &c., freedom of access.

2. The Mode of Convening, &c. by a certain freedom of access, and by protection from common arrest: a thing that is incident to each court of record, and without which justice would be greatly hindered. So that, if a man come voluntarily to the sessions, either to prefer a bill of indictment, or to give information against another, or to tender fine upon an indictment touching himself; or do come compelled to make appearance for saving his recognizance, and be arrested by the sheriff, upon common and original process, in his coming thither, or during his tarrying there, it seemeth (Mr. Lambard says) that (upon examination of the matter under his oath) he shall be discharged thereof by the privilege of this court, even as it is used in the higher courts at Westminster. (Lamb. 402.)

But Mr. Hawkins puts it more doubtfully, saying, "it is questioned whether the sessions, as also all courts of record, may not discharge any person arrested during his journeying to or from such courts, or necessary attendance there, by process from any other court: however, it seems to be agreed that any such court may discharge a person who shall be so arrested in the face of it." (2 Haw. c. 1, s. 19.)

But now no doubt can be entertained on the subject; and this privilege is so incident to the duty of attendance on judicial proceedings, that it has been construed to extend to the case of a party to a cause attending an arbitrator, to be examined under an order of nisi prius made a rule of court. (Spence v. Stuart, Bart., 3 East, 89.)

On general principles, this privilege from arrest, cundo, morando, et redeundo, applies to the case of every person in necessary attendance on a court of justice; and, for this purpose, the sitting of commissioners of bankrupt, or of an arbitrator, is so deemed. (Arding v. Flower, 8 T. R. 534.)

Privilege from arrest, &c.

And it seemeth to have been agreed in the argument upon Col. Pitt's case, 2 Stra. 987 (which was an arrest in his return from parliament), that not only in the high court of parliament, but also in the inferior courts, the parties to the suit, and also the witnesses, are protected in going, continuing, and returning. This returning hath never been very nicely scanned, so as to require a man to go the direct road. Neither is the law so strict in point of time as to require a person to set out immediately after the trial is over; and for that was cited the case of Hatch v. Blisset, T. 13 Anne. She had a trial at Winchester assizes, which was over on Friday at four in the afternoon; she stayed there till after dinner on Saturday; and in the evening at seven was arrested going home to Portsmouth, which is twenty miles; and the court held, that she ought to be discharged, her protection not being expired, and a little deviation of loitering would not alter it.

But where a man is arrested by process out of the courts at Westminster, it doth not seem that the justices of the peace (unless the arrest be made in the sessions) have power to discharge him; but on application to the court from which the process issued (see Selby v. Hills, 8 Bingh. 166; 1 M. & Scott, 253; 1 Dowl. P. C. 257, S. C.; Kinder v. Williams, 4 T. R. 377; Ex p. Whitehead, 1 Dowl. P. C. 3), such court probably may discharge him, and punish the person who made the arrest.

Who shall act in the sessions as solicitor.

Attorneys.]—By the 22 Geo. II. c. 46, s. 12, no person shall act as a solicitor, attorney, or agent, or sue out any process at any general or quarter-sessions, either with respect to matters of a criminal or a civil nature, unless he be admitted and enrolled according to law, on pain of 50*l.* to him who shall sue in twelve months, with treble costs; and if any attorney shall permit any person to make use of his name in the said court, he shall in like manner forfeit 50*l.* (See Halk v. Williams, 1 C. & M. 23; 3 Tyrw. 158, S. C.)

Sect. 14. And no clerk of the peace, under-sheriff, or their deputies, shall act as solicitor, attorney, or agent, or sue out any process at such sessions, on the like pain of 50*l.*

Right of counsel or attorney to act, &c.

Right of Counsel or Attorney to act in Court.]—As to the right of a counsel or attorney to be present or act as the legal adviser of the party, see "Justices," Vol. III. p. 566; and as to the prisoner's right to have counsel, and the office and duties of counsel, see, post, 598.

III. The Mode of Proceeding at Sessions.

And herein—1. Of the Mode of Proceeding in General—2. The Trial of Time of meeting. Offences—3. The Trial of Traverses—and 4, The Hearing of Appeals.

1. IN GENERAL.

It is necessary that the court should assemble before twelve at noon on Hour. the day for which it is summoned; for by the 25 Car. II. c. 2, s. 2, the qualification oaths, &c., must be taken between the hours of nine and twelve in the forenoon.

The justices being met, the crier or bailiff usually proclaims the session in the following terms:

O yez, O yez, O yez,—The king's justices do strictly charge and command all Proclamation. manner of persons to keep silence, whilst the king's commission of the peace for this county of is openly read, upon pain of imprisonment.

O yez, O yez, O yez,—All manner of persons who have anything to do at the general quarter sessions of the peace for this county, draw near and give your attendance.

The commission, the king's proclamation against vice, &c., and the several statutes directed to be read at the sessions, ought now to be read by the clerks of the peace and the town clerks respectively. These were principally the following:—5 Eliz. c. 1, against popery (a); 30 Car. II. c. 3, as to burying in woollen (a); 11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 15 (a), as to ale measures; 1 Geo. I. c. 5, as to riots; and the black act, 9 Geo. I. c. 22 (a), which have been required to be given in charge at every quarter-session; and the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24; 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 32; 3 & 4 Anne, c. 18; and 3 Geo. II. c. 25 (a), concerning jurors, which are to be read in Midsummer sessions yearly; and 2 Geo. II. c. 24 (a), for preventing bribery and corruption in the election of members of parliament, which is to be read at every Easter session. Commission and statutes to be read.

It will not be wondered at, that, in the present day, when the time allowed to justices for the performance of their duties has become so much more valuable from the additional pressure of business, the practice of reading these statutes is discontinued. Some of them, besides, are now repealed, some have become obsolete, and the notoriety of the others renders such a course unnecessary.

The sheriff is then called on to return the several precepts directed to him, returnable on that day, that proceedings may be commenced thereon. Return of precept.

The call is thus:—Sheriff of this county, return the several precepts to you directed and returnable here this day, that his majesty's justices may proceed thereon. Second proclamation.

The sheriff makes his return accordingly.

The persons who attend to take the several oaths are next called, and such oaths are administered to them by the clerk of the peace. Oaths to be taken.

We have already noticed the act 25 Car. II. c. 2, and 1 Geo. I. c. 13, which direct persons to take the oaths between the hours of nine and twelve in the forenoon; and not otherwise. But it has been held a sufficient compliance with the statute, if the ceremony of administering the oaths of qualification for offices be commenced previous to the last of the hours of limitation appointed by the statute, and continued till all are sworn. Dick. Sess.

The oaths of qualification and indemnity having been administered, it is then usual for the clerk of the peace to call over the constables of hundreds, Calling constables, &c.

(a) These statutes are most of them now repealed: see the respective titles of ante, p. 332; "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. III; "Jurors," Vol. III.; "Bribery," Vol. I. "Popery," ante, p. 255; "Weights and Measures," post; "Riots," and of parishes, &c., which is commonly done (with respect to the defaulters on the first call) a second, and even a third time. On their not answering to the name of their respective parishes for which they serve, the court will set a fine on the defaulters.

The names of those returned to serve on the grand jury are now called over by the clerk of the peace (or in cities and towns corporate by the town-clerk). For matters relating to the qualification, &c., of those jurors, see title "Juror," Vol. III. p. 494, &c. The number called and sworn should not be less than thirteen, nor more than twenty-three; and it is not unusual at sessions, after sixteen or seventeen names have been called, and the parties have appeared, to consider the inquest as complete, and to dismiss the rest who have attended on their summons.

The ceremony of administering the oaths to the grand jurors being concluded, the chairman of the session ought to deliver his charge, proclamation having been made to keep silence while the charge is given (a).

The charge being concluded, the course is to call the recognizances, especially such as are to prosecute and give evidence, that so bills, which have not been previously prepared, may be drawn by the clerk of the peace.

The bills, as they are got ready—that is to say, drawn out fairly and engrossed on parchment (either by the prosecutor's professional adviser, or by the clerk of the peace), with the names of the witnesses written on the backs of them respectively, are delivered to the grand jury, and the parties bound to give evidence upon them, being sworn in court, are sent to the grand jury to give their evidence. It is presumed, of course, that they are all in attendance for these purposes, either by recognizance or under subpœna; to which

(a) "It is much to be lamented," says Mr. Dickenson, in his work on Sessions, "that this part of the chairman's duty is very frequently altogether omitted, and sometimes performed in a very cursory, and even slovenly, manner. The calendar generally presents sufficient occasion for observations on the general state of morals in the particular district; on the activity of justices, chief constables, and all officers of the peace; and on other subjects immediately connected with the duties of the day: and there can be few instances of a session occurring in which there is not some indictment or other to come before the jurors, on which some information may not be, at least, convenient and acceptable, if not absolutely necessary. Indictments for assault, which frequently originate in a spirit of party, malice, or revenge, and are usually one item in the business of a quarter session, present a fruitful source of observation; indictment of roads, another; and some modern statutes (ex. gr. those which respect the coin, embezzlement by servants, friendly societies, saving-banks, seditious meetings, and the regulation of the poor of all descriptions) comprehend so many more points of discrimination, as it is no disparagement of the discernment of such persons as usually compose the grand juries at quarter sessions, to say, must be much above their comprehension, without some explanatory remarks from the chairman, by way of previous charge."

These observations on the necessity for a charge, at all events naturally lead to some consideration of the sufficiency of the chairman to discharge this duty, and therefore to introduce a decided reprobation of a measure lately introduced into some counties, of the respective justices taking the chair by rotation. Nothing can be more subversive of regularity, consistency in practice, expedition in business, information to the jurors, authority over the advocates, or satisfaction to the country, than such a practice. To execute the various duties of chairman of a quarter session, as they ought to be executed, requires the personal qualifications of some legal knowledge, reasonable experience, an acquaintance with forms and technical proceedings, and a portion of that decision and authority, which can only be acquired by a confidence in the possession of these qualities, to at least a certain degree. Unless the chairman possess these requisites to some extent, the jury can receive no information, inexperienced advocates will run riot, and the county will not feel that respect for the court which it is both desirable and useful that it should do. It leads also to another consequence, which ought neither to be agreeable to himself or the bench, or the suitors of the session, viz., that the clerk of the peace, being the only permanent and stationary organ of the court, instead of its minister, becomes its master.

there can regularly be but one exception, and that arising out of a privilege given by a statute to prosecutors of offences committed within the county of a city, or town corporate, to prefer their indictments before the grand jury of the county adjoining, at the assizes for the same, on condition of entering into recognizance to pay the extra costs incurred by such proceeding, if the court shall so direct. In the case of this privilege being taken advantage of, it may be necessary to notice here, that the prosecutor, ten days before the session, must give to the defendant, as well as to the witnesses, notices in writing to that effect. (Dick. Sess. p. 90.)

The despatch of business in the sessions is now greatly assisted by the enactment of the 59 Geo. III. c. 28, "An Act to empower Magistrates to divide the Court of Quarter Sessions." That act directs, "that whenever and as often as any court of quarter session or general session of the peace shall be assembled for the despatch of business thereunto belonging, the justices then present may, on the first day of their being so assembled, take into their consideration the state of the business likely to be brought before them at such quarter session or general session; and if it shall appear to them that such business, if heard and determined by the whole court, is likely to occupy more than three days, including the day of their being so assembled, it shall and may be lawful for the said justices to appoint two or more justices, one of whom shall be of the quorum, to sit apart from themselves in some place in or near the court, there to hear and determine such business as shall be referred to them, whilst others of the justices are at the same time proceeding in the despatch of the other business of the same court; and that the proceedings so had by and before such two or more justices so sitting apart shall be as good and effectual in the law to all intents and purposes as if the same were had before the court assembled and sitting as usual in its ordinary place of sitting, and shall be enrolled and recorded accordingly."

Sect. 2. "When two or more justices shall have sat apart in manner before directed by this act, and orders, rules, and regulations, shall have been made for the apportionment of business, such orders, rules, and regulations, shall remain and continue in force as long as shall be thought expedient, without the necessity of renewing such orders, rules, and regulations at each succeeding session, to the intent that the same may become public and better known to all professional and other persons engaged in or in any manner interested in the business of such quarter session."

Sect. 3. "The clerk of the peace or his deputy (wherever two or more justices shall sit apart at any quarter session) shall be authorized and required to appoint a fit and sufficient person to record the proceedings so had before the justices sitting apart; and such proceedings shall be delivered over to the clerk of the peace or his deputy, and shall be equally deemed to be a part of the records of such session, as if the same proceedings had been recorded by the clerk of the peace himself; and it shall be lawful for the justices assembled at the quarter session to make an order upon the treasurer of the county to pay to the clerk of the peace such sum or sums of money as they shall deem a fit and reasonable remuneration to the clerk of the peace for such purpose as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for such justices to appoint an additional crier, and to grant him such remuneration for his care and pains as they shall deem reasonable, which shall in like manner be paid by the treasurer of the county."

This power of dividing, it may be right here to observe, may, according to the second section of the act, either be exercised at each particular session, as the necessity for it shall arise, or it may be provided for prospectively for any number of sessions that may be thought convenient; and, for the effectual execution of the purposes designed by it, the sessions are authorized to call upon the clerk of the peace to appoint a deputy, and for themselves to appoint an additional cryer for such engrafted or emanant court, and to remunerate them respectively for their labours by order on the county treasurer.

In noticing this act, Mr. Dickenson has observed, that, to whatever extent the authority confined by this statute be exercised, when the grand jury have received their instructions from the chairman, and have retired to their room, seems the proper moment for the division of the court to take place. The most natural distribution of the various subjects over which a quarter sessions of the peace now has jurisdiction, seems to be, that one division of the court should take that portion which requires the intervention of a jury, with the motions arising out of, or relating to, the commencement, the postponement, and the result of prosecution, whatever it may be; while the other is occupied with the exercise of the summary jurisdiction given to justices by statute, whether original, or by appeal from that of individual magistrates. (Dick. Sess. p. 102.)

2. IN TRIALS FOR OFFENCES.

A great part of the business of session consists of the arraignment and trial of prisoners: it will be proper in this place, therefore, to take some notice of the manner of proceeding thereupon; though in the title "Arraignment," Vol. I., some information touching these matters has been already given.

Mode of prosecution.

It is said generally, that all offences shall be prosecuted at the sessions by presentment, information, or indictment. (Com. Dig. Justice, (D. 9.)) But if jurisdiction be given to the sessions to "hear and determine," and the statute doth not say by information, this shall be by indictment, and not upon information. (Dalt. c. 191, p. 469.)

Where a power is given to a jurisdiction which does not ordinarily entertain actions, bills, or complaints, in general terms, to inquire of, hear, and determine the offence, it must be understood to mean by the common-law mode of proceeding, viz. by indictment or presentment. (Shipman, q. t. v. Henbest, 4 T. R. 109.)

Arraignment.

The bills of indictment having been delivered into court by the grand jury, the gaoler is called to set his prisoners to the bar, and the crier being called to make a bar, that is, to dispose of the company, that a way may be made open from the court to the prisoners, and that the court, jury, and prisoners may see each other, one of the prisoners is called to:—"A. B., hold up your hand."

Yet it is not necessary that he hold up his hand at the bar, or be commanded so to do; for this is only a ceremony, for making known the person of the prisoner to the court, and if he answer that he be the same person, it is all one. (2 Haw. c. 28, s. 2.)

Humanity towards the prisoner.

Mr. Hawkins observes, that every person at the time of his arraignment ought to be used with all the humanity and gentleness which is consistent with the nature of the thing, and under no other terror or uneasiness than what proceeds from a sense of his guilt, and the misfortune of his present circumstances, and therefore ought not to be brought to the bar in a contumelious manner, as with his hands tied together, or any other mark of ignominy and reproach; nor even with fetters on his feet, unless there be some danger of a rescous or escape. (2 Haw. c. 28, s. 1.)

And the court ought to exhort him to answer without fear, and to acquaint him that he shall have justice done to him. (2 Inst. 316.)

Indictment read.

The indictment is now read, and in cases of felony this is a proceeding of the utmost consequence, because the prisoner, not being, as it seems, entitled to a copy [see "Indictment," Vol. III. p. 444,] has no other means of knowing the precise charge to which he is to answer. Even at the time when our judicial proceedings were written in Latin, the 37 Edw. III. c. 15, required that this important document should be done in English. The charge should be laid in the second person, and be read slowly and distinctly—as thus: "You, A. B., stand indicted, by the name of A. B., late of, &c., in the county of, &c., for that you, on, &c.," reading the whole indictment in the same manner. If it be demanded by the prisoner, the indictment must be read so slowly as to enable his solicitor to take a copy as the officer proceeds—for the law entitles him to this privilege.

The reading of the indictment being concluded, the officer addresses the prisoner, "How say you, A. B., are you guilty of the felony whereof you stand indicted, or not guilty?" If the prisoner pleads guilty, the court may immediately record the plea, and either proceed immediately to give judgment, or examine witnesses as to the circumstances of the offence, for the guidance of their own discretion in determining on the sentence. But it is usual for the officer to explain to the prisoner the consequence of his plea, and to ask him again whether he persists in it; and there is a very prevalent practice among judges of assize of doing far more than this—of entreating the prisoner to withdraw his plea, admonishing him of his right to a trial, and manifesting the greatest reluctance to receive his open confession of guilt. How far this practice at sessions shall be adopted must be left to the good sense of the chairman. (Dick. Sess. by Talfourd, p. 340.)

3. The Mode of Proceeding at Sessions.

Plea—guilty.

If the prisoner has any matter to plead, either in abatement or bar of the indictment, as misnomer, autrefois acquit, autrefois convict, a pardon, &c., he shall plead it upon arraignment, without answering to the felony. (2 Hale, 219.)

For further information regarding the above pleas, see titles "Abatement," Vol. I., "Misnomer," Vol. III., "Auterfois Acquit," Vol. I., "Auterfois Convict," Vol. I., &c. And as to standing mute, see title "Mute," Vol. III., "Plea," ante, p. 210.)

If the prisoner plead not guilty, it was customary, before the enactment of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 1, for the officer to ask him, "How will you be tried?" and to direct him to make answer, "By God and my country;" to which the officer then rejoined, "God send you a good deliverance." These forms are, however, now abolished by the statute alluded to, which directs, that when a prisoner shall plead not guilty, he shall by such plea, without any further form, be deemed to have put himself on the country for trial, and the court shall, in the usual manner, order a jury for the trial of such person accordingly. The plea is, however, still recorded by the officer, who writes the words ponit se on the parchment record of the proceedings of the sessions.

Plea—not guilty.

The question, "How will you be tried?" may be well imagined to have been in former times of some importance, when it is remembered that trials by battle and ordeal were then in use, as well as by the country or a jury.

When a sufficient number of prisoners are arraigned, the petty jury are called on their panel by the clerk of the peace, in this manner: "You good men that are returned and impannelled to try the issue joined between our sovereign lord the king and the prisoners at the bar, answer to your names, and save your fines;" which done, and a full jury appearing, the clerk of the peace calls the prisoners to the bar, and informs them of their right to challenge, in these terms:—" These good men, whose names you hear called, and who appear, are those who are to pass between our sovereign lord the king and you, upon your respective trials. If, therefore, you or either of you would challenge them, or any of them, you must challenge them as they come to the book to be sworn, before they are sworn, and you shall be heard."

Jury called.

Jury challenged.

This, then, is the proper time for the prisoner or for the prosecutor to make challenges; for no challenge is good until a full jury appear. (R. v. Edmonds, 4 B. & Ald. 471; and see, further, "Jurors," Vol. III. p. 517, &c.)

Every prisoner may desire the right of challenge separately; and if he demand his right in legal phrase, "to sever in his challenges," the other prisoners will be desired to withdraw, that he may make his challenges alone.

Severing challenge.

If there be a defect of jurors, a party intending to challenge the array may pray a tales, and then make his challenge. See Vol. III. p. 523.

Praying a tales.

As to causes of challenge, and other information on this head, see "Jurors," Vol. III. p. 517, &c.

The challenges being concluded, and the jury full, the clerk of the peace calls the jury to be sworn, every man severally; and this is done, in cases of felony, in the following manner:—

Jury sworn.

3. The Mode of Proceeding at Sessions.

In misdemeanor.

"You shall well and truly try, and true deliverance make, between our sovereign lord the king and the prisoners at the bar, whom you shall have in charge, and a true verdict give according to the evidence. So help you God."

In cases of misdemeanor, the jurors are sworn four at a time, in the following terms:—

"You shall well and truly try the issue joined between our sovereign lord the king and the defendant, and a true verdict give, according to the evidence. So help you God."

The crier then counts the jurors, as the clerk of the peace reads their names, and asks them "are you all sworn."

Proclamation.

After the jury are sworn, in cases of felony, the crier makes proclamation as follows:—

"If any one can inform my lords the king's justices, the king's attorney-general, or the king's serjeant, on this inquest now to be taken, of any felonies or misdemeanors done or committed by the prisoner at the bar, let him come forth, and he shall be heard; for the prisoner now stands at the bar on his deliverance; and they that are bound to prosecute and give evidence, let them come forth, and prosecute and give evidence, or they will forfeit their recognizances."

The form used in cases of misdemeanor is similar to the above, with the omission of the term "felony," and the substitution of the word "defendant" for "prisoner," and the omission of the standing at the bar, &c.

Prosecutors and witnesses called.

The prosecutor and his witnesses are then called by name, and, on appearance, take the places assigned them in court.

Opening case.

In cases of misdemeanor, the prosecutor's counsel now at once opens trial; but in felonies, another form yet remains,—it is termed charging the jury.

Jury charged.

All the prisoners, except one to be tried, are put from the bar, and the clerk of the peace charges the jury as follows:—

"The prisoner at the bar stands indicted by the name of A. B. [reading the indictment, as upon the arraignment]; upon this indictment he has been arraigned; upon his arraignment, has pleaded not guilty; and for his trial has put himself upon God and his country, which country you are. Your charge, therefore, is to inquire whether he be guilty of the felony whereof he stands indicted, or not guilty, and to hearken to the evidence."

Witnesses sworn.

The witnesses, as well for the king as the prisoner, are then sworn thus:—

"The evidence you shall give to the court and jury sworn, between our sovereign lord the king and the prisoner at the bar, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

Trial begins.

The trial then proceeds. if the case be one of misdemeanor, and there be two or more counsel for the prosecution, the substance of the indictment, which the jury have not yet heard, must be stated by the junior; in cases of felony, this is of course superfluous, the indictment having been already twice read in the hearing of the jury; and, although in former times it was observed, it is now, in sessions practice, generally disused. It often occurs at sessions, that the case is of so plain a nature as not to require opening; when this is not the case, however, it is opened by the leading counsel, according to his instructions.

Opening of case by counsel.

In treating of this important duty, Mr. Serjeant Talfourd observes, that it ought to be confined to a simple detail of the facts expected to be proved:—"because the prisoner has no opportunity of laying his case before the jury by his counsel; and even the privilege of stating circumstances, however dryly, in such order and connection as may tend most directly to a particular conclusion is, in itself, no small advantage accorded to the prosecutor, and certainly should be exercised with great forbearance and caution. It is especially right for counsel to refrain from stating any part in the case, the proof of which, from his own brief, may appear doubtful; because he may thus produce an erroneous impression on the minds of uncultivated men, which the mere failure of the evidence may not remove, and on which the prisoner is generally quite unable to comment. For the same reason he should always forbear from stating confessions, which often turn out to be inadmissible; and should very rarely detail conversations, which are peculiarly liable to be misunderstood, and the whole bearing of which may be altered by the omission or transposition of a word. In cases of misdemeanor, the prosecuting counsel is not thus restricted, because here the defendant is allowed to make a real defence by his counsel, and, therefore, here the counsel for the prosecutor may not only state his facts, but reason upon them, and anticipate any line of defence which his opponent may probably adopt; but, even here, he should refrain from indulging in invective, and from appealing to the prejudices or passions of the jury; for it is neither in good taste nor in right feeling to struggle for a conviction, as an advocate in a civil cause contends for a verdict."

On an indictment against several persons, the counsel for the prosecution has a right before opening his case to the acquittal of any defendant he intends to call as a witness. (R. & M. 401.)

Acquittal of a defendant to make him a witness.

A prosecutor is never allowed personally to address the jury in the same manner as counsel; (see R. v. Price, 2 B. & Ald. 606; 1 Chit. Rep. 352, S. C.;) he can only be examined on his oath, in the box, like another witness. The cause, though instituted by him, is not considered his cause, but that of the crown; when no counsel, therefore, is engaged for the prosecution, there can be no opening; and the duty of examining the witnesses devolves on the chairman. In cases of felony, the depositions taken before magistrates are of much importance in assisting him in this duty; they ought, therefore, in all cases, to be returned by the magistrates before whom they were taken. In cases of misdemeanor, he can merely call on the witnesses upon the back of the indictment to be sworn, and give their own narrative.

Prosecutor not allowed to address the jury.

The reader who wishes for information respecting the parts of the charge to be established, the degree and nature of proof necessary, and the admissibility of witnesses, &c., is referred to title "Evidence," Vol. II.

Evidence.

On the case of the prosecution being closed, it is the duty of the chairman, in all cases where the prisoner has no counsel, and in cases of felony, though he has counsel, to ask him what he has to say in answer to the charge.

Case closed.

Before the recent stat. 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. (a), it was always discretionary in the magistrate, before whom the depositions were taken, to let any one see them; even the party accused had no right to demand a copy of the depositions, though in cases of treason or felony he must have been put in possession of a list containing the names of the witnesses. (Rex v. Holland, 4 T. R. 691; 1 Phill. Ev. 7th ed. 427, 8.)

Copies of depositions to be allowed to defendant.

But by that act, s. 3, "all persons who after the passing of this act shall be held to bail or committed to prison for any offence against the law shall be entitled to require and have, on demand (from the person who shall have the lawful custody thereof, and who is hereby required to deliver the same), copies of the examinations of the witnesses respectively upon whose depositions they have been so held to bail or committed to prison, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding three-halfpence for each folio of ninety words: provided always, that if such demand shall not be made before the day appointed for the commencement of the assize or sessions at which the trial of the person on whose behalf such demand shall be made is to take place, such person shall not be entitled to have any copy of such examination of witnesses, unless the judge or other person to preside at such trial shall be of opinion that such copy may be made and delivered without delay or inconvenience to such trial; but it shall nevertheless be competent for such judge or other person so to preside at such trial, if he shall think fit, to postpone such trial on account of such copy of the examination of witnesses not having been previously had by the party charged."

Sect. 5. "All persons under trial shall be entitled, at the time of their trial, to inspect, without fee or reward, all depositions (or copies thereof) which have been taken against them, and returned into the court before which such trial shall be had."

On the case being closed and submitted to the jury, the defendant or his leading counsel, when allowed to be heard, is entitled to address them.

On an indictment for an offence under felony, the defendant always might be heard by counsel. (Wood, Inst. B. 4, c. 5.)

On an indictment for treason the defendant shall not have counsel allowed to him, unless a point of law arise proper to be debated; nor a copy of the indictment. (2 Hawk. c. 39, s. 2, 13.)

And before the 6 & 7 Wil. IV. the same rule applied on an indictment for felony, id. But now by that act, sect. 1, after the 1st of October, 1836, "all persons tried for felonies shall be admitted, after the close of the case for the prosecution, to make full answer and defence thereto, by counsel learned in the law, or by attorney in courts where attorneys practise as counsel."

And by sect. 2 of the same act, it is declared and enacted, "That in all cases of summary conviction, persons accused shall be admitted to make their full answer and defence, and to have all witnesses examined and cross-examined by counsel or attorney." See the former law on this subject, title "Justices," Vol. III., p. 506.

And upon the trial of issues, which do not turn upon the question of guilty or not guilty, but upon collateral facts, prisoners under a capital charge, whether for treason or felony, always were entitled to the full assistance of counsel. (Fost. 232, 242) (a).

Court to be of counsel with him.

If he has no counsel, the court is to be of counsel with the prisoner, and ought to advise him for his good, and not take advantage too strictly against him. (Dalt. c. 185, p. 460.)

(a) On this subject, of the office of counsel for a prisoner, and of the objections he might address to the court on the prosecutor's case, in cases before the statute 6 & 7 Wil. IV., we shall extract from Mr. Talfourd's work on Sessions:—"In cases of felony, the prisoner's counsel has never a right to address the jury on the merits of the case; but he may now submit to the bench any point of law arising on the evidence, or any absolute deficiency of proof as to a part of the charge, which may entitle his client to an acquittal. Thus, he may submit that there is no evidence of any part of the offence occurring within the county where the trial is had; that there is a substantial variance between some material allegation and the proof offered to support it; that the offence, supposing the evidence to be credible, does not amount in law to that which is charged, as that an appropriation charged as a larceny is a mere breach of trust, or an embezzlement; for these are matters which show that the prisoner ought not to be put on his defence. He may sometimes submit that there is nothing for the jury to consider, as when the charge is not brought home to his client at all; and if the bench think so, they will direct an acquittal; but counsel will not be permitted to argue on the slightness of the evidence where there is any applicable to the prisoner, or to discuss questions which are properly for the jury, as questions of knowledge and intention. Where an objection is taken which the bench do not immediately overrule, the counsel for the prisoner are first heard in its support; the counsel for the prosecution then give their answer to it seriatim; and the leading counsel for the prisoner (if he has more than one) replies; after which the justices deliberate, and the chairman collects their votes, and announces their decision. Where the objection relates to the absence of some formal proof, which can be immediately supplied, the court always allows such proof to be given, for it will not permit justice to be defeated by a

On an indictment for a misdemeanor, it has been decided that the defendant cannot have the assistance of counsel to examine the witnesses, and reserve to himself the right of addressing the jury. (R. v. Parkins, 1 C. & P. 548; 3 Camp. 98; Ry. & M. 166, S. C.) But if he conduct his defence himself, and any point of law arises which he professes himself unable to argue, the court will hear it argued by his counsel. (Id.)

3. The Mode of Proceeding at Sessions.

The party accused may well be supposed to labour under many disadvantages, on being obliged to defend himself; any statement, therefore, which he may submit ought to be heard attentively and patiently; and although, as has been observed, it is not made on oath, and not supported by proof, still, if it carries with it the appearance of sincerity, and offers a reasonable explanation of the circumstances which seem to bear against him, it ought to be carefully weighed and candidly estimated by a jury.

The counsel for the defendant may comment on the case for the prosecution; he may adduce evidence to any extent, and even introduce new facts, provided he can establish them by witnesses. He cannot, however, assume as proved that which is not proved.

In cases of felony, the counsel for the prosecution never replies. In cases of misdemeanor, where witnesses are called (except merely as to character), the counsel for the prosecution has a right to reply in every instance, similar to that of a counsel in a civil action. If the witnesses are called merely to give evidence as to character, a usage has long prevailed among counsel in the highest criminal courts of forbearing to reply, which, however it originated, is now firmly established and acted on. But in the case of the King v. Bignold, 4 D. & R. 70; 1 M. & M. 85; D. & R., N. P. 59, Lord Tenterden revived an important rule, originally promulgated by Lord Kenyon, and by which a reply is allowed to the counsel for the prosecution, if the counsel for the defendant, in his address to the jury, states any fact, or any document which is not already in evidence, although he afterwards declines to prove the fact, or put it in writing. But it would be scarcely fair, as has been remarked, to apply this rule to a statement made by a defendant in person, and unsupported by evidence.

Right of counsel to reply.

Upon an information for a misdemeanor, if the defendant calls no witnesses, the counsel for the prosecution, except in the case of the attorney-general, is not entitled to a reply. (Peake's Case, N. P. 3rd ed. 310; but see R. v. Smith, Id., semb. contr.)

By one of the clauses in the bill which passed the House of Commons, in the seventh session of the present parliament, relative to counsel acting for prisoners in felony, it was proposed to be enacted, "that in all such cases of felony, and likewise in all cases of treason, misprision of treason and misdemeanor, if, after the close of the case for the person or persons accused, the counsel for the prosecution shall make any reply, the counsel for the person or persons accused shall be admitted to answer it." But this clause was struck out by the House of Lords.

It is the duty of the chairman, the case on both sides being closed, to sum up the evidence. His address ought to be free from all technical phraseology, the substance of the charge plainly stated, the attention of the jury directed to the precise issue to be tried, and the evidence applied to that issue. In cases of felony, it may be necessary to read over the whole evidence; if requested by the jury, this will of course be done, though, in general, it is better merely to state its substance.

Summing up.

Reading evidence.

If the jury cannot agree on their verdict at the bar, a bailiff must be sworn to keep the jury thus:—

mere accidental omission of counsel. recommend, but to direct the jury to acquit; and the officer ought immediately to take and record the verdict."

When the bench has decided that the case for the prosecution has failed in point of law, the chairman ought not to

3. The Mode of Proceeding at Sessions.

"You shall swear that you shall keep this jury without meat, drink, fire, or candle; you shall suffer none to speak to them, neither shall you speak to them yourself, but only to ask them whether they are agreed. So help you God." (Dalt. c. 185, p. 406.)

The jury coming back, the prisoner is brought to the bar; the names of the jury are called over, and the verdict taken as before. (Dalt. c. 18, p. 460.)

The officer then, in case of felony, desires the prisoner to hold up his hand, and addresses the jury—

"Gentlemen, are you agreed on your verdict? do you find the prisoner guilty of this felony whereof he stands indicted, or not guilty?"

The foreman then delivers the verdict, which, in cases of felony, can only be received in open court, and in the prisoner's presence, though the court may be adjourned during the deliberation. (Co. Lit. 227.)

In cases of misdemeanor it may be delivered elsewhere, and is often given in the defendant's absence. (R. v. Woodfull, 5 Burr. 2667.)

When the verdict is delivered, the officer proceeds to ask the same question as to the other prisoners, if there are any, included in the charge; and having received their answers in like manner, severally addresses them—

"Hearken to your verdict as the court recordeth it: you say A. B. is guilty [or, not guilty] of the felony whereof he stands indicted [and so of the others, if more than one]; this is your verdict, and so ye say all."

The verdict is at the same time recorded.

Proceedings on verdict of guilty.

The verdict of guilty having been returned, the prisoner, or the defendant, if present in court, is called upon to say why judgment should not be passed upon him. He may here offer something to the court in extenuation of his offence; or he may (says Blackstone, 4 Com. 375), at this period, as well as at his arraignment, offer any exceptions to the indictment, in arrest or stay of judgment; as, for want of sufficient certainty in setting forth either the person, the time, the place, or the offence. To this species of error alone the privilege is confined.

Sentence.

If nothing is offered in extenuation, or something so trifling as not to require further deliberation, sentence is generally passed immediately; proclamation having been made three times by the crier of the court, as follows:

"O yez, O yez,—All manner of persons are commanded to keep silence, whilst judgment is given against the prisoners at the bar, upon pain of imprisonment."

In trials for misdemeanors, this proclamation is not made, and in the less important cases of felony it is often omitted.

The prisoner is then placed at the bar, and sentence pronounced by the chairman. On the subject of this important part of a justice's public duty—in the exercise of which, as has been well remarked, the law has left the most to his discretion, with the fewest means of regulating his judgment—we subjoin a note by Mr. Dickenson, from his work on Sessions:—

"Where statutes have conferred upon individual magistrates, or even upon sessions, the authority of summary convictions, without the intervention of jurors, they have limited the penalties for the offences created or punished by them within narrow generally, but always within prescribed bounds; while, with respect to fines, imprisonment, and even transportation, they have, of necessity, perhaps left to them the same latitude of apportionment as to the judges of the superior courts, although frequently persons without the same professional experience, the same familiar acquaintance with the multiplied inducements to the commission of crimes, or the same means of discrimination respecting the effects of punishment. The present purpose is, therefore, to impress upon the minds of those who are only commencing their career in the public duties of magistracy, not merely the justice and humanity, and therefore the duty, but even the policy also, of exercising the most unprejudiced and temperate discrimination in the distribution of punishments, on account of the salutary consequences which may reasonably be expected from it. The punishments ordained by municipal regulations may not improperly be designated by the epithets 'admonitory,' 'exemplary,' and 'vindictive.' To discriminate further than this, might perhaps incur the imputation of fanciful refinement; but thus far it may not be too much to insist. The first suggestions of common sense and common benevolence need not wait for the sanction of experiment, for they are to be found in the very rudiments of civilization. To the novice in delinquency, punishment is intended primarily to operate as an individual admonition; and where the heart has not been absolutely depraved, but only the passions excited, or the temerity of youth stimulated by excessive temptation or the influence of bad example, it will frequently have its due effect, if administered with that moderation which corrects without degrading. Nemo repente turpissimus, is an adage as true in point of fact as necessary to be kept in mind by those, whose rank and duties call upon them to mark with precision of punishment the deviation of ignorance and frailty from the path of rectitude. On a repetition of offences, where it is ascertained, indeed, that admonition has failed to correct, to deter, by making the culprit an example, becomes a duty to society: for compassion to the individual may then well give way to the general protection of the social system. Nevertheless, till amendment has become entirely hopeless, the severity of punishment should be short of that which cuts off all retreat from an association with the vicious. The third, and last, stage of depravity is that alone in which moderation may cease to be considered as an attribute of justice. In that extremity, society has an ample right to manifest its resentment; and the administrators of its laws are justified in becoming the ministers of its wrath; because cutting off (by removal or disgrace) the morbid member from the general body becomes the only method of preventing the communication of contagion."

3. The Mode of Proceeding at Sessions.

3. IN TRIALS OF TRAVERSES.

The trials for misdemeanors are not in general brought on till after the felonies. Traverses tried.

Then may be called the persons bound by recognizance at the last sessions, to prosecute their traverses at the present sessions. For if a person indicted for an assault or misdemeanor do appear, and plead not guilty, and traverse the indictment, he shall enter into his recognizance to prosecute his traverse at the next quarter sessions. For, in Bumpsted's case, Cro. Car. 448, the whole court was of opinion, that justices of the peace may not inquire, try, and determine civil offences, in one and the same day; for the party ought to have a convenient time to provide for the trial.

A defendant cannot be tried on any traverse until he shall have obtained from the clerk of the peace a record of the proceedings, and a venire facias, which he must get returned by the under-sheriff, and his traverse must afterwards be entered with the clerk of the peace.

Where a bill for an assault or misdemeanor is found against a defendant not in custody, he cannot be tried at the same session, unless under the 60 Geo. III., 1 Geo. IV. c. 4, or by the consent of the prosecutors. See "Traverse," post.

And, on the trial of a traverse, the defendant must appear in the court, at the bar, in his proper person; and then the indictment is read to the jury: and the prosecutor and his witnesses are called to give evidence, and are heard; and if the defendant be found guilty, the court sets a fine upon him adequate to the offence, or other punishment as the law directs.

In cases of assault, the court frequently recommends the defendant to talk with the prosecutor,—that is, to make him amends for the injury done him; and if the prosecutor come and acknowledge a satisfaction received, the court will set a small fine on the defendant.

"But this," says Blackstone, "surely is a dangerous practice; and, though it may be entrusted to the prudence and discretion of the judges in the superior courts of record, it ought never to be allowed in local or inferior jurisdictions, such as the quarter sessions; where prosecutions for assaults are by this means too frequently commenced, rather for private lucre than for the great ends of public justice. Above all, it should never be suffered where the testimony of the prosecutor himself is necessary to convict the defendant; for by this means the rules of evidence are entirely subverted: the prosecutor becomes in effect a plaintiff, and yet is suffered to bear witness for himself. See "Award," Vol. I.

Sometimes the prosecutor and defendant agree before the defendant pleads to the indictment; and then the defendant comes into court in his proper person, and pleads guilty to the indictment; and upon proving, by a subscribing witness, a general release executed by the prosecutor, the defendant submits to a small fine, such as the court is pleased to impose. (Cro. Cir. C. 21.)

There are frequent prosecutions at the sessions for trifling assaults; in which case it is advisable for a defendant not to put himself to the expense of trying the indictment, but to give notice to the prosecutor that he intends to plead guilty to the indictment; in which case the prosecutor attends the court with his witnesses, and gives evidence of the nature of the offence; and then the court proceeds to fine the defendant: but the court will admit the defendant to call such witnesses as he desires, and will examine them by way of mitigation. (Cro. Cir. C. 22.)

IV. The Jurisdiction, Powers, and Duties of the Sessions.

1. IN WHAT MATTERS.

Criminal and civil.

The court of quarter sessions has a jurisdiction criminal and civil, given to it by the commission of the peace itself, as settled under the 18 Edw. III. c. 2, and 34 Edw. III. c. 1, and by the express provisions of numerous statutes.

Criminal jurisdiction.

1. CRIMINAL JURISDICTION.—As far as respects its jurisdiction to hear and determine indictments, it appears to derive its origin from the 18 Edw. III. c. 2, and 34 Edw. III. c. 1, already mentioned.

These statutes are as follow:—

18 Ed. 3, s. 2, c. 2.

18 Edw. III. s. 2, c. 2.—"Item, that two or three of the best of reputation in the counties shall be assigned keepers of the peace by the king's commission; and, at what time need shall be, the same, with other wise and learned in the law, shall be assigned by the king's commission to hear and determine felonies and trespasses done against the peace in the same counties, and to inflict punishment reasonably, according to law and reason, and the manner of the deed."

Who shall be justices of the peace, and what authority they shall have.

34 Edw. III. c. 1.—"First, that in every county of England shall be assigned, for the keeping of the peace, one lord, and with him three or four of the most worthy in the county, with some learned in the law, and they shall have power to restrain the offenders, rioters, and all other barrators, and to pursue, arrest, take, and chastise them, according to their trespass or offence; and to cause them to be imprisoned and duly punished, according to the law and customs of the realm, and according to that which to them shall seem best to do by their discretions and good advisement; and also to inform them, and to inquire of all those that have been pillors and robbers in the parts beyond the sea, and be now come again, and go wandering, and will not labour as they were wont in times past, and to take and arrest all those that they may find by indictment, or by suspicion, and to put them in prison; and to take of all them that be not of good fame, where they shall be found, sufficient surety and mainprize of their good behaviour towards the king and his people, and the other duly to punish, to the intent that the people be not by such rioters or rebels troubled nor endamaged, nor the peace blemished, nor merchants nor other passing by the highways of the realm disturbed, nor put in the peril which may happen of such offenders. And also to hear and determine at the king's suit all manner of felonies and trespasses done in the same county according to the laws and customs aforesaid; and that writs of oyer and determiner be granted according to the statutes thereof made, and that the justices which shall be thereto assigned be named by the court, and not by the party. And the king will, that all general inquiries before this time granted within any seigniorities, for the mischiefs and oppressions which have been done to the people by such inquiries, shall cease utterly and be repealed; and that fines, which are to be made before justices for a trespass done by any person, be reasonable and just, having regard to the quantity of the trespass, and the causes for which they be made."

4. The Jurisdiction, &c. of the Sessions.

Justices of peace may hear and determine felonies and trespasses.

At first, as we have seen, ante, Vol. III. p. 539, the justices were only conservators of the peace, and the subsequent power to hear and determine, given by these statutes, means only that such an authority may be delegated to them by commission. (1 Bla. Com. 351; R. v. Carter, 1 Stra. 442.) For this reason it is that a caption of an indictment found at the sessions, must show that the commission gave the court jurisdiction over the offence, as this cannot be intended. (R. v. Carter, 1 Stra. 442.) It has been said, that the commission of the peace was altered into the present form immediately after making those statutes; (R. v. Carter, 1 Stra. 442; 1 Bla. Com. 351); but some authors state, that it was settled as we find it at present by the judges about the thirty-third year of Queen Elizabeth. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 8.) The jurisdiction over indictments may be collected from the terms of the commission, which we shall here again set out, so far as it relates to the power of justices in sessions:—The first part of the commission will be found, Vol. III. p. 541. The second part is as follows:

Commission of the peace.

"We have also assigned you, and every two or more of you (of whom any one of you, the aforesaid A. B., C. D., &c., we will shall be one), our justices, to inquire the truth more fully, by the oath of good and lawful men of the aforesaid county, by whom the truth of the matter shall be the better known, of all and all manner of felonies, poisonings, enchantments, sorceries, arts magic, trespasses, forestallings, regratings, ingrossings, and extortions whatsoever; and of all and singular other crimes and offences of which the justices of our peace may or ought lawfully to inquire, by whomsoever and after what manner soever in the said county done or perpetrated, or which shall happen to be there done or attempted; and also of all those who, in the aforesaid counties, in companies against our peace, in disturbance of our people, with armed force, have gone or rode, or hereafter shall presume to go or ride; and also of all those who have there lain in wait, or hereafter shall presume to lie in wait, to maim, or cut, or kill our people; and also of all victuallers, and all and singular other persons, who, in the abuse of weights or measures, or in selling victuals, against the form of the ordinances and statutes, or any one of them, therefore made for the common benefit of England, and our people thereof, have offended or attempted, or hereafter shall presume in the said county to offend or attempt; and also of all sheriffs, bailiffs, stewards, constables, keepers of gaols, and other officers, who, in the execution of their offices about the premises, or any of them, have unduly behaved themselves, or hereafter shall presume to behave themselves unduly, or have been or shall happen hereafter to be careless, remiss, or negligent, in our aforesaid county; and of all and singular articles and circumstances, and all other things whatsoever, that concern the premises, or any of them, by whomsoever and after what manner soever in our aforesaid county done or perpetrated, or which hereafter shall there happen to be done or attempted in what manner soever; and to inspect all indictments whatsoever so before you, or any of you, taken or to be taken, or before others, late our justices of the peace in the aforesaid county, made or taken, and not yet determined; and to make and continue processes thereupon against all and singular the persons so indicted, or who before you hereafter shall happen to be indicted, until they can be taken, surrender themselves, or be outlawed; and to hear and determine all and singular the felonies, poisonings, enchantments, sorceries, arts, magic, trespasses, forestallings, regratings, ingrossings, extortions, unlawful assemblies, indictments aforesaid, and all and singular other the premises, according to the laws and statutes of England, as in the like case it has been accustomed or ought to be done; and the same offenders and every of them, for their offences by fines, ransoms, amerciaments, forfeitures, and other means, as, according to the law and custom of England, or form of the ordinances and statutes aforesaid, it has been accustomed or ought to be done to chastise and punish.

“ Provided always, that if a case of difficulty upon the determination of any of the premises before you, or any two or more of you, shall happen to arise, then let judgment in no wise be given thereon before you, or any two or more of you, unless in the presence of one of our justices of the one or other bench, or of one of our justices appointed to hold the assizes in the aforesaid county.

“ And therefore we command you, and every of you, that to keeping the peace, ordinances, statutes, and all and singular other the premises, you diligently apply yourselves; and that at certain days and places which you, or any such two or more of you as is aforesaid, shall appoint for these purposes, into the premises ye make inquiries; and all and singular the premises hear and determine, and perform and fulfil them in the aforesaid form, doing therein what to justice appertains, according to the law and custom of England; saving to us the amerciaments and other things to us therefrom belonging.

“ And we command, by the tenor of these presents, our sheriff of W., that at certain days and places which you, or any such two or more of you as is aforesaid, shall make known to him, he cause to come before you, or such two or more of you, as aforesaid, so many and such good and lawful men of his bailiwick (as well within liberties as without), by whom the truth of the matter in the premises shall be the better known and inquired into.

“ Lastly, we have assigned to you the aforesaid A. B., keeper of the rolls of our peace in our said county: and therefore you shall cause to be brought before you and your said fellows, at the days and places aforesaid, the writs, precepts, processes, and indictments, aforesaid, that they may be inspected, and, by a due course, determined, as is aforesaid.”

Comments on the commission.

*We have also assigned you and every two or more of you.]—*Here beginneth the second part of the commission, or the second assignment: all the business within which assignment belongeth to the sessions of the peace. (Dalt. c. 5.)

Must be two justices.

And by this it appeareth, that two justices may hold a sessions, but that one justice cannot. (Crompt. 6, 7.)

Justices of quorum.

*Of whom any one of you the aforesaid A. B., C. D., &c. we will shall be one.]—*This clause, which gives power to two or more justices to hear and determine offences, requires that at least one of those justices be of that select number, which is commonly termed of the quorum (from that word in the Latin commissions, Quorum,—unum esse volumus). For those of the quorum were wont to be chosen specially for their knowledge in the laws; and this was it which led the makers of several ancient statutes expressly to enact, that some learned in the laws should be put into the commission of the peace; and (to say the truth) all statutes that require the presence of the quorum do tacitly signify such a learned man. For, albeit that a discreet person (not conversant in the study of the laws) may sufficiently follow sundry particular directions concerning the service of the peace, yet when the proceedings must be by way of presentment or indictment, upon the evidence of witnesses, and oaths of jurors, and by the order of hearing and determining according to the straight rule and course of the law, it must be confessed that learning in the law is very necessary. (Lamb. 48, 49.)

But learning being now greatly advanced and improved since the first institution of this office, this distinction is not of much use, but all or most of the justices are now equally assigned to be of the quorum; and by the 26 Geo. II. c. 27, no act, order, adjudication, warrant, indenture of apprenticeship, or other instrument done or executed by two or more justices, which doth not express that one or more of them is of the quorum (although the statutes respectively require that one of the justices shall be of the quorum,) shall be impeached, set aside, or vacated, for that defect only.

And by the 7 Geo. III. c. 21, in cities, boroughs, towns corporate (a), franchises, and liberties, which have only one justice of the quorum, all acts, orders, adjudications, warrants, indentures of apprenticeship, or other instruments, done or executed by two or more justices qualified to act therein, shall be valid and effectual in law, although neither of the said justices are of the quorum.

4. The Jurisdiction, &c. of the Sessions.

7 Geo. 3, c. 21.

And now the 4 Geo. IV. c. 27, after reciting the 7 Geo. III. c. 21, "and whereas it is expedient that the provisions of the said act should be extended to such cities and other jurisdictions as have two or any other limited number of justices of the quorum qualified to act within the same;" enacts, "that, from and after the passing of this act, in all cases where the number of justices of the peace for any city, borough, town corporate (a), franchise, liberty, or other local jurisdiction is limited, and any one, two, or more of such justices only are of the quorum, all acts, orders, adjudications, warrants, indentures of apprenticeship, or other instruments, which shall be made, done, or executed, either in or out of the general quarter sessions or petty sessions, or any adjournment thereof, by virtue of any charter or grant, or by virtue of any act of Parliament made or to be made, by any two or more justices of the peace acting within the same, though neither of the said justices be of the quorum, shall be valid in law, to all intents and purposes, as if the said justices had been of the quorum; any grant, charter, law, or custom to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

4 Geo. 4, c. 27.

In the Queen v. The Bailiffs of Ipswich, 2 Ld. Raym. 1232, Lord Holt, C. J., lays it down, that unless a commission of the peace nominates a quorum all the justices appointed by it must attend at a sessions. And see 9 B. & Cres. 859.

By the oath of good and lawful men.]—That is, by a jury sworn.

Of all and all manner of felonies.]—That is, either by the common law or by statute. (Crompt. 8.)

Felonies.]—Though the commission doth not mention murders and man-slaughters by express name, but only felonies generally, yet by these general words they have power to hear and determine murder and manslaughter, and also may take an indictment of se defendendo, contrary to the opinions of Fitzherbert and Staundforde. But though the justices have this power, yet they do not ordinarily proceed to hear and determine these offences, and rarely other offences without clergy, both because of the monition and clause in their commission, in case of difficulty to expect the presence of the justices of assize; and also because of the direction of the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, [now the 7 Wil. IV. c. 64, s. 2, post, "Examination," Vol. II. p. 116], which directs justices of the peace, in case of manslaughter and other felonies, to take the examination of the prisoner and the information of the fact, and put the same in writing, and then to bail the prisoner, if there be cause, and to certify the same with the bail at the next gaol delivery: and, therefore, in cases of great moment, they bind over the prosecutors, and bail the party, if bailable, to the next gaol delivery; but in smaller matters, as petit larceny, and some cases within clergy, they bind over to the sessions: but this is only in point of discretion and convenience, not because they have not jurisdiction of the crime. (2 Hale, 46.)

Felonies.

So, also, an inquisition of self-murder, if the body cannot be seen, and so not inquired of by the coroner, may be taken before justices of the peace; for it is a felony, and within the extent of their commission. (1 Hale, 414.)

So, also, if a person hath committed treason, though the justices have no cognizance of it as treason, yet they have cognizance of it as a felony, and as a breach of the peace; and, therefore, a justice of the peace, upon information on oath, may issue his warrant to take the traitor, and may take his examination, and commit him to prison. (1 Hale, 580.)

High treason is not mentioned in the commission, and, therefore, the quarter-sessions have no jurisdiction to try that offence, though the justices may commit the offender to take his trial before a higher tribunal. (2 Hale, 44; 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 59; Bac. Ab. Justices of Peace, E.; Dick. Sess. 104.)

They had formerly, however, the power, under some ancient statutes, of hearing and determining particular kinds of treason, and it seems doubtful whether they may not now try prisoners for clipping coin, for it may be questioned whether the 3 Hen. V. c. 7, is repealed; and Mr. Curwood, in his edition of Hawkins, recognizes that statute as still existing. (See 2 Haw. P. C. 55; see, however, 2 H. P. C. 45.)

Not the practice to try capital felonies.

But although the justices in sessions have thus jurisdiction over almost all felonies, it is not the practice for them to try any capital felonies (a).

And it is now the common practice to try only petty larcenies and misdemeanors in this court; and felonies of a higher nature, as murders and felonies, are usually remitted for a more solemn trial to the assizes. (4 Bla. Com. 271, n. 2, 234, n. 6; 2 Hale, 46; 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 57; Bac. Ab. Justices of the Peace, E. 2; Cro. C. C. 14; Dick. Sess. 104, 5.)

But they have the power.

The sessions, however, have jurisdiction over capital offences of this nature; and, if they do proceed to judgment, in cases of difficulty, their judgment is not void, but is effectual till reversed for real error by a superior tribunal. (Lamb. 50; 2 Hale, 46.)

When sessions included in description of courts.

An indictment lies at the quarter-sessions for lighting fires on the coast, contrary to 47 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 66; for, though in one section "the general quarter-sessions" is omitted, yet it being in other parts of the act, the omission was merely a mistake. (R. v. Cock, 4 M. & Sel. 71; see further, Archb. Sessions, p. 6.)

Poisonings.

Poisonings.]—The word in the Latin commissions was veneficia; and before the 9 Geo. II. c. 5, which abolisheth witchcraft, was in the English translations rendered witchcrafts.

Witchcraft, &c.

Enchantments, Sorceries, Arts, Magic.]—These also are abolished by the said statute, s. 3, which enacts, that no prosecution shall thereafter be commenced against any person for witchcraft, sorcery, incantment, or conjuration.

And, from the words continuing in the commission when the crime itself is abolished, we may observe the averseness in the superior courts from altering ancient forms.

Trespases.

Trespases.]—This is founded on the 34 Edw. III. c. 1, which enacts that the justices assigned shall have power to restrain the offenders, rioters, and all other barrators, and to chastise them according to their trespass or offence. The word for trespases, in the old Latin commissions, is transgressionibus.

All inferior offences.

And upon this Mr. Hawkins observes, that the word trespass is of very general extent, and in a large sense not only comprehends all inferior offences, which are properly and directly against the peace, as assaults and batteries, and such like, but also all others which are so only by construction, as all breaches of the law in general are said to be. Yet it hath been of late settled, that justices of the peace have no jurisdiction over forgery or perjury at the common law; the principal reason of which resolution, he says, as he apprehended, was, that, inasmuch as the chief end of the institution of the office of these justices was for the preservation of the peace against personal wrongs and open violence, and the word trespass, in its

Forgery or perjury at common law not triable at sessions

(a) In sessions holden under charters, usual before the municipal corporation where the power of life and death, according to the peculiar expression, was specifically entrusted to the judges, it was act, 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 76, to try capital felonies. See title "Corporation," Vol. I.

most proper and natural sense, is taken for such kind of injuries, it shall be understood in that sense only in the said statute and commission, or at the most to extend to such other offences only as have a direct and immediate tendency to cause such breaches of the peace, as libels, and such like, which on this account have been adjudged indictable before justices of the peace. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 38.)

These exceptions, however, alluded to by Mr. Hawkins, are now considered to rest more upon authority than principle. (R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 15, 18, 20, post.)

The particular provisions of the 5 Eliz. c. 9, are such, that if the offence of perjury be indicted under that statute (which rarely, if ever, happens), the justices have jurisdiction over it by the express words of the statute. (Reg. v. Yarrington, 1 Salk. 406; 4 Bla. Com. 271, n. 11.) See ante, "Perjury."

The term trespasses in the commission, subject to these exceptions, not only includes direct breaches of the peace, but also all such offences as have a tendency thereto, and, on that ground, conspiracies have been holden to be cognizable by the sessions, not as actual breaches of the peace, but as tending to produce them. (R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 22, 23; R. v. Rispal, 1 Bla. Rep. 368; 3 Burr. 1320, S. C.; Haw. b. 2, c. 8, s. 63; Dick. Sess. 105.) And, for the same reason, to solicit a servant to steal his master's goods is a misdemeanor, though it be not charged in the indictment that the servant stole the goods, nor that any other act was done, except the soliciting and inciting; and such offence is indictable at the sessions, having a tendency to a breach of the peace. (R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5, post.)

So they have a jurisdiction over cheats in general. (R. v. Brayne, and R. v. Beale, 1 East, 183, n.)

Though they cannot take cognizance of forgery as a cheat; and therefore, where objections were taken to an indictment, for having placed or forged the letters R. E. at the bottom of a certain schedule, that the substantial charge, if any, was the commission of a forgery, an offence which the quarter-sessions have no jurisdiction to try; first, because in cases of misdemeanor, they can only try breaches of the peace, or such acts as have a manifest tendency thereto, and the word "trespasses," in the commission of the peace (the only word under which the jurisdiction could be sustained, if at all), has always had that construction; and, secondly, that whenever the sessions have exercised jurisdiction over any other description of misdemeanor, it has, by virtue of particular statutes, given them such jurisdiction in express terms: it was held, that as in effect it was an indictment for forgery, it was a case in which a court of general quarter-sessions of the peace for a county had no jurisdiction. (R. v. Gibbs, 1 East, 173.)

Nor can they determine an indictment for gaming, on the 18 Geo. II. (R. v. Frederick, 2 Ld. Ken. 116.) See "Gaming."

But their jurisdiction extends to assaults and batteries, Haw. b. 2, c. 8, s. 63; Bac. Ab. Justices of the Peace, E. 3; barratry, 2 Saun. 308, n.; 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 65; Bac. Ab. Justices of Peace, E. 3; libels, R. v. Summers, 3 Salk. 194; 1 Lev. 139, S. C.; 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 64; night-walking, and haunting of bawdy-houses, 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 64.

Forestallings, Regratings, Ingrossings.]—Over these offences, the justices in sessions had jurisdiction given to them by the 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 14, which is now repealed; but the same still continue offences punishable by indictment at the common law. See "Forestalling," Vol. II.

Extortions.]—The intent of this word is, to inquire of those who have done excessive wrongs; for wrong done by any one is properly trespass, but excessive wrong done by any one is called extortion; and this is more properly in officers, as sheriffs, mayors, bailiffs, escheators, and other officers whatsoever (as well spiritual as temporal), who, by colour of their office, have done great oppression and excessive wrong to the king's subjects, in taking excessive rewards or fees for doing their offices. (Crompt. 8.)

The justices have no express power given to them over this offence by any statute; upon which Mr. Hawkins observes, that justices of the peace have jurisdiction of all inferior crimes within their commission, whether such crimes be mentioned in any statute concerning them or not; for that all such crimes are either directly or at least by consequence and judgment of law against the peace; and upon this ground principally, he says, as he apprehended, it was lately resolved, that they may take an indictment of extortion. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 39.)

And of all and singular other crimes and offences of which the justices of our peace may or ought lawfully to inquire.—Which general words seem to include the vast number of offences, over which they have a jurisdiction given them by many statutes, and which are not particularly mentioned in the commission.

And also all of those who in Companies against our Peace in Disturbance of our People with armed Force have gone or rode.—By these words they are to inquire of riots, routs, and all unlawful assemblies. (Crompt. 8.) See ante, "Riot."

Weights or Measures.—This clause was first established by the 34 Edw. III. c. 5. And they have further power given herein by several subsequent statutes, all which statutes must be strictly pursued in relation to the several offences. See post, "Weights and Measures."

Selling Victuals.—Over this they had a jurisdiction given to them by the 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 15, intituled, "The Bill of Conspiracies of Victuallers and Craftsmen." But that act is repealed by the 5 Geo. IV. c. 95.

And also of all Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Stewards, Constables, Keepers of Gaols, and other Officers, who in the execution of their Offices have unduly behaved themselves.—This clause is as ancient as the 4 Edw. III. c. 2, on which it is founded.

And it hath been suffered to remain in the commission, not as of any necessity at all (since it is incident to every court of record to do correction upon whatsoever officers and ministers do serve them), but only for the plainer declaration of the power of these justices in that behalf, and for the more assured terrifying of such as shall, either of contempt or negligence, do that which is amiss. (Lamb. 49; see R. v. Jaram, 7 D. & R. 163, post.)

And to inspect all Indictments so before you taken.—But they cannot proceed upon indictments taken before coroners, or justices of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, but on indictments taken before the sheriff in his tourn they may proceed. (Hale's Sum. 168.)

Or before other our late Justices.—This is founded on the 11 Hen. VI. c. 6, which enacts that no indictment, plea, suit, or process, shall be discontinued by a new commission; but the justices in the new commission, after they shall have the records of the same pleas and processes before them, shall have power to continue the said pleas and processes, and to hear and finally determine the same, as the former justices might have done.

And to make and continue Processes.—This is by venire, distringas, capias, or exigent, as the case shall be. And it differs from a warrant, in that a warrant is only to attach and convene the party before indictment, and may be either in the name of the king or of the justice; but the process issues after indictment, and must be in the name of the king only. (Dalt. c. 193.)

Until they can be taken, surrender themselves, or be outlawed.—For the process is sent out to this end, that either the party shall come in to answer and to be justified by the law; or else that he shall, for his contumacy, be deprived of the benefit of the law. (Lamb. 521.)

Or be outlawed.—It is observable that the power of the justices stops here, and goes no further; so that they cannot make out a capias utlagatum, but the outlawry must be certified into the King's Bench. (Lamb. 521; 2 Hale, 52.)

But by 12 Rep. 103, they that have power to award process of outlawry have also a power to award a capias utlagatum, as incident to their authority and jurisdiction.

Hear and Determine.]—This power was first given to them by the 18 Edw. III. st. 2, c. 2, and afterwards confirmed and enlarged by divers other statutes.

Yet this clause doth not in propriety make the justices of the peace justices of oyer and terminer, because that is a distinct commission; and, therefore, a statute, limiting an offence to be heard and determined before justices of oyer and terminer, gives not the power therein to justices of the peace. (Hale's Sum. 165, infra.)

And thereupon, it is said, that although they have power to hear and determine felonies, yet they cannot deliver a person suspected thereof by proclamation (as justices of gaol delivery may) until an inquisition taken; but if an inquisition be taken, and an ignoramus found, they may deliver him, as it seemeth. (2 Hale, 46, 47.)

Likewise, although commissioners of oyer and terminer may indict and try at the same sessions, yet it hath been ruled otherwise in cases of justices of the peace, unless by consent: but certainly constant usage and learned opinion must give that exposition upon those resolutions, that it must extend only to popular actions or indictments for misdemeanors, and not to cases of felony. (2 Hale, 48.)

By Fines, Ransoms, Amerciaments, Forfeitures, and other Means, to chastise and punish.]—Hereby the justices are now armed with far more ample authority and power than the ancient conservators of the peace were; for they had no power to convene the offender before them, nor to examine, hear, or determine the cause, nor to punish, except in some few cases, as mentioned before. (Dalt. c. 6.)

But the justices may not award any recompense to the party wronged, otherwise than by persuasion. (Dalt. c. 5.)

Nevertheless, these words are inserted, not as of necessity (for the punishment of all offenders is implied in the word determine), but for the plainer declaration of the justices' power, and for the more assured terrifying of offenders. (Lamb. 49.)

If a Case of Difficulty shall happen to arise.]—That is, a difficulty in point of law. (Cromp. 6; vide post, 617.)

Then let Judgment in nowise be given.]—But yet, if they list to proceed without the judge's advice, their judgment is not void: but it standeth good and effectual, until it be reversed by a superior court. (Lamb. 50.)

At certain Days and Places.]—That is, when they hold their sessions, which they are empowered and required to do by several statutes.

Lastly, we have assigned you, the aforesaid A. B., Keeper of the Rolls.]—This is in pursuance of the 37 Hen. VIII. c. 1, which enacts, that the lord chancellor shall, by commission, assign such person to be custos rotulorum, as the king shall by writing, under his hand, appoint. See, ante, "Custos Rotulorum," Vol. I.

It seems to be now clear that justices of the peace may try offences, though created by statute since the institution of their office, unless there be some special direction that the offence shall be heard and determined before another tribunal (a).

Where, indeed, a statute limits an offence to be tried before justices of oyer and terminer, the sessions cannot try it; for, though justices of the peace are authorized to hear and determine, they are not what the law intends by justices of oyer and terminer, as there is a distinct commission of that name. (1 Hale, 165.) Where, however, a statute creates a misdemeanor, and directs that the offender shall be committed unto the next court of oyer and terminer, great session, or gaol delivery, and, in case of indictment found, shall plead, and be tried without traverse, he may be prosecuted at the court of quarter-sessions. In the result, it appears that the sessions have power to try all indictable offences, whether by common law or statute, with the exception of treason, misprision of treason, præmunire, forgery, and perjury, at common law; and the two last exceptions are not capable of being referred to any principle, as the reason assigned, that they do not directly tend to produce breaches of the peace, would equally apply to many other offences over which the sessions have undoubted jurisdiction. In a case where a question was raised, whether the sessions had power to try an indictment for a solicitation of a party to steal (a)—Lord Kenyon said, “I am clearly of opinion, that it is indictable at the quarter-sessions, as falling in with that class of offences which, being violations of the law of the land, have a tendency, as has been said, to a breach of the peace, and are, therefore, cognizable by that jurisdiction. To this general rule there are indeed two exceptions—forgery and perjury: why excepted, I know not; but, having been expressly so adjudged, I will not break through the rules of law. No other exceptions, however, have been allowed; and, therefore, this falls within the general rule.” (Talf. Dick. Sess. 89.)

IV. c. 66, title “Forgery,” Vol. II., and all the offences relating to coin enumerated in the 2 Wil. IV. c. 34, title “Coin,” the abduction of women, bankrupts not surrendering under their commission or concealing their effects, breaking down bridges and banks of rivers, taking rewards for helping to stolen goods, personating any officer, seaman, or other persons in order to receive any wages, pay, allowance, or prize money due or supposed to be due, or any out-pensioner of Greenwich hospital in order to receive any out-pension allowance due or supposed to be due, sending threatening letters and using threats to extort money, larceny on navigable rivers and canals, and stealing and destroying goods in progress of manufacture, and larcenies after a previous conviction, embezzlement, larceny by clerks and servants, and receivers of stolen goods, whether such person or persons shall be charged as principal offenders or as accessories before or after the fact.” 4 & 5 Wil. The jurisdiction of the sessions of the peace as to taking or finding indictments is not, it will be seen, affected by the above statute; the sessions may proceed as heretofore, up to the taking of the indictment, in all the cases before enumerated as were before within their jurisdiction, but the trial must take place in the Central Criminal Court.

4. The Jurisdiction, &c. of the Sessions.

2. CIVIL JURISDICTION.]—The civil jurisdiction of the court of quarter-sessions may be said to consist of that part of their business which is entirely submitted to the judgment of the court, without the intervention of the jury. This, it may be seen, is noticed slightly in the commission: but by far the greater part of the civil business of the sessions comes before the justices as a court of appeal deriving their authority from various statutes. This appellant jurisdiction extends over penal convictions, orders of justices, and matters connected with the administration of the poor laws, the vagrant laws, and the highway and a variety of other acts; and is discussed, in its various branches, through the titles of this work. On the subject of appeal itself, generally one of the most difficult and important on which the sessions are required to determine, information will be found under title “Appeal,” Vol. I.

2. Civil jurisdiction.

Appellant.

Besides this appellant jurisdiction, the sessions have, in some matters, an original jurisdiction. They have, in general, an original jurisdiction to do whatever may be done by two magistrates, except where the statute empowering the magistrate to act gives an appeal to the sessions.

Original.

This jurisdiction is most usually exercised in cases of apprenticeship, in the allowance of articles of the peace, and in the disposal of vagrants committed to the sessions for punishment. Information regarding these matters will be found under their respective titles.

In this place, it will only be necessary to give some cases illustrative of the general nature of this civil jurisdiction.

Where authority is given to two justices to do any act, the sessions may do it in all cases, except where appeal is directed to the sessions. (Per Holt, C. J., R. v. Inhabitants of Boughton in Kent, 1 Ld. Raym. 426.)

The sessions may do what two justices may.

But the sessions cannot suppress a licensed alehouse, unless for disorder. (R. v. Randall, 2 Salk. 470.)

Though, in certain and particular cases, an action may be brought at the assizes or the sessions, by the 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 14, 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 39, and 21 Jac. I. c. 18, s. 12, an action, bill, or plaint, cannot, by the common law, be brought at the assizes or the sessions. (4 T. R. 115.)

Whether action, &c. lies in.

The 1 Jac. I. c. 22, gives certain penalties to be recovered (s. 46) by action of debt or information in the courts at Westminster; and the 50th section gives jurisdiction to the justices of assize of gaol delivery and of the peace to inquire of the premises, and to hear or determine the same; under the latter clause, the inferior courts can only proceed by indictment or presentment; and the informer may bring an action of debt in the superior courts at Westminster, notwithstanding the 21 Jac. I. c. 4. (Id.)

The true meaning of the 21 Jac. I. c. 4, is this: wherever, by any act then in force, the informer might have sued by action, bill, plaint, suit, or information, in the inferior courts, as well as in the courts at Westminster, he is confined to sue in the former. But as this statute gives no new jurisdiction to the inferior courts, the party may still sue in the courts at Westminster, for all those penalties which could not, before the passing of that statute, have been recovered in the inferior ones. (Id. 117.)

The sessions may proceed to outlawry in cases of indictments found before them, and that by the common law; and in cases of popular actions, by the 21 Jac. c. 4. But they cannot issue a capias utlagatum, but must return the record of the outlawry into the King's Bench, and there process of capias utlagatum shall issue. (2 Hale, 52; Lamb. 521; Dalt. c. 193, p. 473.)

Whether they may issue a capias utlagatum.

But they that have power to award process of outlawry have also a power to award a capias utlagatum, as incident to their authority and jurisdiction. (12 Rep. 103.)

The sessions cannot award an attachment for contempt in not complying with their orders; but the ordinary and proper method is by indictment. (R. v. Bartlett, 2 Sess. Ca. 176.) See ante, "Process;" and as to the power of the sessions over witnesses, see "Evidence," Vol. II., p. 101. (R. v. Brownell, 1 Ad. & Ell. 598.)

A charter of Car. II. gave to the lord of an ancient liberty the execution of all writs, processes, and precepts of his majesty within the liberty, and contained a non intromittant clause, restraining the sheriff from entering, "unless it touched his majesty or his crown, and unless upon the default of the bailiffs and officers of the lord:" held, that by virtue of this charter, and the provisions of the statute 27 Hen. VIII. c. 24, s. 7, the lord's bailiff was bound to obey the sheriff's precept for returning jurors from the liberty to the quarter sessions; and that for disobedience to such precept, the justices at sessions had jurisdiction to impose a fine upon the bailiff. (R. v. Jaram, 7 D. & R. 163; 4 B. & C. 692, S. C.)

It seemeth certain, that the sessions have no authority to amerce any justice for his non-attendance at the sessions, as the judges of assize may for the absence of any such justice at the gaol delivery; for it is a general rule, that inter pares non est potestas, it being reasonable rather to refer the punishment of persons in a judicial office, in relation to their behaviour in such office, to other judges of a superior station, than to those of the same rank with themselves. And therefore it seems to have been holden, that if a justice at the sessions, who is not of the quorum, shall use such expressions towards another who is of the quorum, for which, if he were a private person, he might be committed or bound to his good behaviour, yet the sessions hath no authority to commit him, or to bind him to his good behaviour; and yet it seems to be agreed, that if a justice give just cause to any person to demand the surety of the peace against him, he may be compelled by any other justice to find such security; for the public peace requires an immediate remedy in all such cases. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 46; 1 Stra. 21.)

The principle that every court has a power to fine for contempt was clearly established in the case of the King v. Davidson, 4 B. & Ald. 329. "No lawyer," said Abbott, C. J., in delivering his opinion on this case, "can doubt the power of every court to fine for contempt." And in the same case, Bayley, J., said—"Of the power of a judge to fine for contempt of court, I have not the least doubt; and I am of opinion, also, that the judge alone is competent to determine whether what is done be or be not a contempt; and that neither this court, nor any other co-ordinate court, has a right to examine the question, whether his discretion, in that respect, was fitly and properly exercised." Best, J., also there said, "No man who pretends to any knowledge of the law can doubt, that a judge of a court of record has authority to fine or imprison for any contempt committed in the face of the court. From the earliest period of our history this authority has been exercised. The year-books record instances of such commitments, and there are similar instances in other books of reports. At those times when our ancestors have abolished or restrained improper authorities, they have not touched this, because they found it essential to the due administration of justice. A court of nisi prius is a court of record, and the judge presiding in it is, therefore, invested with the power of committing for contempt." See also the case of R. v. Clement, 4 B. & Ald. 218; "Examination," Vol. II.

All the cases on this subject with respect to the power of courts of record to fine and imprison for contempt, are collected together very ably by Mr. Justice Wilmot, with a view to a judicial opinion in the King v. Almon, Wilmot's Notes, 243.

A court of gaol delivery has the power to make an order to prohibit the publication of the proceedings pending a trial likely to continue for several successive days, and to punish disobedience to such order by fine. (King v. Clement, 4 B. & Ald. 218.)

The consent of parties that the sessions shall delegate their authority, concludes such parties, and gives validity to all acts of the sessions in consequence of such consent. (R. v. Just. of Northampton, Cald. 30; S. P. R. v. Just. of Devonshire, Cald. 32.)

4. The Jurisdiction, &c. of the Sessions.

Justice acting in a matter concerning himself.

A justice cannot act at sessions, where a matter which concerns any office he may hold comes in question. This was decided in the case of Foxham titbing, in the county of Wilts. (2 Salk. 607.) A justice of the peace was surveyor of the highways, and a matter which concerned his office coming in question at the sessions, he joined in making the order, and his name was put in the caption. By Holt, C. J.—"It ought not to be; as, if an action be brought by my Lord Chief-Justice Trevor in the Court of Common Pleas, it must be before Edward Neville, Knight, and his associates, and not before Thomas Trevor, &c.;" and it was quashed. And in R. v. Gudderidge, 8 D. & R. 217, it was held, that a justice of the peace who is a rated inhabitant of a parish, cannot vote at the sessions, either upon the determination of an appeal against the accounts of the overseers of his parish, or upon the propriety of granting a case for the opinion of the Court of King's Bench. See further as to this subject "Justices," Vol. III. p. 568. (Great Charter v. Kennington, 2 Stra. 1173; R. v. Yarpole, 4 T. R. 71.)

The quarter sessions may apply the county stock to contest the legality of a fine imposed on the county for not repairing its gaol. (R. v. Essex, Nolan, 56.)

County stock.

Justices at sessions appointed a committee of twelve magistrates to inspect the state of a county bridge, and to make any new contract for repairing or rebuilding, to be executed by the clerk of the peace on behalf of the county. Afterwards they made an order, adopting a contract for rebuilding proposed by the committee, and directed it to be prepared by the clerk of the peace, which contract having afterwards been executed by the clerk, the justices at a subsequent sessions confirmed all the resolutions of the committee, and ordered the clerk to perform their directions in respect to the contract.—The acts of the committee so confirmed are the acts of the sessions, and the authority given to the committee and exercised by them, is not such a delegation of power by the sessions as will invalidate their orders. R. v. Just. of Glamorganshire, 2 T. R. 279; Nolan, 249, S. C.)

County bridge.

The sessions are not authorized to order the payment by the bridgemaster to the clerk of the peace of a per-centage on all money raised for the repair of bridges in a particular district, in lieu of all his fees for indictments, presentments, &c., for bridges within it; although such per-centage was claimed as an ancient fee, and had been paid without dispute for a long period of time. (R. v. Houldgrave, 1 B. & Ald. 312.)

Clerk of peace, fee of, &c.

The sessions have no jurisdiction, under 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 16, to make a prospective order for a compensation thereafter to be made to the clerk of the peace; and, therefore, where a county treasurer, in obedience to such an order, made the payment, and that payment was afterwards, by an order of sessions, allowed in his accounts, the Court of King's Bench quashed so much of the order of sessions as allowed that item. (R. v. G. Williams, Esq., 3 B. & Ald. 215.)

In the same case it was made a question whether, under the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 16, the sessions have a power to make any compensation to the clerk of the peace.

Justices, upon appeal from a rate to the quarter sessions, cannot make a new, but only quash the subsisting rate. (R. v. St. Andrew's Holborn, 3 Burr. 1458.)

Rates.

The sessions have no original jurisdiction over overseers' accounts. (R. v. Portsmouth, 1 W. Bla. 395.)

Overseers' accounts, &c.

So, they have no jurisdiction to make an original order for the late overseers of the poor to pay money to their successors. (R. v. Whitear, 3 Burr. 1365.)

So, orders upon surveyors of highways, to pass their accounts and pay over monies under the now repealed act 13 Geo. III. c. 78, could not be made originally by the general quarter sessions. (R. v. Hartshorn, 2 Burr. 745.) See "Highways," Vol. III. p. 105.

Where a person is overcharged in a poor-rate, the sessions may relieve him on appeal, and amend the rate by lessening the sum assessed on him under the 17 Geo. II. c. 38. (R. v. Cheshunt, 2 T. R. 623.) See "Poor," Vol. IV.

And the sessions may order an apprentice to be discharged and money to be returned, though bound to a trade not mentioned in the act; but the order must state that the defendant appeared, or was summoned and made default; and that the master had received money with the apprentice. (R. v. Aimes, 1 Bott's P. L. 574.) See "Apprentice," Vol. I.

The court of sessions is merely ministerial, as to registering meeting-houses under the Act of Toleration. (R. v. Just. of Derbyshire, 1 W. Bla. 606.)

By the 10 & 11 Wil. III. c. 8, the proprietors of navigation shares in the river Tone are created a corporation, with certain funds, and directed to keep an account of their receipts and disbursements, which shall every year be examined, stated, corrected, and allowed by the Bishop of Bath and Wells, and the justices of the peace for the county of Somerset, or any five or more, at their first general quarter sessions after a certain day, at which time they are to direct a distribution of the surplus profits, if any: held, that the sessions in one year have no authority to revise or correct any errors in the accounts upon which a balance was struck and allowed at the sessions in any preceding year. (R. v. River Tone Conservators, 8 T. R. 286.)

2. THEIR JUDGMENTS, &c.

We have already under title "Appeal," Vol. I., considered many points of law and practice as to the judgments of the court of sessions; also, as to what justices may give their opinion therein; and as to judgments in general, see "Judgment," Vol. III. A justice cannot vote in the judgment when interested in the matter, ante, 613.

The judgment or order must determine the matter, and if it merely state the evidence of the case, it will not suffice. (R. v. Luffington, 1 Wilson, 74; R. v. Martley, Burr. S. C. 120.)

An order of sessions on stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 3, for preventing frauds by tenants, was confirmed, although both offences of moving or concealing property were charged in the disjunctive. (R. v. Middlehurst, 1 Burr. 399.) See title "Order," Vol. III.

An order was quashed for an uncertain reference to the county in describing the justices. (R. v. Stepney, Burr. S. C. 23.)

Quarter sessions are sufficiently described by the words "a general quarter sessions of the peace," without stating the caption. (Slack v. Wilkins, 3 Tyrwh. 158.)

The sessions are not compellable to give any reason for their judgment in the order they make, no more than any other court of law. (2 Salk. 607, ante. See "Appeal," Vol. I., p. 160.)

Where a reason is assigned as the foundation of a judgment, all presumption or intention that the court went upon better grounds is excluded. (R. v. Upton Gray, Cald. 308.)

When the sessions come to a conclusion, which could only be arrived at upon the assumption of a particular fact, that conclusion shall be considered as amounting to a finding of that fact; as when it was a question whether there was a hiring and service for a year in the appellant parish, and the sessions confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of the court as to a settlement being there gained by hiring and service, it was holden that this was tantamount to a finding of a hiring and service for a year in that parish; and that such finding ought not to be disturbed, if there were any premises to warrant it. (See R. v. St. Andrew the Great, 3 M. & R. 374; 8 B. & Cres. 664.)

It is questionable whether, when the sessions state facts fully and particularly, from whence they infer fraud, the Court of King's Bench can draw their own conclusion from those facts, without having regard to the adjudication of the court of sessions. (R. v. Woodland, 1 T. R. 261; see R. v. Tillingham, 1 B. & Adol. 180.)

The court will not intend any thing to vitiate an order of sessions. (R. v. Higher Walton, Burr. S. C. 162.) And when a matter appears to be doubtful on the face of the order, the court will intend that it has been done right. (R. v. Meyfield, Burr. S. C. 453.)

By Holt, C. J., the sessions is all as one day, and the justices may alter their judgments at any time, whilst it continues. (St. Andrew's, Holborn, v. St. Clement's Danes, 2 Salk. 606; Thornby v. Fleetwood, 1 Stra. 383.) See "Amendment," Vol. I.

A wrong entry of judgment by mistake, and not corrected during the sessions, is no ground for a re-hearing. And where one judgment is entered at the sessions for another, the King's Bench cannot interfere, unless the mistake is apparent on the record. (R. v. Justices of Leicestershire, 1 M. & Sel. 442.)

In R. v. Harding, 2 Salk. 477, it is delivered as the resolution of the court, that a judge of nisi prius, by consent of parties, may make a rule to refer a cause; but the sessions cannot do so, though by consent. They may refer a thing to another to examine, and make report to them for their determination, but cannot refer a thing to be determined by the other.

But in R. v. the Justs. of Northampton, Cald. 30, on a motion to quash an order of sessions quashing a poor-rate, on the ground that the rate was by the sessions referred to two justices out of sessions, and that the sessions afterwards adopted their opinion, without exercising their own judgment, Ld. Mansfield said,—“If they did this of their own accord, without the consent of the parties, it cannot be supported: they are not warranted to delegate their authority: but, if they acted with the consent of the parties, I think they have done very right; and we will never suffer the party who consented to the reference to come here to set it aside; and I think it sufficient if the attorneys consented, and attended at the reference.” The case was sent back to the sessions to certify whether it was referred by consent; and afterwards the order was affirmed. See, further, ante, 602; “Award,” Vol. I.

A bill of exceptions will not lie to the justices in sessions on an appeal; for, as observed by Ld. Hardwicke, in the common case of bills of exceptions tendered to the judges, the jury alone are the proper persons who would be to decide whether they believe the evidence or not; the judges have nothing to do with the belief of the evidence; they are not to determine on its credibility, but on the consequences of law arising from it. But the justices at sessions are judges of the fact as well as law; they are jury as well as judges; it is in their breast only whether to believe or disbelieve the evidence; and who is to take upon himself to say what portion of the evidence they do believe, and what they do not? Suppose six of the justices believe the evidence, and two of them do not believe it, are the two to conclude the six as to the belief of the fact? When the justices specially state the fact, it is the act of the whole court; but here only two out of the whole number have sealed the bill of exceptions. (R. v. Preston, Burr. S. C. 77.)

In the case of Thornby v. Fleetwood, T., 6 G. 1, which was upon a writ of error in the King's Bench, brought against a judgment in the Common Pleas, the court was equally divided, whereupon it was considered what was further to be done. And after several expedients which were judged impracticable, the parties at last consented that the judgment should be affirmed, so that the case thereupon might come before the House of Lords for a final determination; and Pratt, C. J., delivered the opinion of the court thus:—“The plaintiffs in error move us for an affirmance; as to that, you see the court is divided, and there can be no rule but in this case, because the party against whom it is to be affirmed is desirous and willing that it should be so. We are all of opinion, that upon his consent the judgment of the Common Pleas may be affirmed. But, lest this be brought in future ages as a precedent of an affirmance upon a division, we direct the officer to make the rule special in this case, on recital of the difference in opinion amongst the judges, and the consent of the party. (Thornby v. Fleetwood, 1 Str. 383, 384.)

Or, if the court shall be still divided, as so it may happen in small counties or towns corporate, where the justices are but few, or where the number is reduced by reason of the rest being interested, in order that the case may not be hung up for ever, it may be advisable (according to the course prescribed in the case of Thornby v. Fleetwood, above mentioned) for the court, by consent of the parties, to affirm or quash, and thereupon state the case especially, to be laid before the judges of assize, or rather before the Court of King's Bench, for the judges of assize are oftentimes sufficiently employed with the proper business of the circuit, without being importuned with these matters of inferior consequence.

Where, upon an appeal against an order of removal, the justices at sessions were equally divided, and made an order that the hearing of the appeal should be adjourned, one of the justices who voted in favour of the respondent parish, being a rated inhabitant of that parish, an application for a certiorari to remove the order of sessions, in order that it might be quashed, was refused, on the ground that, even if the order of sessions was erroneous, the court had no jurisdiction to review it. This was decided in the case of the King v. the Justices of Monmouthshire, 8 B. & C. 139; 3 S. C. nom. R. v. Uske, 2 M. & R. 172. "The late decisions," said Ld. Tenterden, in delivering the opinion of the court on this question, "establish, that we cannot assume to ourselves the jurisdiction of a court of error, and revise the judgments of the court of quarter sessions. Here a judgment has been pronounced by the court of quarter sessions, relating to a subject-matter over which that court had jurisdiction; and, assuming that judgment to be erroneous, I think we have not jurisdiction, as a court of error, to review it."

Sessions sole judges of propriety of entry of verdict.

Upon the trial of an indictment at the sessions, the court is the sole judge of the propriety of the entry of the verdict; where, therefore, upon a special finding by the jury amounting to an acquittal, the chairman directs a verdict of guilty to be entered, the court of K. B. will not grant a mandamus requiring the minute of the verdict to be altered according to the fact. The only course open to the prisoner is, it seems, to apply to the crown for a pardon. (R. v. Justices, Suffolk, 3 N. & M. M. C. 221; 5 N. & M. 139.)

How far conclusive, &c.

We have already noticed the effect of a judgment of sessions, as to how far it is conclusive on the court of King's Bench and parties, &c. See "Appeal," Vol. I., p. 159; "Evidence," Vol. II., p. 61.

The Court of King's Bench will take cognizance of a case reserved by the sessions accompanying the proceedings so removed; and where the sessions, upon proof that the appellant had received from the clerk of the convicting magistrates a copy of his conviction, signed and sealed by such justices, purporting on the face of it to have been made upon the information of B. and C. (though such copy was drawn up on the back of the paper which contained the information of A., the true informer, B. and C. being only the witnesses who had been examined in support of the charge, and though the same justices had returned to the sessions, to be filed of record, a regular conviction of the same date, signed and sealed by them, on parchment, stating it to have been made on the information of A., and supported by the evidence of B. and C., according to the truth of the case), had quashed the latter conviction so returned by the justices, as being at variance with the minutes of the conviction delivered to the appellant, without entering into the merits of the case, upon a preliminary objection taken by the appellant, this court quashed the order of sessions generally; thereby setting up again the regular conviction, considering that the variance arose from the mere mistake and irregularity of the justice's clerk, and that the appellant was not really surprised by it, but had waived his appeal on the merits. (R. v. Allen, 15 East, 333.)

When the sessions adjudge a place to be a vill by reputation, as a substantive fact, the Court of King's Bench is precluded from going into the question, notwithstanding the sessions state all the evidence particularly on which they formed their opinion. (R. v. Ronton Abbey, 2 T. R. 207.)

fraudulent, or that it does not amount to 10*l.* per annum, it is decisive in 4. The Jurisdiction, &c. of the Sessions. the Court of King's Bench, though they state all the facts, and refer the consideration of those questions to this court. (R. v. Lanwinnio, 4 T. R. 473; Nolan, 19, S. C.)

Though the sessions find that certain persons in the township were possessed of visible stocks in trade there, and were personally liable to be rated in respect thereof, if by law such property were liable to be rated; yet, if they also state that they were not satisfied from the evidence offered before them that there was any surplus profit on such stocks, by which they could amend a rate which omitted them, that concludes the question. (R. v. Macdonald, 12 East, 324.)

A party found guilty by a jury at a session irregularly holden, is entitled to have the record of the proceedings correctly made up according to the fact, and the Court of King's Bench will grant a mandamus to the justices to make up such record. (R. v. Justices of Middlesex, in Re Bowman, 5 B. & Adol. 1113.) Record of, right of party to have it made up properly.

A mandamus to the quarter sessions will go, commanding them to issue such process of execution where there has been no delay in making the application, or the delay has been satisfactorily accounted for. (R. v. Justices of Warwickshire, 4 Nev. & Man. 370; 1 Hurr. & W. 18, S. C.) Mandamus for execution.

3. OF STATING A SPECIAL CASE, AND PROCEEDINGS ON.

Mr. Dickenson observes, that a reference to the judge of assize, either of the whole case, or of some point of legal difficulty involved in it, used formerly to be a common practice, but is, of late, fallen much into disuse. For this change many reasons might be adduced, but they are unnecessary here. If any particular circumstances should make this mode eligible, the right still continues; but it has generally given place to a more eligible one, which is that of stating a special case for the determination of the Court of King's Bench. (Dick. Sessions, 627.) Without such special case, the Court of King's Bench has in general no jurisdiction to review the judgment of a court of quarter sessions. (R. v. Allen, 15 East, 333; R. v. Carnarvon Justices, 4 B. & Ald. 86.) Reference to judge of assize.
Special case.

The sessions do not always refer the whole case to the judge of assize: sometimes they refer only a particular point, and reserve the final determination of the whole matter to themselves. (R. v. Tedford, 2 Burr. S. C. 57; 2 Sess. Cas. 243.)

When the special case is granted, the object is carried into effect by the counsel agreeing to a statement of facts, which are usually corrected and settled by a reference to the chairman's notes. (Id.)

The case so settled, is to be signed by the junior counsel on each side. If no counsel are employed, or if they cannot agree upon a case, even with the assistance of the chairman, the latter may, with the concurrence of a majority of the justices on the bench, state and sign a special case himself. (Id.)

There is no specific form or precedent, according to which a special case must be drawn; but, nevertheless, there are certain rules to be collected from a long succession of determinations, which are, in substance, as follow:—The justices, with regard to the civil business of the court, by the summary jurisdiction which is given to them, it has been observed, are placed in the situation of jurors, and judges, conjointly. They are to elicit the facts from the evidence, as jurors would do, and they are to judge of the law arising out of those facts in the common course, if they think fit. Out of this position arise two conclusions: viz. first, that they are not compellable to grant a special case, if they entertain no doubt (a) whatever of the law: and therefore, though it is certainly, in point of candour, right to Form of the case.
The law of the case.

(a) "The magistrates ought not to be induced to send up cases for our opinion, if they have no doubt upon the question in their own minds, in order to avoid incurring unnecessary expenses." (Per Bailey, J., R. v. Inhab. of Darley Abbey, 14 East, 285.)

comply with the request of the litigant parties by doing so, where any reasonable doubt on the subject is suggested, they will best consult the interests of the public by refusing it where they believe the application to arise out of mere obstinacy, or a spirit of litigation; and should always refuse it, unless they entertain serious doubts. (Per Bailey, J., in the King v. Burbach, 1 M. & Sel. 376.) Secondly, that their authority to judge of the law is the only one which in these cases they reserve for the superior court; whence it follows, that the facts make no part of the subject-matter on which the court above are to exercise their discretion, and therefore, having been found by the justices, they must be specifically stated in the case, and not the evidence from which they were deduced. (Burr. 120, S. C.) A very few examples may suffice for illustration. On an appeal respecting a pauper's settlement, where the question depends on an equivocal hiring, or a doubtful service for a year, the fact is to be deduced from the evidence, such as it may be, one way or the other, by the justices; and not the evidence, from which they draw their conclusion, stated. (R. v. Hobbear, 1 E. R. 73.) So, whether a master gave a particular consent to his apprentice to serve a third person, is a matter of fact, which, let it rest on testimony ever so ambiguous, must be found, and not left doubtful on the face of the statement. (Burr. 682, S. C.) So, in a question of settlement by residing on an estate, the session must state the interest which the pauper took, whether he came in by descent or by purchase; and if the latter, the price of such purchase, that it may appear on the face of the statement, that it was such a purchase as will confer a settlement. (R. v. Warblington, T. R. 241.)

Fraud is a fact. This, therefore, like all other matters of fact, if it make any part of the case, to influence the opinion of the justices, must be specifically found by them, and stated accordingly; for it is not enough to state such evidence, though clearly leading to the most palpable conclusion of fraud, for the court above to draw such conclusion. (Per Buller, J., in the King v. Fillongley 1 T. R. 461.) In some cases, the evidence and the conclusion have both been stated, to which there is no objection in point of form; but it leads to an obvious inconvenience in point of practice, that if the court above should differ from the sessions as to the conclusion, they could not regularly interfere; and that, in appearance, an opinion is asked, which the court cannot judicially give. (Burr. S. C. 57, 171; Talf. Dick. Sess. 627.)

The sessions on the case sent should state the conclusion of fact, which they draw from the evidence, and not the evidence itself. (R. v. St. Cuthbert Wells, 3 Nev. & M. 100.)

Where upon a special case, facts are stated which warrant the judgment of the court below, but that court has drawn an inference which is not warranted by the statement, the order will be confirmed, without sending back the case to be re-stated. (R. v. Rickingham Superior, 1 Nev. & M. 47.)

If the special case be insufficient, the court will send it back to be re-stated, upon which the sessions should proceed and re-hear it as if it were an entire new business; for it is in the nature of a new trial; wherefore they have no right to take any notice of what passed before, and they may receive further evidence, and make a new order on such re-hearing. (R. v. Page, 2 Bott. 743; Rex v. Bloxam, 1 Adol. & Ell. 386; 3 N. & M. 385, S. C.)

When the case, however, is only sent back to ascertain some particular fact, the proof may be confined to that, and it may be amended by new evidence. (R. v. Hitcham, Burr. S. C. 489.)

Or the case may be sent back to explain some ambiguity of expression, or an omission of an inference, which the justices may supply without hearing witnesses; for the sessions, in order to re-state a case, are not necessarily obliged to hear new evidence. (R. v. Bray, 2 Bott. 743; Burr. S. C. 684.)

But the court will not send a case down to the sessions to be re-stated on a mere formal objection, if enough appear to enable them to decide according to the merits of the case, and when the only possible result of sending back the case would be to produce delay and expense. (R. v. Inh. of 5. Of Adjournment. Middlezoy, 2 T. R. 41.)

Nor on the affidavit of a person that the clerk of the peace did not state his evidence truly. (R. v. Burgh, 2 Bott. 747.)

Where it has been referred to the chairman at sessions on an appeal to state a case, and a case has afterwards on certiorari been returned to this court by the clerk of the peace purporting to be signed by the chairman, this court will not send it back to be re-stated, or quash the certiorari, on the ground of the chairman having said that he did not recollect signing the case, and upon a suggestion by the attorney for one of the litigating parties in an affidavit, that such case does not agree with the facts proved, and that deponent believes the chairman did not settle the case. (R. v. The Inhabitants of Matlock, 5 B. & Adolph. 883.)

The sessions cannot be compelled to state a special case. Nor will the court permit them to raise a general question, by omitting to state particular circumstances belonging to the case. But if the sessions order a special case to be made, and before it is settled the sessions is inadvertently adjourned, the court of King's Bench will grant a mandamus to compel them to proceed in the appeal. (R. v. Oulton, 2 Bott. 73; R. v. Francis Hill, 1 Bott. 280; R. v. Justs. of Sussex, 2 Bott. 751; R. v. Pembrokesh., 2 B. & Adolph. 391.)

Sessions not compellable to state a case.

But they will not grant such a mandamus, where it is clear that the proceeding could lead to no result; as where the chairman, in consequence of his own opinion and that of the court upon the facts, refused to sign any statement but one which would have excluded the point of law relied on by the party demanding a case. (R. v. Pembrokeshire, 2 B. & Adolph. 391.)

Where the quarter-sessions have dismissed an appeal upon a point of practice, subject to a case, which the applicants for the case have not brought up, the court of King's Bench will not at their instance grant a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal. (R. v. Justices of the West Riding; Warmsworth v. Doncaster; 1 Adol. & Ell. 606.)

If the justices at sessions are equally divided, and no order be made, nor the sessions adjourned, no order can be made at a subsequent sessions. (Post, 620.)

Where justices divided in opinion.

Special orders of sessions are considered in the nature of special verdicts, which are not to state the evidence of the fact, but the fact itself. (R. v. Martley, Burr. S. C. 120; 2 Bott. 741.)

Special orders, verdicts, &c.

The court ordered the sessions to inquire into a fact which appeared doubtful on the original order of removal, even though the sessions stated no case for the opinion of the court. (R. v. Margam, 1 T. R. 775.)

The sessions should state, as a fact (in a settlement case), whether the master dispensed with the service before the end of the year, or whether there were a dissolution of the contract by mutual consent. (R. v. St. Peter, Norwich, 8 T. R. 477.)

What to be stated in a settlement case.

Special cases are most usually granted in cases of settlement and rating. They may, however, be granted in all cases of orders and convictions, where the certiorari is not taken away by statute. (The King v. Allen, 15 East's R. 333.)

Special cases may be granted on convictions, &c.

But the Court of King's Bench will take no cognizance of a special case reserved on an indictment at sessions. (The King v. the Inhabitants of Salop, 13 East's R. 95.)

Where one question alone is submitted to the Court of King's Bench by the sessions, that court will not consider any other questions. (R. v. Guildford, 2 Chit. 284; R. v. Aire and Calder Navigation, 2 T. R. 666.)

K. B. will not consider more than the question put.

V. Of Adjournment.

It should be premised that the whole session is in law considered as one day. All the proceedings have reference to the first day of the sessions, and the justices may alter their orders, if they see good cause, at any time before the close of the sessions. (2 Salk. 607; 1 Str. 383.)

Adjournment of the sessions.

If the justices at sessions are equally divided, or from any other cause no judgment is given, and no adjournment takes place, no order can be made on an unfinished case at a subsequent sessions. (Bott. 713; Bodmin v. Warlyne, 2 Bott. 733.)

Where there is an equal division, an adjournment should be entered by the clerk of the peace that the justices may resume the consideration of the matter at a future sessions. (Id.)

The court of quarter-sessions cannot be adjourned by the crier without the presence of the justices. (R. v. Middlesex Justices, 3 N. & M. 110; 6 C. & P. 90.)

The adjournment of a sessions must be made by the same number of justices as are necessary to hold it. (R. v. Westington, 2 Bott. 733.)

The adjournment ought not to be beyond the time of meeting of the next quarter-sessions, as in the case of R. v. Grince, T., 4 Geo. I. An indictment was found before the justices for the county of Lincoln, against a constable, for refusing to obey an order of the justices; and the defendant was tried, convicted, and had judgment given against him, at a general sessions, held the 3rd day of May (which was after the Easter sessions began), by the adjournment of the Epiphany sessions; but, by the Court of King's Bench, the judgment was reversed, because the justices cannot continue one general sessions to a day subsequent to the time appointed by the 2 Hen. V. c. 4, for the holding another original sessions. (19 Vin. Abr. 358.)

Where the sessions is adjourned, the style of the sessions ought not to run at such a sessions held by adjournment; but the original meeting of the sessions ought to be set forth, and that it was continued by them from thence to such further time by adjournment. (R. v. Harrowby, Burr. S. C. 102; R. v. Heptonstall, Id. 88; R. v. Fisher, 2 Str. 865; see also R. v. Walker, 2 Sess. Ca. 21.)

And the lords of franchise shall be contributory to the said wages, after the rate of their part of fines and amerciaments. See "Justices," Vol. III. p. 568.

But by the 14 Rich. II. c. 11, no duke, earl, baron, or baronet, shall take any wages.

(a) The sum allowed for justices' wages in the county of Middlesex varied according to the number of justices present at each sessions; for the year ending Michaelmas 1833, the sum then claimed amounted to four hundred and thirty-five pounds eleven shillings, upon which the lords commissioners of the treasury thought fit to order the sum of two hundred pounds to be paid and no more. In August, 1835, the lords commissioners directed that from and after the then next October general quarter-sessions of the peace, no greater allowance should be made on account of justices' wages than that authorized by the acts of the 12 & 14 Rich. II. c. 10 & 11, namely, four shillings a-day for each justice, according to the number of days he shall actually attend at the sessions, not in any case exceeding the number of eight justices in one day, and two shillings per day for their clerk.

The allowances for justices' wages, in all other counties, was forty-eight pounds per annum, however much the amount claimed might be, and in future all the other counties in England, as respects justices' wages, are placed on the same footing with the county of Middlesex.

Sessions, Petty and Special.

Petit session, when necessary.

When expedient.

A PETTY or petit session is a meeting of two or more justices of the peace, holden of their own mere motion, for the execution of some power vested in them by law. There are some occasions on which, though a single magistrate may proceed, it is advisable and usual to procure the attendance of two or more. With respect to the cases in which one magistrate may act, but in which he should, in his discretion, seek the assistance of another, Mr. Serjeant Talfourd observes, that it is obviously impossible to suggest any general rules. A magistrate will probably think it advisable to adopt the latter course, in cases which affect large pecuniary interests, which involve questions arising on statutes of difficult interpretation, and in all cases where any doubt may reasonably be expected, and where his decision would be final. Cases will also sometimes occur, in which, though not in themselves difficult, local circumstances may render the concurrence of two or more magistrates advisable, in order that justice may not only be fully and fairly, but satisfactorily administered. (Talfourd's Dick. Sess.

p. 6.) See further as to when there must be two or more justices, ante, Special and Petty, "Justices," Vol. III. p. 561.

A special session is a meeting of justices, holden on a special occasion, for the execution of some particular branch of their authority, convened by reasonable notice to the other magistrates of the division. (Per Bayley, J., R. v. Just. of Worcestershire, 2 B. & Ald. 233; 2 Haw. c. 8, 18.)

It differs from a petty session, with which it has been sometimes confounded, in this important respect, that an opportunity must be afforded to the magistrates of the division in general to attend and participate in the proceedings, whereas the petty session may be holden by any two justices, on their mere private agreement, to transact such business as they are authorized to perform. (Talf. Dick. Sess. 6.)

By certain statutes, special sessions are required to be holden at particular periods. For instance, specific times are mentioned in the 48 Eliz. c. 2, and 54 Geo. III. c. 91, for appointing overseers of the poor; in 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 50, for appointing or dismissing surveyors of the highways; in 37 Geo. III. c. 143, 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 49, 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 63, for appointing inspectors of weights and measures; and in 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, for licensing ale-houses. (See titles "Highways in General," Vol. III.; "Weights and Measures," post; and "Alehouses," Vol. I.) The sessions, therefore, must in these cases be holden at the times named. There are others for which no particular time is or can be prescribed, and which may be convened whenever the occasion shall arise; as for diverting or stopping up highways, proceeding under the General Inclosure Act, and erecting a house of industry, &c.

Where the manner of holding a special session is prescribed by the statute which directs it to be holden, the precise requisitions of the statute must, of course, be obeyed. Where no such direction is to be found, as in the great majority of instances, the special session may be convened at the instance of the custos rotulorum of the county; of the clerk of the peace or his deputy; or of two justices. The party or parties convening the session issue a precept to the chief constable, who thereupon issues precepts to the petty constables, and gives notice to all the magistrates usually acting within the district for which the session is convened. The precepts must express distinctly the purpose for which the session is to be holden; and of this purpose distinct notice must be given to the magistrates, more especially when the session is not one of those directed by statute to be periodically holden for specific purposes. (Talf. Dick. Sess. 7.)

The forms of these precepts vary, of course, with the occasion; a specimen of one for holding a special session relative to the state of highways, &c. will be found in the twenty-sixth edition of this work, under title "Highways," Vol. III. p. 98.

We have already seen that, to constitute a good special session, reasonable notice should be given to all the magistrates of the division; and, therefore, in the case of the King v. Justs. of Worcestershire, 2 B. & Ald. 228, before mentioned, where a precept for holding a special session on the 15th of September, for diverting a way, was issued on the 12th, and the notices given on the 14th, the Court of King's Bench held that the session was not properly convened, and the order invalid.

When the division within which the magistrates act is a hundred, the notices of holding a special sessions must be given by the high constable of the hundred. When they are justices of a corporation, the notices must be served by authority of the officer of the corporation analogous to the high constable. In the case of R. v. Justs. of Surrey, the notice was served on the several magistrates of the division by the clerk of the magistrates, and not by the high constable; and the special session convened thereon was held bad. (5 B. & C. 241; 7 D. & R. 857; 4 D. & R. M. C. 8, S. C.)

But the statute only requires that the notice shall be given by the high constable or other proper officer; it is not necessary that it should be actually served by him; and, therefore, in the case of R. v. Justs. of Suffolk, where notice, having been signed by the chief constable, was served by a person acting under his authority, it was held good, as though he had personally served it. (R. v. Justs. of Suffolk, 6 B. & C. 110; 9 D. & R. 111, S. C.)

A special session cannot be holden by different sets of magistrates for the same purpose. And, therefore, where two sets of magistrates have concurrent jurisdictions, and one appoints a meeting to grant ale licences, their jurisdiction attaches so as to exclude the others appointing a subsequent meeting; but they may all meet together on the first day. But if, after such appointment, the other set of magistrates meet on a subsequent day, and grant other licences, their proceeding is illegal, and the subject of an indictment, even without evidence of corrupt motive. (R. v. T. Sainsbury, Esq., and another, 4 T. R. 451.)

The place of holding a special session is in the discretion of those who have power to convene it, so that it is within their jurisdiction; but it must be distinctly specified in the precepts and notices. (Dalt. 185, ante, 623.)

The exact division and limits of some counties being very uncertain, and the consequent risk of holding of special and petty sessions in improper places, engaged the attention of the legislature, and on the 15th of July, 1828, "An Act for the better Regulation of Divisions in the several Counties of England and Wales," was passed, by which, after reciting, "whereas by divers acts now in force it is enacted, that certain matters and things, in the same respectively mentioned, shall be transacted and determined within the divisions or limits within which the same shall arise, or the parties therein concerned inhabit or exercise their trade or calling, and by or before one, two, or more justices of the peace dwelling within or near to, or usually acting within, such divisions or limits respectively: and whereas the boundaries of such divisions or limits are in some instances uncertain, and in many have become inconvenient to the inhabitants within the same, from the change or increase of trade or population, or from other causes: and whereas doubts have arisen as to the authority by which such divisions or limits may from time to time be constituted, defined, or altered; and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed, and due provision made for the constituting, defining, and regulating from time to time such divisions or limits, as the convenience of the inhabitants within the same may require;" it is enacted, "that at any time or times after the Michaelmas quarter-sessions next following the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for any two or more justices of the peace for any county, riding, or division in England or Wales, having a separate commission of the peace, to transmit to the clerk of the peace a statement in writing, signed by such justices of the parishes, tithings, townships, and places within the same, which, in the opinion of such justices, would form together a convenient and a proper division within and for which special sessions should thenceforward be held; or of any parishes, tithings, townships, or places, which, in the opinion of such justices, ought to be annexed, for the same purposes, to any other division in the said county than those or that of which at the time of making such statement they form part; and that every such statement shall, among other things, set forth within what existing divisions or division, limits or limit, the several parishes, sittings, townships and places enumerated in the same, are situated or deemed to be; and also whether one or more, and what existing divisions or limits will be altered by such proposed new divisions, or by the change of any place or places from one division to another; and also the names of such justices of the peace as at the date of such statement are usually resident or acting as such within the boundaries of such proposed new division."

Sect. 2. "At the quarter-sessions next following the receipt of every such statement, setting forth such particulars as are above enumerated, and not otherwise, the clerk of the peace shall and he is hereby required to lay the same before such justices of the peace in such sessions assembled; and the justices of the peace for such county, riding, or division, having such separate commission of the peace, shall and they are hereby required (except in the cases hereinafter provided for) to proceed at the quarter-sessions next following the laying of such statement before them as aforesaid, to the consideration thereof, and at their discretion to adopt the same wholly or in part, or to reject the same altogether, or to adjourn their determination thereupon to the next or any succeeding quarter-sessions."

Sect. 3. "Immediately after the quarter-sessions at which such statement shall have been first laid before the justices of the peace, the clerk of the peace shall cause to be published a copy of such statement in three successive numbers of one or more weekly newspapers usually published or circulated within the same county, riding, or division, and in which the advertisements of county business are usually inserted; and at the foot of such copy shall also cause notice to be given that such statement has been laid before such justices in pursuance of the directions of this act, and that the same will be taken into consideration by the court at the then next ensuing quarter-sessions."

Sect. 4. "When and so often as the justices of the peace of any such county, riding, or division, having a separate commission of the peace, shall adopt wholly or in part any such statement so laid before them, and shall determine to change any parish, tithing, township, or place, from one division to another, or to constitute any new division, within which special sessions shall thenceforward be holden, the said justices of the peace shall thereupon make an order for such alteration, or for the constituting and defining such new division, and in such last-mentioned order shall particularly enumerate the several parishes, tithings, townships, and places to be comprised within such new division, and shall also specify the division or divisions within which respectively any parishes, tithings, townships, and places, disannexed by such order from any former division, and not forming part of such new division, shall thenceforward be taken to be, and also shall affix to such new division the name of some principal and convenient parish, township, or place within the same, and also shall, in either of such orders, as the case may be, particularly set down the day from which such order shall take effect; and the clerk of the peace for such county, riding, or division, shall forthwith publish a copy of such order in three successive numbers of one or more such weekly newspapers as aforesaid, and shall transmit a copy of such order to every high constable within the limits of such new or altered division or divisions."

Sect. 5. "Nothing in this act shall be taken to authorize, and that it shall not be lawful for any justices in any court of quarter sessions to make any order constituting such new division, unless upon due proof before them made in open court upon oath, that for two years next before the making of such proof there have been, and at the time of making the same there are, at the least, five justices of the peace residing in or usually acting within the boundary line proposed to be the limits of any such new division."

Sect. 6. "From and after the day so specified in such order, for the term of twenty-one years, and until further order of sessions after the expiration of that time, and subject to no alteration or revision during such term, except as hereinafter provided, all matters and things which by law are now or hereafter may be required to be, or which now are, usually transacted or determined within the division within which the same shall have arisen, or the parties therein concerned inhabit or exercise their trade or calling, and by or before one, two, or more justices of the peace dwelling or usually acting within the same, shall be transacted and determined, so far as the same matters and things arise within or concern the inhabitants of such new or

Sect. 7. "At the quarter sessions next after the laying of any such statement before the justices in such sessions assembled, it shall and may be lawful for such justices, if they shall deem it expedient and proper, not to proceed to the single consideration of such statement, but, instead thereof, to cause to be made an inquiry and examination into the boundary lines, extent, and other local circumstances, of all the existing and accustomed divisions for the holding of special sessions within the commission of such justices; and at such or any succeeding quarter sessions, to which the conclusion of such inquiry and examination may, from time to time, be adjourned, by order of sessions, to regulate, alter, new-model, and subdivide, all or any of such divisions, in such manner as shall appear to them proper and convenient, particularly specifying in such order the names of all such divisions, whether newly constituted, altered, or unaltered, the several parishes, tithings, townships, and places, to be comprised in each, and affixing or continuing to each the name of some principal and convenient parish, township, or place within the same."

Sect. 8. "That the clerk of the peace for any county, riding, or division, in which such order shall have been made as last aforesaid, shall forthwith publish a copy of the same in three successive numbers of one or more such weekly newspapers as aforesaid, and shall also forthwith transmit, by the post, a copy of the same to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of each parish within the said county, riding, or division, to be by them affixed on the principal door of the church of such parish; and at the foot of every such copy so published or transmitted shall add a notice specifying at what time such order will be enrolled as hereinafter provided, and at what time and in what manner any person or persons, or body corporate, aggrieved by such order, may petition against the same, or any part thereof, as hereinafter provided."

Sect. 9. "In every such order, some time, not earlier than the fourth quarter sessions next after the making thereof, shall be provisionally specified, on which the same shall be enrolled as hereinafter provided, subject to such alteration as may thereafter be made either in the particulars of the said order, or in the time of its enrolment; and that at any court of quarter sessions preceding such time, it shall and may be lawful for any one or more person or persons, or body corporate, jointly or severally, to present a petition in writing to such court, against all or any part of such order, and to produce witnesses in support of such petition: and the justices at such court assembled shall and they are hereby required to hear and determine, in a summary way, the merits of such petition, and to amend such order so far as may, upon such hearing, appear proper and convenient: provided always, that no such petition shall be received or examined into, unless after due proof that a notice in writing, specifying the grounds thereof, which upon the hearing shall alone be inquired into, hath been served, ten clear days before the commencement of such sessions, upon one of the overseers of the

Sect. 10. "So soon as all such petitions against such order shall have been determined, and such amendments made therein as shall have appeared necessary or proper, the justices at such quarter sessions shall cause to be inserted therein some day not earlier than one month after such sessions from which the same shall take effect, and shall cause the same order to be enrolled, and the same shall remain an order of sessions, controlling any order or orders of sessions heretofore made for the separate constitution of any new divisions, or the partial alteration of any accustomed divisions, under the former provisions of this act, and not subject itself to revocation or alteration of any kind for the space of ten years thence next ensuing; and during such ten years no such statement shall be received or proceedings had thereon as above mentioned, but during all that time, and until further order of sessions after the expiration of that time, the several divisions, as limited, modelled, or constituted in and by such order, shall be and be taken to be, for all the purposes in this act mentioned, the lawful divisions of such county, riding, or division, having such separate commission of the peace, for the meetings of justices in special sessions, under any statute now in force, or hereafter to be made, and containing no special provision to the contrary: and all bailiffs, constables, tithingmen, surveyors, overseers of the poor, and other officers, publicans, keepers of taverns, coffee-houses, and victualling-houses, and other persons, shall and they are hereby required thenceforward, during the time last above limited, to give their attendance to and upon the justices of the peace at any time assembled in such special sessions, within the same divisions respectively, as fully and effectually as by law they have been bound to do within any division reputed and taken before the passing of this act to be a lawful and accustomed division for the meetings of justices for any of the purposes aforesaid." [See this altered by the 6 Wil. IV. c. 12, infra.]

Sect. 11. "Immediately after the enrolment of such order, the clerk of the peace shall and he is hereby required to cause to be published a copy of the same in three successive numbers of one or more such weekly newspapers as aforesaid, and shall also transmit one copy thereof to each justice of the peace dwelling within or usually acting within and for such county, riding, or division, having such separate commission of the peace."

Sect. 12. "No order to be made, nor any proceeding to be had or taken, in pursuance of this act, shall be quashed or vacated for want of form, or removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatever, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster; any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

The last act, 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, relating to the licensing and government of alehouses, &c., is a very important one, so far as regards the directions contained therein for the holding an annual special session, and other special sessions auxiliary thereto, for the accomplishment of its purposes. It will be found under title "Alehouse," Vol. I.

Sewers.

Statutes as to.

BY the 23 Hen. VIII. c. 5, commissions of sewers shall be issued in all parts of the realm, where need shall require.

And by the 13 Eliz. c. 9, for one year after the expiration of a commission of sewers, the justices of the peace, or six of them (two of them being of the quorum), may execute the powers of the said commission, unless a new commission shall be issued in the meantime.

But as the power and authority of these commissioners of sewers is not general enough to fall in with the design of this book, those whom it may particularly concern are referred to the statutes at large which treat of this title; namely,

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 17, after reciting that it is expedient to extend the provisions of the 57 Geo. III. c. 93, (which is an act to limit the charges of brokers on distraining for rents not exceeding 20*l.*, ante, "Distress," Vol. I.,) "to distresses for other cases," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act all the rules, regulations, clauses, provisions, penalties, matters, and things in the said act contained, shall extend and be construed to extend, and shall be applied and put in execution, so far as the same are applicable and capable of being put in execution, with respect to any distress or levy which shall be made for any land tax, assessed taxes, poors' rates, church rates, tithes, highways rates, sewer rates, or any other rates, taxes, impositions, or assessments whatever, in all cases where the sum demanded and due for or in respect of such taxes, rates, tithes, assessments, or impositions shall not exceed the sum of 20*l.*, and in all cases where the whole of the several sums sought to be levied by distresses taken for different purposes at the same time shall not exceed the sum of 20*l.*; and that such costs and charges, and no other, shall be taken and payable as the costs and charges of the levy and disposition of such distresses; and that all such proceedings shall and may be had and taken against any and every person transgressing the regulations of the said act in the levying or distraining for any such taxes, rates, impositions, or assessments, and all such persons shall be liable to and shall incur such and the like penalties, as by the said act are directed, required, and imposed with respect to persons making any distress for rent contrary to the directions of the said act; and that in any order or judgment of any justices before whom any complaint shall be preferred in consequence of this act, such order shall be expressed to be made upon a complaint for the breach of the said recited act, as amended by this act; and that the said recited act and this act shall be taken and construed together as one act, to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Costs of distresses for sewers' rates.

Provisions of recited act extended to distress for taxes, rates, tithes, &c.

The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 18, with respect to property under commissioners of sewers, enacts, "that in any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor committed on or with respect to any sewer or other matter within or under the view, cognizance, or management of any commissioners of sewers, it shall be sufficient to state any such property to belong to the commissioners of sewers within or under whose view, cognizance, or management any such things shall be, and it shall not be necessary to specify the names of any of such commissioners." See, ante, "Indictment," Vol. III., p. 430.

In indictments for offences committed on sewers, property may be laid in commissioners.

By 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 22, s. 52, "for the better carrying into execution the powers and authorities of the said commissioners of sewers, be it further enacted, that all and every chief and petty constables, headboroughs, and tithingmen, or by whatsoever other name or names such chief or petty constables may be called or known, and other peace officers, of or within the respective hundreds, parishes, townships, liberties, districts or places within the jurisdiction of the said respective courts, shall and they are hereby authorized and required to obey and execute all and every the orders, warrants, precepts, or other process which may be to them directed by the said commissioners; which said commissioners respectively are hereby authorized to direct such their orders, warrants, precepts, or other process to such chief or petty constables, headboroughs, tithingmen, and other peace officers accordingly."

Constables to obey orders of commissioners.

The commissioners of sewers have jurisdiction over a sewer communicating with a navigable stream, or with the sea above the point where the tide ebbs and flows, if it be useful for navigation, and if the place over which the jurisdiction is, is likely to be benefited by it. (Dore v. Gray, 2 T. R. 358.)

Decisions as to jurisdiction of commissioners and rates, &c.

Sewers.

Sewer rates may be made to reimburse the charges of making such sewers. (Case of the Level of Hull, 2 Str. 1127.)

If a sea-bank, or wall, which the owners of particular lands are bound to repair, be destroyed by tempest, without any default in such owners, the commissioners of sewers may order a new one (in a different form, if necessary,) to be erected at the expense of the whole level. (R. v. Commissioners of Sewers for Western Division of County of Somerset, 8 T. R. 312.)

The commission of sewers extends only to navigable streams, unless within two miles of London. (Yeaw v. Holland, 2 Bla. Rep. 717.)

Where, in a large district, placed under one set of commissioners of sewers by the same commission, there were six separate lines of sewers, by which six several levels or divisions (into which the district was divided) were separately drained, and no one level derived benefit from the sewers in the others: held, that the commissioners ought to make a separate rate upon each level or division, for the maintenance of the sewers by which it was drained, and not one equal rate upon the whole district, for the maintenance of all the sewers within it. (R. v. Commissioners for Tower Hamlets, 4 Man. & Ry. 365; 9 B. & C. 517.)

The 23 Hen. VIII. c. 5, s. 17, having directed that "laws, acts, decrees, and ordinances," made by commissioners of sewers, shall stand good, and be put in execution so long time as their commission endureth, and no longer, except "the said laws and ordinances" be engrossed on parchment, and certified under the seals of the commissioners into Chancery, and have the royal assent; and the 13 Eliz. c. 9, having directed all commissions of sewers to continue in force for ten years, unless sooner determined by supersedeas, or any new commission, and that all "laws, ordinances, and constitutions," made by force of such commission, being written on parchment, indented, and under seals, &c., shall, without such certificate or royal assent, continue in force, notwithstanding the determination of the commission by supersedeas, until repealed or altered by new commissioners; and that all such "laws, ordinances, and constitutions," written in parchment, indented, and sealed, &c., shall, without certificate or royal assent, continue in force for one year after the expiration of such commission, by lapse of ten years from its teste: held, 1st, that the laws, acts, decrees, and ordinances, mentioned in the statute of Hen. VIII., mean the same as the laws, ordinances, and constitutions, mentioned in that of Elizabeth; and, 2ndly, that a decree made by commissioners, under a former commission, which had expired by a lapse of ten years, directing a sea-wall to be re-founded, which had been destroyed by a violent tempest and inundation, and the sums necessary for its construction to be advanced by those who were before bound to sustain it ratione tenuræ (and who did advance the money accordingly), and that a rate should be made on the level for their reimbursement (although such decree had been written in parchment, indented, and sealed, which this was not,) could not be enforced by commissioners under a new commission issued more than a year after the expiration of the former commission, as to so much of it as remained unexecuted, though good to the extent to which it had been executed; and therefore this court refused a mandamus to the new commissioners, to direct a rate to be levied on the level for the reimbursement, directed by the decree. (R. v. Somerset Commissioners of Sewers, 9 East, 109; 3 Smith, 105, S. C.)

Where the owner of marsh lands was bound by the custom of a sewage level to repair the sea-walls abutting on his own land, and by an extraordinary flood-tide the wall was damaged, the court refused to grant a mandamus to the commissioners of sewers to reimburse him the expense of the repairs; it appearing, by affidavit, that the wall had been previously presented for being in bad repair, and was out of repair at the time the accident happened: nor can the other landowners in the level be called upon to contribute to the repairs of such a wall. (R. v. Essex Commissioners of Sewers, 2 D. & R. 700; 1 B. & C. 447, S. C.)

Under the statutes of sewers, every person whose property derives benefit from the works of the commissioners is liable to be rated, although the benefit be not immediate.

Thus, where a case stated that the eastern wing of Somerset House was drained by the Board of Works, and had no communication with the common sewer running under the body of Somerset House, and being under the jurisdiction of the commissioners, and that the buildings derived no benefit from the sewer, except the general advantage of being accessible, and of the approaches and neighbouring public ways being properly drained and cleansed: it was held that the occupiers of the eastern wing were rateable for the common sewer.

Semble, that in an action of trespass against the commissioners for levying a rate, if it appeared that they had jurisdiction the court would not inquire whether the rate was proportioned to the benefit received from the sewage by the party rated.

Under the sewers act, 52 Geo. III. c. 48, (local and personal, public), s. 7, the party rated to the poor as the occupier of the premises is to be considered as the occupier for the purpose of assessment to the sewers rate, although in point of fact the occupancy is questioned. (Soady v. Wilson, 4 Nev. & M. 477; 3 Adol. & Ell. 248.)

The commissioners of sewers cannot assess a person in respect of drains which communicate with other drains that fall into the great sewer, if the level of his drains be so much above the sewer that the stopping of the sewer could not possibly throw back the water so as to injure his premises, and if he be not, and it does not appear that he is likely to be, benefited by the works done upon the sewer. (Masters v. Scroggs, 3 M. & Sel. 447.)

A tenement in the king's dock-yard, deriving a benefit from public sewers, and occupied by an officer of government who pays no rent, is still liable to be rated to the sewers. (Netherton v. Ward, 3 B. & Ald. 21.)

Commissioners of sewers may make a rate to defray the expenses of works already done. In order to justify such a rate, it is not necessary that there should have been a previous presentment by a jury of those works.

It is no valid objection to such a rate, that it is made to defray the previous law expenses of the commission bonâ fide incurred by the commissioners in the discharge of their duty.

Nor that the rate is in the alternative, to defray the expenses of works done or to be done, for the word or must be read and. (R. v. Commissioners of Sewers for the Tower Hamlets, 1 B. & Adol. 322.)

A decree by the commissioners of sewers is not conclusive against the party assessed for the payment of a rate, and who resides within the district over which they have jurisdiction; but such party may prove, in an action of trespass brought by him against one of the collectors of the rates, for taking his goods to satisfy such rate, that he derived no profit from the sewer in respect of which the assessment was made; and such evidence having been rejected at Nisi Prius, the Court of Common Pleas granted a new trial. (Stafford v. Hamston, 5 Moore, 608; 2 B. & B. 691, S. C.)

By the 23 Hen. VIII. c. 5, the jury by whom a presentment is made to commissioners of sewers, concerning what lands are within a level, and subject to a certain rate, ought to be summoned by the sheriff from the body of the county, in pursuance of a precept directed to him from the commissioners for that purpose. (R. v. Somerset Commissioners of Sewers, 7 East, 71; 3 Smith, 105, S. C.)

And a presentment made by a standing jury, constituted according to ancient usage, originally returned by the sheriff at the commencement of every new commission of sewers from certain parishes or districts, composed of land-owners there interested in disclaiming the general charges of the level, which jurymen acted for life, unless removed for cause, and only the foreman of whom was summoned by the sheriff on the particular occasion, which foreman thereupon convened the other jurymen, is illegal and void, and the want of jurisdiction of such presenting jury cannot be waived by traversing their presentment, and going to trial before another jury properly returned from the body of the county by whom such presentment was confirmed. The presenting jury, after being sworn and charged, must also prosecute their inquiry, upon hearing evidence on oath before the commissioners in curia, and make their presentment thereon, and not upon information collected in pais, without oath. (R. v. Somerset Commissioners of Sewers, 7 East, 71; 3 Smith, 105, S. C.)

And where the precept to the sheriff was to summon "good and lawful men of your county, and resident within the Tower Hamlets," that being the district over which the commissioners had jurisdiction, it was held bad, and a presentment made by that jury, and all the subsequent proceedings founded on it, were declared to be void. (Birkett v. Crozier, 3 C. & P. 63; 1 M. & M. 119, S. C.)

A jury impannelled to inquire and present at a court of commissioners of sewers, presented that A. was benefited by the sewers, and he received a summons to show cause why he should not pay; he neglected to traverse the presentment, and a distress was levied for the amount of the rate: held, that these facts were a justification in an action of trespass for taking the distress, as the presentment, if duly made and not traversed, justified the commissioners in issuing the warrant of distress. (Warren v. Dix, 3 C. & P. 71, n.)

The presentment need not contain the name of every person benefited; if it find "all Fore Street" to be benefited, that is enough to include every one having a house there; and every one so having a house might traverse such presentment, he stating in his traverse that his property is so situated, and that he is aggrieved by the presentment. (Id.)

The warrant of distress need not recite the presentment. (Id.)

The defendant is not entitled to recover his treble damages under the 23 Hen. VIII. c. 5, s. 12, in case of a verdict in his favour, or a nonsuit, unless he claims them on the record. (Id.)

By act of parliament, empowering certain persons to make a floating harbour at Bristol, it was enacted that it should and might be lawful for the directors of the Bristol Dock-Company, and they were thereby authorized and required, to make a common sewer in a certain direction, therein specified, and also to alter or re-construct all or any of the sewers of the said city, at the mouths thereof, so and in such manner that the sewers might be discharged considerably under the surface of the water in the floating harbour; and also to make such other alterations and amendments in the sewers of the said city as might or should be necessary, in consequence of the floating of the said harbour. The directors altered several of the sewers, so as to discharge them considerably under the surface of the water in the floating harbour; but the sewage there discharged was so offensive, as to be a nuisance to the neighbourhood: held, that under the latter part of the clause set forth, the directors were authorized and required to make a new sewer, if necessary, to remove the nuisance. (R. v. Bristol Dock Company, 6 B. & C. 181; 9 D. & R. 309.)

Where A. was fined by commissioners of sewers for refusing to be re-sworn by a standing jury, the court discharged the fine, it being admitted that it was not usual to re-swear the jury except upon the issuing of a new commission. (Ex parte Taylor, 3 Y. & J. 91.)

The court will not, upon an application to discharge an amercement, enter into a disputed question as to the validity of the court of sewers. (Id.)

The court refused to exercise jurisdiction against commissioners of sewers, to restrain their removing a float, or tumbling-bay, upon a river, such removal being stated to be irreparable mischief. (Kerrison v. Sparrow, Coop. C. C. 305.)

A local act provided that no ditch, &c. should be arched over, &c. without the consent of the trustees under the act, under a penalty of 50*l.*: held, that a surveyor, who after a sewer had been commenced directed it to be continued (without the consent of the trustees), had incurred the penalty. (Woodward v. Cotton, 1 C. M. & Rosc. 44.)

Where bricklayers employed by the commissioners of sewers to repair a public sewer, performed the work in such a manner as to occasion a damage to a neighbouring house: held, that they were liable to an action, although the work itself appeared to be performed in a skilful manner. (Jones v. Bird, 1 D. & R. 497; 5 B. & Ald. 837, S. C.)

Sewers.

The commissioners of sewers cannot maintain an action of trespass against the commissioners of a harbour, for breaking down a wall or dam erected by the former as such commissioners across a navigable river; as the authority to be exercised by them, on the behalf of the public, does not vest in them such a property or possessory interest as will enable them to maintain such action. (Newcastle, Duke, v. Clark, 2 Moore, 666; 8 Taun. 602, S. C.)

A local act of parliament, enacting, that, for the better and more effectual execution of the act, all the lands, &c., within a certain district (previously within the jurisdiction of the general commissioners of sewers), and the works, drains, sewers, &c., thereof, should be subject only to the controul, &c., and jurisdiction, of local commissions thereby appointed, and not to the controul, direction, survey, or order, of any commissioners of sewers, does not discharge the inhabitants of the district from their liability to serve on juries at the sessions at sewers, without an express provision; nor will the Court of Exchequer discharge the estreats of fines imposed by the sessions, and levied on such inhabitants, for refusing to attend when summoned, and the mode of proceeding by which the question was brought under the consideration of the court was by a rule to show cause why the estreats should not be discharged, the commissioners of sewers having refused to join in framing an issue to enable the parties to try the question at law. (Ex parte Owst, 9 Price, 117.)

As to continuing under a new commission proceedings commenced under an old one, see Saunders v. Taylor, 9 B. & Cres. 43.

Sexton.

The sexton (segsten, segerstane, the keeper of the things belonging to Divine Worship) is usually chosen by the parish, though sometimes by the minister, where an usage to that effect prevails. His salary depends upon custom, and is paid by the churchwardens. His fees are generally settled by order of the vestry, and a table of them is hung up in the vestry-room, or in the church. (Shaw, Par. L. 71; Steer, P. L. 102.)

How chosen.

His business is to keep the church clean swept and adorned, to open the pews, to make and fill up the graves for the dead, and to provide, under the direction of the churchwardens, candles and necessities belonging to the church, to get the linen washed, &c., to attend during Divine Service, to keep out excommunicated persons, and to prevent any disturbance in the church. (Id.)

Duty of.

Sextons are considered by the common law to have freeholds in their offices; and, therefore, if they be improperly removed, or for alleged misconduct, a mandamus lies to restore them; (R. v. Kingscleere, 2 Lev. 18; Salk. 428; Ile's Case, 1 Ventr. 153;) for though they may be punished, they cannot be deprived by ecclesiastical censures. (2 Roll. Ab. 234; Bac. Ab. Mandamus, C.)

A freehold office.

But a return to a mandamus that L. C. was not duly elected sexton according to the ancient custom, and that there is a custom for the inhabitants to remove at pleasure, and that L. C. was removed pursuant to such custom, is good. (R. v. Churchwarden of Taunton, 1 Cowp. 413.) So, upon a return to a mandamus, that the sexton held his office at pleasure, the court decided this to be sufficient, as there was no certificate that he was chosen for life. (R. v. the Churchwardens of Thame, 1 Stra. 115.)

In the case of Olive v. Ingram, Stra. 1114, two points were made. First, whether a woman was capable of being chosen sexton; and secondly, whether women could vote in the election. As to the first, the court seemed to have no difficulty about it, there having been many cases where offices of greater consequence have been held by women, and there being many women sextons at that time in London. The authorities cited upon this point were :—Spelman's Gloss, 497, a woman appointed governor of Chelmsford workhouse. (2 Ld. Raym. 1014.) Lady Broughton's case, who was keeper of the Gatehouse. (3 Keb. 32; 4 Inst. 221; Dy. 285; Hob. 148.)

Sexton.

And in Brady's "History of Boroughs," it appears that Lady Parkington was returning officer for members at Aylesbury; and the Countess of Pembroke, Dorset, and Montgomery, had the office of hereditary sheriff of Westmoreland, and exercised it in person, sitting with the judges on the bench at the assizes at Appleby. (Har. Co. Lit. 326.)

Female electors.

As to the second point, though women cannot vote for members of parliament, or coroners, yet the court, notwithstanding, held, that this being an offence that did not concern the public, or the care or inspection of the morals of the parishioners, there was no reason to exclude women, who paid rates, from the privilege of voting, and no usage of excluding them was stated, which might have altered the case. (Id. Steers, P. L. 103.)

United parishes.

Where two parishes were united after the fire of London, and one set of officers elected at a joint vestry had served for both, and the office of sexton had been filled in the same way upon nine successive vacancies, and the salary had been paid in equal proportions by both parishes, but afterwards one of the parishes claimed to elect a separate sexton, of which they had given notice to the other, in such case, that other parish cannot maintain an action for money paid to the use of the first parish, for their quota of the sexton's salary, for this was paid against their express consent. Nor can the right of the sexton be tried in such case without his being a party thereto; nor can he bring his action in such case against both parishes on a joint obligation, or against one of them only for the whole sum. (Stokes v. Lewis, 1 T. R. 20.)

Divided parishes.

In the recent statutes for the erection of additional churches, provision is made for the protection of the interests of sextons in those cases where it is found expedient to create new parishes. The 59 Geo. IV. c. 134, s. 10, enacts, "that when any parish shall be divided under the provisions of those acts, all fees, dues, profits, and emoluments, belonging to the parish clerk, or sexton, respectively, of any parish so divided, shall belong and be recoverable by the clerks and sextons respectively of each division, to which they shall be assigned, in like manner and after the same rate as they were recoverable by the clerk and sexton respectively of the original parish; and the commissioners may make compensation for any loss of fees, or emoluments, which any clerk or sexton may sustain, by reason of any such division."

Settlement.

The office of sexton, like that of parish clerk, confers a right of settlement; and if the churchyard lie in two parishes, the sexton may gain a settlement in the one in which he resides, although no part of the church lies within that parish. (Rex v. Liverpool, 3 T. R. 118.)

Church keys.

In a case where after a contested election for the office of sexton, an application was made for a mandamus to deliver up the keys of the church to the successful candidate, Lord Ellenborough said, "Why did they not get new keys? The keys of the church are not like an emblem of office, or the like. If it will probably prevent any breach of the peace we will grant it, but you had better get a new key." (2 Chitty, R. 255; and see Steer, P. Law, 104.)

Sheep.

As to Slaughter-houses for Sheep, see "Horses," Vol. III.

As to the Exportation of Sheep, see, post, "Woollen Manufactories."

The 25 Hen. VIII. c. 13, for the preventing many farms being accumulated into few hands, and for the encouragement of tillage, enacts that no person shall have above two thousand sheep at one time, at six score to the hundred, except it be upon his own inheritance only, and except what are necessary for his household, on pain of forfeiting 3s. 4d. for every sheep above that number, half to the king, and half to him that will sue.

None shall have above 2000 sheep.

And if any person shall happen to have more, by reason of being executor or administrator, he shall sell off within a year, till he have 2000.

But sheep bequeathed to a child within age shall not be reckoned in the number.

Lambs are not to be reckoned sheep till the second Midsummer after they are lambled.

When lambs are deemed sheep.

And the justices of the peace may inquire of this offence by a jury, or by information.

By the 38 Geo. III. c. 65, s. 1, "if any person or persons whosoever shall turn out, keep, or depasture, in or upon any forest, chase, wood, moor, marsh, heath, common, waste land, open field, or other undivided or uninclosed land, any sheep or lambs infected with such complaint or disorder called scab or mange, or shall wilfully and knowingly turn out, keep, or depasture, in or upon any such forest, chase, wood, moor, marsh, heath, common, waste land, open field, or other undivided or uninclosed land, any sheep or lamb which, at any time within the space of six calendar months immediately previous thereto, shall have been infected as aforesaid, every such person, on being thereof convicted on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, or on his or her confession, before any one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, district, or place, wherein such offence shall have been committed, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 10*l.*, nor less than 20*s.*, for every such offence, together with all reasonable costs and charges attending such conviction, such costs and charges to be ascertained by the justice or justices before whom such conviction shall take place; and so toties quoties, as often as any such sheep or lamb shall be so turned out, kept, or depastured."

Turning out scabbed sheep on commons, &c.

Sect. 2. "The owner or owners of each and every sheep and lamb of the age of three months, which shall be turned out, kept, or depastured, on any forest, chase, wood, moor, marsh, heath, common, waste land, open field, or other undivided or uninclosed land, shall cause such sheep and lambs to be marked with the initial letters of his, her, or their christian name and surname, or christian names and surnames, or with such marks with which such sheep or lambs have for three preceding years been usually marked, such letters or marks not being less in length than three inches; and in case of neglect thereof, the owner or owners shall, for each and every such sheep and lamb not so marked, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 2*s.*, and so toties quoties, as often as any such sheep or lamb not so marked shall have been so turned out, kept, or depastured."

Sheep and lambs three months old to be marked.

Sect. 3. "For the better and more effectually discovering the offenders, and punishing the offences herein mentioned, it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons having sheep or lambs actually depasturing, or entitled to be depastured, on such forest, chase, wood, moor, marsh, heath, common, waste land, open field, or other undivided or uninclosed land, who shall perceive, or have reasonable ground or foundation for believing, that there is or are any sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, depasturing or being in or upon the same, contrary to the direction and provisions of this act, to apply to any one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county, district, or place, wherein such lands severally do lie, who, upon complaint on oath made thereof before him or them, is and are hereby authorized and required to issue a warrant or warrants under his hand and seal, or their hands and seals, directed to the keeper or keepers of the said forests or chases, or his or their deputy or deputies, or to the petty constable or constables, bailiff, headborough, or tithingman, of any parish, hamlet, or township, within or near which any such forest, chase, wood, moor, marsh, heath, common, waste land, open field, or other undivided or uninclosed land, shall lie and be situate, or unto any other person or persons, who shall consent and be willing to be inserted in such warrant or warrants, and shall command and empower him or them, or any of them, to take or drive all and every such sheep and lambs, sheep and lamb, to the next pound, or to some other convenient place, there to be examined by the person or persons who shall have made such application to such justice or justices as aforesaid, his, her, or their servant or agent, and by the person or persons to whom the said warrant shall be directed, any or either of them, notice being first given six hours at the least before such examination shall take place, by the person or persons making such complaint, or by his, her, or their servant or agent, to the owner or owners of such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, or unto his, her, or their hind, bailiff, or servant, or left at his, her, or their last or usual place of abode, if any or either of them be known, and do reside in the parish or parishes, hamlet or hamlets, township or townships, where such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, shall have been so found, describing the pound or place the same have been taken or driven to, in order that he, she, or they may, should he, she, or they judge proper, be present at such examination; and if, after such examination, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the justice or justices granting such warrant or warrants, that such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, have or hath not been kept or depastured in or upon such lands and grounds, contrary to the directions and provisions of this act, then and in such case each and every such sheep and lamb shall be taken and driven back to the place or places from whence it was taken or driven previous to such examination, and such justice or justices shall award such costs, charges, and damages to the owner or owners thereof, as to him or them shall seem reasonable; and such costs, charges, and damages, shall be paid by the person or persons making such complaint, and shall be recovered in like manner as any forfeitures or penalties are by this act directed to be recovered."

Sect. 4. "If, upon any such examination, it shall appear to such justice or justices, that any such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, have or hath been turned out, kept, or depastured in or upon any such lands or grounds, infected as aforesaid, or which at any time within the space of six calendar months immediately previous thereto shall have been infected as aforesaid, then and in such case the said justice or justices shall and may direct the same to be impounded, detained, and kept, and to be forthwith marked on both sides with the letter S (the length of such letter not being less than five inches), such marks to be made with pitch or tar, or some other adhesive material, such as sheep have been usually marked with in the neighbourhood, and shall also cause the left ear of each such sheep and lamb to be cut or slit in a horizontal line (such cut or slit not exceeding the length of one inch), and the same, when so marked, shall be delivered, upon demand, to the owner or owners thereof; and the costs, charges, and expenses attending the taking, driving, keeping, impounding, and marking of the same, having been ascertained by such justice or justices, shall be paid by the owner or owners of such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, together with the penalties and forfeitures imposed by this act, for each and every such sheep and lamb, and such costs, charges, and expenses shall be recovered in like manner as any penalties or forfeitures imposed by this act are directed to be recovered; and any such mark or marks, when made, shall be, and be deemed evidence of the fact that such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, have been turned out, kept, or depastured, contrary to the directions and provisions of this act, without any other evidence whatsoever."

Sect. 5. "If any person or persons, at any time within the space of six calendar months after any such sheep or lambs shall have been so marked as directed by such justice or justices, shall cut out, alter, or destroy the mark herein directed to be made in the ear of any such sheep or lambs, or if the owner or owners of any such sheep or lamb shall not immediately renew or cause to be renewed, in like manner, the mark or marks herein directed to be made in the side or sides of every such sheep or lamb, when and as often as such mark or marks on the side or sides shall be defaced, altered, obliterated, or destroyed, by any means whatsoever, every such person, for each and every sheep and lamb, the said mark in the ear of which shall have been by him or her so cut out, altered, or destroyed, and such owner or owners, for each and every sheep and lamb, not having the said mark or marks on the side or sides thereof, immediately renewed as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay, on conviction, any sum not exceeding 20s., nor less than 2s.; and the justice or justices before whom such conviction * be had, shall, and he and they is and are hereby required to cause every such mark so cut out, altered, defaced, obliterated, or destroyed, to be immediately renewed, and the sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, to be detained and impounded until every such mark shall have been renewed."

Sect. 6. "If such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, so detained or impounded, shall not be demanded and taken away by the owner or owners thereof within five days after the same shall have been so marked as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice or justices of the peace of the county, district, or place, in which such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, shall have been so detained or impounded, by warrant under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, to direct the same to be sold, and the money arising by such sale, after deducting the costs, charges, and expenses of taking, driving, keeping, detaining, impounding, and marking the same, shall be paid to the overseer or overseers of the poor of the parish, hamlet, or place where such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, shall have been so detained or impounded; and in case the owner or owners of such sheep or lambs, sheep or lamb, shall not claim such money within twelve calendar months after such payment, the same shall be applied in aid of the poor-rate of such parish, hamlet, township, or place."

manded in five days after marked may be sold.

Sect. 7. "All penalties and forfeitures by this act imposed for any offence against the same, shall be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant under the hand and seal of some justice of the peace for the county or place where the offence shall be committed, rendering the overplus of the money arising by such distress and sale (if any), upon demand, to the owner of such goods and chattels, after deducting the costs and charges of making such distress and sale; which warrant such justice is hereby empowered and required to grant, upon conviction of the offender or offenders, by confession or upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses; and one moiety of such penalties and forfeitures, when so levied, shall be paid to the informer, and the other moiety to the overseer or overseers of the parish or township where the offence shall be committed, to be applied by him or them in aid of the poor-rate."

Penalties, how to

Sect. 8. "That in all cases where any conviction shall be had for any offence or offences committed against this act, or against any order of sessions, or any adjudication for the marking of sheep or lambs made, the form of conviction, and the form of adjudication for the marking of any sheep or lambs, shall be in the words or to the effect following; that is to say,

SHERIFF (shireve) in Saxon is scirgerefa, from sciran, to share or divide, for that the whole realm is parted and divided into shires; and gerefa, the comes, earl or governor, in the Belgic, called græf or grave. The word comes or count came first into Europe out of the eastern countries, and the word county, in Latin comitatus, seemeth to be nothing else but the division or allotment over which the comes or count had jurisdiction. And when the counts or earls left the custody of the counties, then was the custody thereof committed to the viscounts, or vicecomes (which is the Latin name for sheriffs); so called, because they supply the place of the comes or earl. The earl was otherwise called by the Saxons, eorl, ealdor, ealdorman (elder or alderman), because they were usually men of age and experience; by a like derivation as that of senators among the Romans.

By four several statutes it is enacted that none shall be sheriff, except he have sufficient land within the shire to answer the king and his people, viz. 9 Edw. II. st. 2; 4 Edw. III. c. 9; 5 Edw. III. c. 4; 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 21. (See Watson's Sheriff, 4.)

In general, no man can be exempt from the office of sheriff but by act of parliament, or letters patent. (Earl of Shrewsbury's Case, 9 Rep. 46.)

By the Militia Act, 42 Geo. III. c. 90, s. 172, no person, being an officer of the militia, shall be compelled to serve the office of sheriff.

In the case of the mayor of Norwich v. Berry, 4 Burr. 2109, it was adjudged that an attorney is exempted from the office of sheriff of a corporation, by reason of his attendance on the courts at Westminster; and, though Lord Mansfield, C. J., distinguished this office in a corporation from that of the sheriff of a county, he seemed to think the privilege extended equally to the latter.

The payment of the fine fixed by the 9 Geo. I. c. 9, s. 3, to be discharged from serving the office of sheriff of Norwich, does not exempt the person paying it for more than one year, unless the corporation agree that he shall be discharged for a longer time. (R. v. Woodrow, 2 T. R. 731; see, also, R. v. Bower, 1 B. & C. 585; 2 D. & R. 842, S. C.)

At the common law the sheriff was chosen by the county; but, by the 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 7, he shall be appointed yearly on the morrow of All Souls (since altered to the morrow of St. Martin), at the Exchequer, by the chancellor, treasurer, and chief baron, taking to them the chief justices.

Except in London, and where the office is a man's freehold or inheritance. 23 Hen. VI. c. 8.

By the 3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 18, the sheriff (except in Wales and Chester(b)), at the entering upon his office, shall take the following oath (to be administered in pursuance of a writ of dedimus potestatem):—

"I, A. B., do swear, that I will well and truly serve the king's majesty in the office of sheriff of the county of _____, and promote his majesty's profit in all things that belong to my office, as far as I legally can or may; I will truly preserve the king's rights, and all that belongeth to the crown; I will not assent to decrease, lessen, or conceal the king's rights, or the rights of his franchises; and, whensoever I shall have knowledge that the rights of the crown are concealed or withdrawn, be it in lands, rents, franchises, suits, or services, or in any other matter or thing, I will do my utmost to make them be restored to the crown again; and if I may not do it myself, I will certify and inform the king thereof, or some of his judges. I will not respite or delay to levy the king's debts for any gift, promise, reward, or favour, where I may raise the same without great grievance to the debtors; I will do right, as well to poor as to rich, in all things belonging to my office; I will do no wrong to any man for any gift, reward, or promise, nor for favour or hatred; I will disturb no man's right, and will truly and faithfully acquit at the Exchequer all those of whom I shall receive any debts or duties belonging to the crown; I will take nothing whereby the king may lose, or whereby his right may be disturbed, injured, or delayed; I will truly return and truly serve all the king's writs, according to the best of my skill and knowledge; I will take no bailiffs into my service but such as I will answer for, and will cause each of them to take such oaths as I do, in what belongeth to their business and occupation; I will truly set and return reasonable and due issues of them that be within my bailiwick, according to their estate and circumstances, and make due panels of persons able and sufficient, and not suspected or procured, as is appointed by the statutes of this realm; I have not sold or let to farm, nor contracted for, nor have I granted or promised for reward or benefit, nor will I sell or let to farm, nor contract for, or grant for reward or benefit, by myself or any other person for me, or for my use, directly or indirectly, my sheriffwick, or any bailiwick thereof, or any office belonging thereunto, or the profits of the same, to any person or persons whatsoever; I will truly and diligently execute the good laws and statutes of this realm; and, in all things, well and truly behave myself in my office, for the honour of the king and the good of his subjects, and discharge the same according to the best of my skill and power. So help me God."

5 & 6 Wil. 4, c. 28.

9 Geo. 4, c. 17.

By the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 28, "An Act for removing Doubts as to the Declaration to be made and Oaths to be taken by Persons appointed to the Office of Sheriff of any City or Town being a County of itself," [21st August 1835,] reciting, "Whereas by an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for repealing so much of several Acts as imposes the Necessity of receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a Qualification to certain Offices and Employments,' it is enacted, that every person who should thereafter be placed, elected, or chosen in or to the office of mayor, alderman, recorder, bailiff, town clerk, or common councilman, or in or to any office of magistracy, or place, trust, or employment relating to the government of any city, corporation, borough, or cinque port within England and Wales, or the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, should, within one calendar month next before or upon his admission into any of the aforesaid offices or trusts, make and subscribe the declaration therein mentioned; and it is thereby further enacted, that if any person placed, elected, or chosen into any of the aforesaid offices or places should omit or neglect to make and subscribe the said declaration in manner therein mentioned, such placing, election, or choice, should be void, and that it should not be lawful for such person to do any act in the execution of the office or place into which he should be so chosen, elected, or placed: and whereas doubts have been entertained whether the aforesaid provisions may be held to extend to persons elected or chosen to the office of sheriff of any city or town being a county of itself; and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed: it is enacted, that no person who has already been or who shall hereafter be elected or chosen to the office of sheriff of any city or town being a county of itself shall by reason thereof be liable to make or subscribe the aforesaid declaration within one calendar month next before or upon his admission to the said office: provided always, that every person so elected or chosen to the said office of sheriff shall take, make, and subscribe, within the time required by law, all oaths and declarations which sheriffs of counties are bound to take, make, and subscribe."

No person chosen a sheriff of a city or town shall thereby be liable to make the declaration in recited act.

Proviso.

The Court of King's Bench granted an information against a person refusing to take on him the office of sheriff, because the vacancy of the office occasioned a stop to public justice; and the year would be nearly expired before an indictment could be brought. (R. v. Woodrow, 2 T. R. 781.)

Sheriff.

Refusing to take office.

By the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 99, s. 3, "whenever any person shall be duly pricked or nominated by his majesty for and to be sheriff of any county in England or Wales, except the county palatine of Lancaster, the same shall be forthwith notified in the London Gazette, and a warrant in the form set forth in the schedule to this act shall be forthwith made out and signed by the clerk of the privy council, and transmitted by him to the person so nominated and appointed sheriff as aforesaid; and the appointment of sheriff thereby made shall be as good, valid, and effectual in the law to all intents and purposes whatsoever as if the same had been made by patent under the great seal of Great Britain, or by any ways and means heretofore in use; and the sheriff or sheriffs so appointed as aforesaid shall thereupon, and upon taking the oath of office hereafter mentioned, have and exercise all powers, privileges, and authorities whatsoever usually exercised and enjoyed by sheriffs of counties in England and Wales, without any patent writ of assistance or other writ whatsoever, or entering into any recognizance by himself or sureties, and without payment of or being liable to pay any fees whatsoever for the same."

Appointment of sheriff.

Sect. 4. Provided "that a duplicate of the said warrant shall, within ten days next after the date of the same warrant, be transmitted by the said clerk of the privy council to the clerk of the peace of the county for which such person shall be nominated and appointed sheriff, to be by the said clerk of the peace enrolled, and which he is hereby required to enrol and keep without fee or reward."

Clerk of peace to enrol duplicate.

Sect. 5. "From and after the passing of this act every person so appointed sheriff as aforesaid shall, within one calendar month next after the notification of his appointment in the London Gazette, by writing under his hand, nominate and appoint some fit and proper person to be his under sheriff, and shall transmit a duplicate thereof to the clerk of the peace for the county, to be by him filed, and which he is hereby required to file, among the records of his office, and for which he shall be entitled to demand and have from such under sheriff the sum of five shillings, and no more; and such appointment and duplicate shall not be liable to any stamp duty whatever."

Sheriff to appoint an under sheriff, and transmit a duplicate thereof to the clerk of the peace for the county.

Sect. 6. "Each and every person so appointed sheriff and under sheriff as aforesaid, except the sheriffs of London and Middlesex and their under sheriffs, shall, before he enter upon the execution of his office, take the oath of office heretofore and now required by law, which oath shall be fairly written on parchment (without being subject to any stamp duty) and signed by him, and shall and may be sworn before the barons of his majesty's exchequer or any of them, or any one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county of which he shall be appointed sheriff or under sheriff; and the same shall be thereupon transmitted to the clerk of the peace for the same county, who is hereby required to file the same among the records of his office, and for which he shall be entitled to demand and have from such sheriff or under sheriff the sum of five shillings, and no more."

Oaths of sheriff and under sheriff.

By the 4 Hen. IV. c. 5, the sheriff in person shall continue within his bailiwick, and shall not let it to farm.

Sheriff selling inferior offices.

And by the 3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 10, none shall buy, sell, let, or take to farm the office of under sheriff, gaoler, bailiff, or other office, pertaining to the office of high sheriff, on pain of 500*l.*, half to the king and half to him that shall sue (in two years). See, further, "Office," Vol. III.

By the 1 Hen. V. c. 4, no under sheriff, sheriff's clerk, receiver, nor sheriff's bailiff, shall be attorney in the king's courts, during the time that he is in office with any sheriff.

Sheriff's officers not to be attorneys,

Sheriff.

or jurors.

Appointment of the under sheriff.

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 2, sheriff's officers are exempt from serving on juries. See "Jurors," Vol. III. p. 497.

By the 3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 11, the under sheriff shall be appointed by the high sheriff, because he shall answer for him; and, by sect. 19, he shall take the like oath as the high sheriff, mutatis mutandis.

The sheriff is answerable for the official acts of his under sheriff. (Woodgate v. Knatchbull, 2 T. R. 148; 1 Doug. 43, n., S. C.)

An under sheriff cannot refuse to execute process till he has his fees. (Heskett's Case, 1 Salk. 330.)

An inquisition, taken before two under sheriffs extraordinary, was set aside; for the high sheriff can appoint only one under sheriff extraordinary. (2 Wils. 378.)

bailiff.

The bailiffs also shall be appointed by him for the like reason; and every bailiff, when he gives security, upon entering into his office, shall make it part of the condition of such security that he will deliver a copy of the clauses in the 32 Geo. II. c. 28, concerning the carrying of prisoners for debt to alehouses (which is inserted more at large in Vol. II. title "Gaols," &c. Sect., XVIII.)

And by the 27 Eliz. c. 12, s. 2, such bailiff, or other person returning juries, or intermeddling with processes, shall take the following oath of office, before a judge of assize, or the custos rotulorum, or two justices of the peace (one of them being of the quorum):

Bailiff's oath.

"I, A. B., shall not use or exercise the office of bailiff corruptly during the time that I shall remain therein; neither shall nor will accept, receive, or take, by any colour, means, or device whatsoever, or consent to the taking of any manner of fee or reward of any person or persons, for the impannelling or returning of any inquest, jury, or tales, in any court of record, for the king, or betwixt party and party, above 2s., or the value thereof, or such fees as are allowed and appointed for the same by the laws and statutes of this realm; but will, according to my power, truly and indifferently, with convenient speed, impanel all jurors, and return all such writ or writs touching the same as shall appertain to be done by my duty or office, during the time that I shall remain in the said office.
So help me God."

Sect. 4, 6. Persons acting before they have taken the said oath shall forfeit 40*l.*; half to the king, and half to him that shall sue in the sessions, or other court of record.

Sect. 5. If they commit any act contrary to their said oath, they shall forfeit (in like manner) to the party grieved his treble damages.

And the sheriff's bailiffs shall not be in the same office in three years after, (1 Hen. V. c. 4,) except in London, Middlesex, Durham, Westmoreland, and towns being counties of themselves. (3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 21.)

The sheriff and bailiff are not both answerable in an action for a penalty for the same act. (Peshall v. Martin, 2 T. R. 712.)

But, after verdicts in both actions, the court will stay proceedings in both, on paying one penalty, and the costs in one action. (Peshall v. Martin, 2 T. R. 712.)

Liability of she-
acts.

It seems that an action may be maintained against the sheriff for the penalty given by the 29 Eliz. c. 4, for the acts of his bailiff. (Woodgate v. Knatchbull, 2 T. R. 155, et seq.)

But all actions for breach of duty of the office of sheriff must be brought against the high-sheriff, though in consequence of the default of the under sheriff or bailiff. (Cameron v. Reynolds, 1 Cowp. 403.)

As to the evidence in order to connect the sheriff with the bailiff, see Ros. Ev. 613, 4th ed.; and as to when the admissions of the under sheriff or bailiff may be evidence against the sheriff, see Id. 41, 614.

Extortion.

An indictment lies against a sheriff for extortion, if he himself be guilty of it. See "Extortion," Vol. II., p. 809.

Courts of sheriff.

The sheriff hath a jurisdiction both in criminal and civil cases; and for this purpose he hath two courts, his tourn for criminal causes, which is therefore the king's court; the other in his county court for civil causes, and this is the court of the sheriff himself. (3 Salk. 322. See "County Court," Vol. I.; "Tourn," post.)

Sheriff.

A sheriff has no authority to order a freeholder into custody, and to take him before a magistrate, if he interrupt the proceedings at a county court, held for the election of knights of the shire, by making a noise and disturbance. (Spilsbury v. Micklethwaite, 1 Taun. 146.)

The new sheriff being appointed and sworn, he ought, at or before the next county court, to deliver a writ of discharge to the old sheriff, who is to set over all the prisoners in the gaol severally, by their names (together with all the writs), precisely, by view and indenture between the two sheriffs; wherein must be comprehended all the actions which the old sheriff hath against every prisoner, though the executions are of record. And, till the delivery of the prisoners to the new sheriff, they remain in the custody of the old sheriff, notwithstanding the letters patent of appointment, the writ of discharge, and the writ of delivery. Neither is the new sheriff obliged to receive the prisoners, but at the gaol only. But the office of the old sheriff ceases, when the writ of discharge cometh to him. (Wood's Inst. b. 1, c. 7.)

Accounts of his predecessor.

By the 20 Geo. II. c. 37, the old sheriff shall turn over to his successor, by indenture and schedule, all such writs and process as shall remain unexecuted; and the new sheriff shall execute and return the same.

Sheriff to turn over unexecuted process to successor.

When a sheriff quits his office, the custody of the county gaol can only belong to his successor. The county gaol is the prison for malefactors, and the sheriff ought to keep them there; but prisoners for debt, &c., where escape lies against the sheriff for their escape, may be kept in what place the sheriff pleases. (1 Ld. Raym. 136.)

Also prisoners.

By the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 99, s. 7, "every sheriff of any county, city, liberty, division, town corporate, or place, shall at the expiration of his office make out and deliver to the new or incoming sheriff a true and correct list and account under his hand of all prisoners in his custody, and of all writs and other process in his hands not wholly executed by him, with all such particulars as shall be necessary to explain to the said incoming sheriff the several matters intended to be transferred to him, and shall thereupon turn over and transfer to the care and custody of the said incoming sheriff all such prisoners, writs, and process, and all records, books, and matters appertaining to the said office of sheriff; and the said incoming sheriff shall thereupon sign and give a duplicate of such list and account to the sheriff going out of office, to whom the same shall be a good and sufficient discharge of and from all the prisoners therein mentioned and transferred to the said incoming sheriff, and the further charge of the execution of the writs, process, and other matters therein contained, without any writ of discharge, or other writ whatsoever; and the said incoming sheriff shall thereupon stand and be charged with the said prisoners, and also with the execution and care of the said writs, process, and other matters, contained in the said list and account, as fully and effectually as if the same writs and process had been turned over by indenture and schedule; and in case any sheriff shall refuse or neglect at the expiration of his office to make out, sign, and deliver such list and account as aforesaid, and to turn over the process aforesaid in manner aforesaid, every such sheriff so neglecting or refusing shall be liable to make such satisfaction by damages and costs to the party aggrieved as he, she, or they shall sustain by such neglect or refusal.

Prisoners and writs to be turned over by sheriffs at the expiration of their office to the incoming sheriff.

The sheriff, having a justice of the peace's warrant directed to him, shall execute the same; but he need not go in person to execute it, but may authorize another to do it. (2 Haw. c. 13, s. 29.)

Sheriff, how far amenable to the justices of the peace.

And it is no excuse to the sheriff to return that he could not execute a precept because of resistance; for he may take with him the power of the county. (13 Ed. I. st. 1, c. 39.)

Also, the sheriff, on summons, is bound to attend the sessions of the peace, there to return his precepts, to take the charge of the prisoners, to receive fines for the king, and the like. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 45.)

Sheriff.

Taking recognizances.

And it seems clear, from the general reason of the law, which gives all courts of record a kind of discretionary power over all abuses by their own officers, that the sheriff is punishable by the justices in sessions for defaults in executing their writs and precepts. (2 Haw. c. 22, s. 2.)

In the case of Bengough and another v. Rossiter, 4 T. R. 505, it was determined that a sheriff has no authority to take a bond for the appearance of persons arrested by him, under process issuing upon an indictment at the quarter sessions for a misdemeanor; he can only take a recognizance for their appearance.

Sheriff a conservator of the peace, but not to act as justice.

Every sheriff is a principal conservator of the peace, by the common law, and may, ex officio, award process of the peace, and take surety for it: and it seems to be the better opinion, that the security so taken by him is, by the common law, looked on as a recognizance, or matter of record, and not as a common obligation. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 4.)

But by 1 Mar. Sess. 2, c. 8, no sheriff shall exercise the office of a justice of the peace in any county wherein he is sheriff; and, in such case, his acts as a justice shall be void.

Sheriff to have the keeping of gaols.

By the 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 10, and 19 Hen. VII. c. 10, the sheriff shall have the keeping of gaols: and, at the expiration of his office, the custody of the county gaol is vested in his successor, ante, 643. See his duties and liabilities as gaoler, title "Gaol," Vol. II.; 4 Geo. IV. c. 84, s. 6.

And in all civil causes, as in cases of imprisonment for debt, the sheriff or gaoler (at the election of the party) shall be answerable for escapes suffered by the gaoler; but if the gaoler suffer a felon voluntarily to escape, this, inasmuch as it reacheth to life, is felony only in the gaoler; but the sheriff may be indicted, fined, and imprisoned. (1 Hale, 597.)

Sheriff answerable for money levied by him.

Where the sheriff levies money on a fiery facias, the plaintiff may have an action of debt against him for the money, because it was received by him to the plaintiff's use, and the defendant is discharged of it; and it lies against his executors, if he die. (3 Salk. 323.)

Passing his accounts.

The manner of passing his accounts is directed at large by the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 99; which, being foreign to our purpose, is not here inserted. The 10th section of that act enacts, that the oath or affidavit of the sheriff as to his accounts, may be sworn before a justice of the peace. As to the passing of his accounts when sheriff of Chester or Wales, see 1 Wil. IV. c. 70, s. 33.

How long he shall continue in office.

By the 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 7, and the 28 Edw. III. c. 7, no sheriff shall continue in his office above one year, except in London, Middlesex, and towns being counties of themselves, and where the office is a man's freehold or inheritance. See the 23 Hen. VI. c. 8; 3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 21.

And by the 1 Rich. II. c. 11, none that hath been sheriff shall be so again within three years, if there be other sufficient.

But by the 17 Edw. IV. c. 6, the sheriff may hold his office after the year, during Michaelmas and Hilary terms, if not before lawfully discharged.

Sheriff dying before the expiration of his office.

By the 3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 8, if the sheriff shall die before his office shall be expired, the under sheriff shall execute the same in the deceased sheriff's name, till a new sheriff be sworn, and be answerable for the execution thereof, as the deceased sheriff would have been.

At assizes.

The sheriff's duty, before and at the assizes, consists in, 1st, proclaiming assize; 2ndly, summoning the different juries: viz. the grand jury, nisi prius jury, crown jury, and also the special juries, if any, and granting views; see "Jurors," Vol. III.; 3dly, making his return to the assize precepts; 4thly, making and delivering a list of the prisoners to the judges, attending the judges, and providing them lodgings, &c.

The sheriff makes the required proclamation, by inserting an advertisement in the county newspapers. In some counties this is done by placarding printed proclamations in the principal towns and villages throughout the county. (Watson's Sheriff, 276.)

The sheriff, as well as his under-sheriff, must be in constant attendance on the judges during the whole of the assizes, and should provide the judges with lodgings, according to the custom of the particular county.

The sheriff should also go in state to meet the judges at the accustomed place, before they enter the town.

These, and other ceremonies, vary in different counties, and the under sheriff may readily inform himself of what attention he should pay the judges.

The under sheriff has a great many payments to make, to the criers, to the attendants of the judges, to his javelin men, &c. &c.; these are also regulated by custom.

For payments for the judges' lodgings, and other payments, as rewards, &c., he should take receipts, and these will be allowed him in his accounts. See "Assizes," Vol. I.; post, "Shire-Hall."

In case of any person being condemned to death, and left for execution, the undersheriff should attend, and also collect his constables, bailiffs, and all the disposable civil force he can command, to attend the execution. (See Watson's Sheriff, 278; title "Execution," Vol. II.)

Execution of a criminal.

The sheriff's duty, before and at sessions, chiefly consists in proclaiming the sessions, in returning the grand jury, and giving notice to all stewards, constables, bailiffs of hundreds and liberties, and other officers.

Sheriff's duty at sessions.

He is bound to provide and make ready a fit and decent place for holding the sessions, unless where this duty is otherwise repealed by statute. (Dalt. J. 372.)

He should attend the sessions by himself or his deputy, on summons, to return his precepts, receive fines for the king, and take charge of prisoners; and if he neglect to do so, he may be fined by the court. (Dick. Sess. 50.)

The under sheriff, at the sessions, receives all fines paid there.

He is also to pay the justices of the peace their wages, viz. 4s. per diem, and 2s. to the clerk of the peace, which will be allowed the sheriff in his accounts. (Watson, 280.)

The sheriff must execute the writs and precepts of justices in session, and he is responsible to the court of which he is an officer, though he may execute any process by deputy. (2 Haw. c. 22.)

I. Setting Fire to, or Destroying Ships.

Setting fire to or destroying a ship.

BY the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 9, "if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to, or in anywise destroy any ship or vessel, whether the same be complete or in an unfinished state, or shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to, cast away, or in anywise destroy any ship or vessel, with intent thereby to prejudice any owner or part owner of such ship or vessel, or of any goods on board the same, or any person that hath underwritten, or shall underwrite any policy of insurance upon such ship or vessel, or on the freight thereof, or upon any goods on board the same, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon."

Death.

This is nearly a re-enactment of the second section of the 43 Geo. III. c. 113, as to destroying ships. See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of this act, "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. III. The sentence of death may be recorded, 4 Geo. IV. c. 28.

Repeal.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals so much of the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 11, as relates to the wilful destruction of any ship by any of the persons belonging to it, as therein mentioned; and of so much of the 33 Geo. III. s. 67, as relates to persons who shall wilfully and maliciously set fire to, or destroy or damage otherwise than by fire, any ship, keel, or other vessel. The 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, repeals the 43 Geo. III. c. 113.

In R. v. Onesiphorus Bowyer and Charles Harper, Gloucester Spring Assizes, 1831, 4 C. & P. 559, the defendants were indicted on the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 10, post, 648, for damaging a wherry boat. It was objected, that the statute did not apply to such a boat, that it was meant to provide a remedy for a greater mischief, viz., the injuring a merchant or other ship. Patteson, J., said it was important, with a view to other cases, to ascertain whether the words "ship" or "vessel" applied to a boat of this description, and therefore he would, in the event of a conviction, save the point for the opinion of the judges. The jury, however, found the defendants not guilty. It is submitted that the objection raised was a tenable one.

Upon an indictment for firing a barge, Alderson, J., said, that, if the prisoner was convicted, he would take the opinion of the judges as to whether a barge was within the meaning of the statute: the prisoner was acquitted. (R. v. Smith, 4 C. & P. 569.)

The ownership of the vessel must be proved as described in the indictment. Where, upon an indictment against the defendant, for setting fire to a ship with intent to prejudice E. and G. his part-owners, it appeared that the defendant had declared that E. and G. were part-owners, and a bill of sale was produced, by which forty-three sixty-fourths of the vessel were transferred by the defendant, the sole owner, to E. and G.: and also an entry in the books of registry, in the following form—"Custom House, Padstow, 11th August, 1829, W. P., of &c., has sold by bill of sale, dated &c., forty-three sixty-fourth shares, to N. G., of &c., and R. E., of &c. Signed," &c.—and it was objected that the bill of sale was not valid, because, by statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 110, s. 37, the entry must contain not only the date of the bill of sale, but also the date of the production of it; the judge thought that the date, 11th August, in the commencement of the entry, might be considered as the date of the production of it, particularly as the entry followed the form given by the statute; and it was holden, that the defendant was properly convicted. (R. v. Philp, R. & M. C. C. 263.) It would seem, that acts of ownership would alone be sufficient to prove this allegation, liable, however, to be rebutted by the entry in the register. (Jervis, Arch. C. L. 6 ed. 289.)

If the ship had only run aground, and were afterwards got off in a condition so as to be easily refitted, it seems it would not be an offence within the act. (See R. v. De Londo, 2 East, P. C. 1098.)

The offence in an indictment for destroying a ship with intent, &c., must be proved to have been committed with the intent charged in the indictment. Proving that it was done wilfully is of itself sufficient evidence from which the jury may presume that it was committed with intent to prejudice either the owner or part-owner of the ship, or of the goods; but if the intent charged be to prejudice the underwriters, you must prove the policy. (See R. v. Gilson, R. & R. 138.)

II. Damaging Ships not by Fire.

Damaging ships.

By stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 10, "if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously damage, otherwise than by fire, any ship or vessel, whether complete or in an unfinished state, with intent to destroy the same, or to render the same useless, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years; and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice, publicly or privately whipped (if the court shall so think fit), in addition to such imprisonment."

3 & 4 Wil. 4, c. 55.

In Guernsey, &c.

In colonies in Asia, Africa, and America.

In territories of E. I. Company.

In other places within limits of the charter.

In Malta, Gibraltar, &c.

Limitation as to vessels registered at Malta, Gibraltar, Heligoland.

Certain powers of collectors and controllers, by whom to be exercised in certain cases.

Powers of commissioners of customs in United Kingdom given to governors, &c. abroad.

Ships exercising privileges before registry to be forfeited ;

but not to affect vessels registered under previous act.

What ships are entitled to be registered.

'The principal officers of his majesty's customs in the island of Guernsey or Jersey, together with the governor, lieutenant-governor, or commander-in-chief of those islands respectively, in respect of ships or vessels to be there registered :

'The collector and controller of his majesty's customs of any port in the British possessions in Asia, Africa, and America, or the collector of any such port at which no appointment of a controller has been made, in respect of ships or vessels to be there registered :

'The collector of duties at any port in the territories under the government of the East India company, within the limits of the charter of the said company, or any other person of the rank in the said company's service of senior merchant, or of six years standing in the said service, being respectively appointed to act in the execution of this act by any of the governments of the said company, in respect of ships or vessels to be there registered :

'The collector of duties at any British possession within the said limits, and not under the government of the said company, and at which a custom-house is not established, together with the governor, lieutenant-governor, or commander-in-chief of such possession, in respect of ships or vessels to be there registered :

'The governor, lieutenant-governor, or commander-in-chief of Malta, Gibraltar, Heligoland, and Cape of Good Hope respectively, in respect of ships or vessels to be there registered :

Provided always, that no ship or vessel to be registered at Heligoland, except such as is wholly of the built of that place, and that ships or vessels, after having been registered at Malta, Gibraltar, or Heligoland, shall not be registered elsewhere ; and that ships or vessels registered at Malta, Gibraltar, or Heligoland shall not be entitled to the privileges and advantages of British ships in any trade between the said United Kingdom and any of the British possessions in America : provided also, that wherever in and by this act it is directed or provided that any act, matter, or thing shall and may be done or performed by, to, or with any collector and controller of his majesty's customs, the same shall or may be done or performed by, to, or with the several persons respectively hereinbefore authorized and required to make registry, and to grant certificates of registry as aforesaid, and according as the same act, matter, or thing is to be done or performed at the said several and respective places, and within the jurisdiction of the said several persons respectively : provided also, that wherever in and by this act it is directed or provided that any act, matter, or thing shall or may be done or performed by, to, or with the commissioners of his majesty's customs, the same shall or may be done or performed by, to, or with the governor, lieutenant-governor, or commander-in-chief of any place where any ship or vessel may be registered under the authority of this act, so far as such act, matter, or thing can be applicable to the registering of any ship or vessel at such place."

Sect. 4. "In case any ship or vessel not being duly registered, and not having obtained such certificate of registry as aforesaid, shall exercise any of the privileges of a British ship, the same shall be subject to forfeiture, and also all the guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel to the same ship or vessel belonging, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of his majesty's customs : provided always, that nothing in this act shall extend or be construed to extend to affect the privileges of any ship or vessel which shall prior to the commencement of this act have been registered by virtue of an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for the registering of British Vessels.'"

Sect. 5. "No ship or vessel shall be registered, or having been registered shall be deemed to be duly registered, by virtue of this act, except such as are wholly of the built of the said United Kingdom, or of the Isle of Man, or of the islands of Guernsey or Jersey, or of some of the colonies, plantations, islands, or territories in Asia, Africa, or America, or of Malta, Gibraltar, or Heligoland, which belong to his majesty, his heirs or successors, at the time of the building of such ships or vessels, or such ships or vessels as shall have been condemned in any court of Admiralty as prize of war, or such ships or vessels as shall have been condemned in any competent court as forfeited for the breach of the laws made for the prevention of the slave trade, and which shall wholly belong and continue wholly to belong to his majesty's subjects duly entitled to be owners of ships or vessels registered by virtue of this act."

Sect. 6. "No Mediterranean pass shall be issued for the use of any ship, as being a ship belonging to Malta or Gibraltar, except such as be duly registered at those places respectively, or such as, not being entitled to be so registered, shall have wholly belonged, before the 10th day of October, 1827, and shall have continued wholly to belong, to persons actually residing at those places respectively, as inhabitants thereof, and entitled to be owners of British ships there registered, or who, not being so entitled, shall have so resided upwards of fifteen years prior to the said 10th day of October, 1827."

Sect. 7. "No ship or vessel shall continue to enjoy the privileges of a British ship after the same shall have been repaired in a foreign country, if such repairs shall exceed the sum of twenty shillings for every ton of the burthen of the said ship or vessel, unless such repairs shall have been necessary by reason of extraordinary damage sustained by such ship or vessel during her absence from his majesty's dominions, to enable her to perform the voyage in which she shall have been engaged, and to return to some port or place in the said dominions; and whenever any ship or vessel which has been so repaired in a foreign country shall arrive at any port in his majesty's dominions as a British-registered ship or vessel, the master or other person having the command or charge of the same shall, upon the first entry thereof, report to the collector and controller of his majesty's customs at such port that such ship or vessel has been so repaired, under penalty of twenty shillings for every ton of the burthen of such ship or vessel, according to the admeasurement thereof; and if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the commissioners of his majesty's customs that such ship or vessel was seaworthy at the time when she last departed from any port or place in his majesty's dominions, and that no greater quantity of such repairs have been done to the said vessel than was necessary as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, upon a full consideration of all the circumstances, to direct the collector and controller of the port where such ship or vessel shall have arrived, or where she shall then be, to certify on the certificate of the registry of such ship or vessel that it has been proved to the satisfaction of the commissioners of his majesty's customs that the privileges of the said ship or vessel have not been forfeited, notwithstanding the repairs which have been done to the same in a foreign country."

Sect. 8. "If any ship or vessel registered under the authority of this or any other act shall be deemed or declared to be stranded or unseaworthy, and incapable of being recovered, or repaired to the advantage of the owners thereof, and shall for such reasons be sold by order or decree of any competent court for the benefit of the owners of such ship or vessel or other persons interested therein, the same shall be taken and deemed to be a ship or vessel lost or broken up to all intents and purposes within the meaning of this act, and shall never again be entitled to the privileges of a British-built ship for any purposes of trade or navigation."

Sect. 9. "No British ship or vessel which has been or shall hereafter be captured by and become prize to an enemy or sold to foreigners shall again be entitled to the privileges of a British ship: provided always, that nothing contained in this act shall extend to prevent the registering of any ship or vessel whatever which shall afterwards be condemned in any court of Admiralty as prize of war, or in any competent court, for breach of laws made for the prevention of the slave trade."

Sect. 10. "No such registry shall hereafter be made, or certificate thereof granted, by any person or persons hereinbefore authorized to make such registry and grant such certificate, in any other port or place than the port or place to which such ship or vessel shall properly belong, except so far as Foreign repairs not to exceed 20s. per ton.

The master on arrival to report such repairs.

Necessity of such repairs to be proved to commissioners of customs.

Ships declared unseaworthy, to be deemed ships lost or broken up.

British ships captured not to be again entitled to registry; but ships condemned in courts of admiralty may be registered.

Ships shall be registered at the port to which they belong.

6. The Registry Act, &c.

3 & 4 Wil. 4, c. 55.

Commissioners of customs may permit registry at other ports.

Book of registers to be kept, and accounts to be transmitted to commissioners.

Port to which vessels shall be deemed to belong.

Change of subscribing owners to require registry de novo.

If registry de novo cannot be made, ship may go one voyage with permission indorsed on certificate of registry.

Ships built in foreign possessions, for owners resident in United Kingdom, may have a certificate from the collector, &c. to trade for two years or until arrival in United Kingdom.

Persons residing in foreign countries may not be owners, unless relates to such ships or vessels as shall be condemned as prizes in any of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, or Man, which ships or vessels shall be registered in manner hereinafter directed; but that all and every registry and certificate made and granted in any port or place to which any such ship or vessel does not properly belong shall be utterly null and void to all intents and purposes, unless the officers aforesaid shall be specially authorized and empowered to make such registry and grant such certificate in any other port by an order in writing under the hands of the commissioners of his majesty's customs, which order the said commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered to issue if they shall see fit; and at every port where registry shall be made in pursuance of this act a book shall be kept by the collector and controller, in which all the particulars contained in the form of the certificate of the registry hereinbefore directed to be used shall be duly entered; and every registry shall be numbered in progression, beginning such progressive numeration at the commencement of each and every year; and such collector and controller shall forthwith, or within one month at the furthest, transmit to the commissioners of his majesty's customs a true and exact copy, together with the number, of every certificate which shall be by them so granted."

Sect. 11. "Every ship or vessel shall be deemed to belong to some port at or near to which some or one of the owners, who shall make and subscribe the declaration required by this act before registry be made, shall reside; and whenever such owner or owners shall have transferred all his or their share or shares in such ship or vessel, the same shall be registered de novo before such ship or vessel shall sail or depart from the port to which she shall then belong, or from any other port which shall be in the same part of the United Kingdom, or the same colony, plantation, island, or territory as the said port shall be in: provided always, that if the owner or owners of such ship or vessel cannot in sufficient time comply with the requisites of this act, so that registry may be made before it shall be necessary for such ship or vessel to sail or depart upon another voyage, it shall be lawful for the collector and controller of the port where such ship or vessel may then be to certify upon the back of the existing certificate of registry of such ship or vessel, that the same is to remain in force for the voyage upon which the said ship or vessel is then about to sail or depart: provided also, that if any ship or vessel shall be built in any of the colonies, plantations, islands, or territories in Asia, Africa, or America, to his majesty belonging, for owners residing in the United Kingdom, and the master of such ship or vessel, or the agent for the owner or owners thereof, shall have produced to the collector and controller of the port at or near to which such ship or vessel was built, the certificate of the builder required by this act, and shall have made and subscribed a declaration before such collector and controller of the names and descriptions of the principal owners of such ship or vessel, and that she is the identical ship or vessel mentioned in such certificate of the builder, and that no foreigner, to the best of his knowledge and belief, has any interest therein; the collector and controller of such port shall cause such ship or vessel to be surveyed and measured in like manner as is directed for the purpose of registering any ship or vessel, and shall give the master of such ship or vessel a certificate under their hands and seals, purporting to be under the authority of this act, and stating when and where and by whom such ship or vessel was built, the description, tonnage, and other particulars required on registry of any ship or vessel, and such certificate shall have all the force and virtue of a certificate of registry under this act, during the term of two years, unless such ship shall sooner arrive at some place in the United Kingdom; and such collector and controller shall transmit a copy of such certificate to the commissioners of his majesty's customs."

Sect. 12. "No person who has taken the oath of allegiance to any foreign state, except under the terms of some capitulation, unless he shall afterwards become a denizen or naturalized subject of the United Kingdom, by his majesty's letters patent or by act of parliament, nor any person usually residing in any country not under the dominion of his majesty, his heirs and successors, unless he be a member of some British factory, or agent for or partner in any house or copartnership actually carrying on trade in Great Britain or Ireland, shall be entitled to be the owner, in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, of any ship or vessel required and authorized to be registered by virtue of this act; save and except that it shall be lawful for any person who was a member of the company of merchants trading to the Levant seas at the time of its dissolution, and who was a resident at any of the factories of the said company, to continue to hold any share or shares in any British-registered ship of which at the time of such residence he was an owner or part owner, although such person shall continue to reside at any of the places where such factories had existed prior to the dissolution of the said company."

Sect. 13. "No registry shall henceforth be made or certificate granted until the following declaration be made and subscribed, before the person or persons hereinbefore authorized to make such registry and grant such certificate respectively, by the owner of such ship or vessel if such ship or vessel is owned by or belongs to one person only, or in case there shall be two joint owners, then by both of such joint owners if both shall be resident within twenty miles of the port or place where such registry is required, or by one of such owners if one or both of them shall be resident at a greater distance from such port or place; or if the number of such owners or proprietors shall exceed two, then by the greater part of the number of such owners or proprietors if the greater number of them shall be resident within twenty miles of such port or place as aforesaid, not in any case exceeding three of such owners or proprietors, unless a greater number shall be desirous to join in making and subscribing the said declaration, or by one of such owners if all, or all except one, shall be resident at a greater distance:

'I, A. B., of [place of residence and occupation] do truly declare, that the ship or vessel [name] of [port or place], whereof [master's name] is at present master, being [kind of built, burthen, &c., as described in the certificate of the surveying officer], was [when and where built, or, if prize or forfeited, capture and condemnation as such], and that I the said A. B. [and the other owner's names and occupations, if any, and where they respectively reside, videlicet, town, place, or parish, and county, or if member of and resident in any factory in foreign parts, or in any foreign town or city, being an agent for or partner in any house or copartnership actually carrying on trade in Great Britain or Ireland, the name of such factory, foreign town, or city, and the names of such house or copartnership] am [or are] sole owner [or owners] of the said vessel, and that no other person or persons whatever hath or have any right, title, interest, share, or property therein or thereto; and that I, the said A. B. [and the said other owners, if any] am [or are] truly and bona fide a subject [or subjects] of Great Britain; and that I the said A. B. have not [nor have any of the other owners, to the best of my knowledge and belief] taken the oath of allegiance to any foreign state whatever [except under the terms of some capitulation, describing the particulars thereof], or that since my taking [or his or their taking] the oath of allegiance to [naming the foreign states respectively to which he or any of the said owners shall have taken the same] I have [or he or they hath or have] become a denizen [or denizens, or naturalized subject or subjects, as the case may be] of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland by his majesty's letters patent or by an act of parliament [naming the times when such letters of denization have been granted respectively, or the year or years in which such act or acts for naturalization have passed respectively]; and that no foreigner, directly or indirectly, hath any share or part interest in the said ship or vessel.'

Provided always, that if it shall become necessary to register any ship or vessel belonging to any corporate body in the United Kingdom, the following declaration, in lieu of the declaration hereinbefore directed, shall be taken and subscribed by the secretary or other proper officer of such corporate body; (that is to say,)

6. The Registry Act, &c.

3 & 4 Wil. 4, c. 55.

members of British factories, or agents for or partners in British houses, or member of merchants trading to Levant seas.

Declaration to be made by subscribing owners previous to registry.

Proportion of owners who shall subscribe and take the declaration.

Form of declaration.

6. The Registry Act, &c.

3 & 4 Wil. 4, c. 55.

Addition to declaration in case the required number of owners do not attend.

Vessels to be surveyed previous to registry.

Certificate of survey to be given;

Owner or master concurring therein.

Mode of admeasurement to ascertain tonnage.

Mode of ascertaining tonnage when vessels are afloat.

‘I, A. B., secretary or officer of [name of company or corporation] do truly declare, that the ship or vessel [name] of [port], whereof [master's name] is at present master, being [kind of built, burthen, &c., as described in the certificate of the surveying officer], was [when and where built, or, if prize or forfeited, capture and condemnation as such], and that the same doth wholly and truly belong to [name of company or corporation].’”

Sect. 14. “In case the required number of joint owners or proprietors of any ship or vessel shall not personally attend to make and subscribe the declaration hereinbefore directed to be made and subscribed, then and in such case such owner or owners, proprietor or proprietors, as shall personally attend and make and subscribe the declaration aforesaid, shall further declare that the part owner or part owners of such ship or vessel then absent is or are not resident within twenty miles of such port or place, and hath or have not, to the best of his or their knowledge or belief, wilfully absented himself or themselves in order to avoid the making the declaration hereinbefore directed to be made and subscribed, or is or are prevented by illness from attending to make and subscribe the said declaration.”

Sect. 15. “And in order to enable the collector and controller of his majesty's customs to grant a certificate truly and accurately describing every ship or vessel to be registered in pursuance of this act, and also to enable all other officers of his majesty's customs, on due examination, to discover whether any such ship or vessel is the same with that for which a certificate is alleged to have been granted; be it enacted, that previous to the registering or granting of any certificate of registry as aforesaid some one or more person or persons appointed by the commissioners of his majesty's customs (taking to his or their assistance, if he or they shall judge it necessary, one or more person or persons skilled in the building and admeasurement of ships,) shall go on board of every such ship or vessel as is to be registered, and shall strictly and accurately examine and admeasure every such ship or vessel as to all and every particular contained in the form of the certificate hereinbefore directed, in the presence of the master, or of any other person who shall be appointed for that purpose on the part of the owner or owners, or in his or their absence by the said master; and shall deliver a true and just account in writing of all such particulars of the built, description, and admeasurement of every such ship or vessel as are specified in the form of the certificate above recited to the collector and controller authorized as aforesaid to make such registry and grant such certificate of registry; and the said master or other person attending on the part of the owner or owners is hereby required to sign his name also to the certificate of such surveying or examining officer, in testimony of the truth thereof, provided such master or other person shall consent and agree to the several particulars set forth and described therein.”

Sect. 16. “For the purpose of ascertaining the tonnage of ships or vessels the rule for admeasurement shall be as follows; (that is to say,) the length shall be taken on a straight line along the rabbet of the keel, from the back of the main stern-post to a perpendicular line from the fore part of the main stem under the bowsprit, from which subtracting three fifths of the breadth, the remainder shall be esteemed the just length of the keel to find the tonnage; and the breadth shall be taken from the outside of the outside plank in the broadest part of the ship, whether that shall be above or below the main wales, exclusive of all manner of doubling planks that may be wrought upon the sides of the ship; then multiplying the length of the keel by the breadth so taken, and that product by half the breadth, and dividing the whole by ninety-four, the quotient shall be deemed the true contents of the tonnage.”

Sect. 17. “And whereas it would in some cases endanger ships or vessels to cause them to be laid on shore; be it therefore enacted, that in cases where it may be necessary to ascertain the tonnage of any ship or vessel when afloat, according to the foregoing rule, the following method shall be observed; (that is to say,) drop a plumb line over the stern of the ship, and measure the distance between such line and the after part of the stern-post at the load watermark, then measure from the top of the plumb line, in a parallel direction with the water, to a perpendicular point immediately over the load watermark at the forepart of the main stem, subtracting from such measurement the above distance, the remainder will be the ship's extreme, from which is to be deducted three inches for every foot of the load draught of water for the rake abaft, also three fifths of the ship's breadth for the rake forward, the remainder shall be esteemed the just length of the keel to find the tonnage; and the breadth shall be taken from outside to outside of the plank in the broadest part of the ship, whether that shall be above or below the main wales, exclusive of all manner of sheathing or doubling that may be wrought on the side of the ship; then multiplying the length of the keel for tonnage by the breadth so taken, and that product by half the breadth, and dividing by ninety-four, the quotient shall be deemed the true contents of the tonnage."

Sect. 18. Provided "that in each of the several rules hereinbefore prescribed, when used for the purpose of ascertaining the tonnage of any ship or vessel propelled by steam, the length of the engine room shall be deducted from the whole length of such ship or vessel, and the remainder shall, for such purpose, be deemed the whole length of the same."

Sect. 19. "Whenever the tonnage of any ship or vessel shall have been ascertained according to the rule herein prescribed (except in the case of ships or vessels which have been admeasured afloat), such account of tonnage shall ever after be deemed the tonnage of such ship or vessel, and shall be repeated in every subsequent registry of such ship or vessel, unless it shall happen that any alteration has been made in the form and burthen of such ship or vessel, or it shall be discovered that the tonnage of such ship or vessel had been erroneously taken and computed."

Sect. 20. "At the time of the obtaining of the certificate of registry as aforesaid, sufficient security by bond shall be given to his majesty, his heirs and successors, by the master and such of the owners as shall personally attend, as is hereinbefore required, such security to be approved of and taken by the person or persons hereinbefore authorized to make such registry and grant such certificate of registry at the port or place in which such certificate shall be granted, in the penalties following; (that is to say,) if such ship or vessel shall be a decked vessel, or be above the burthen of fifteen tons and not exceeding fifty tons, then in the penalty of one hundred pounds; if exceeding the burthen of fifty tons and not exceeding one hundred tons, then in the penalty of three hundred pounds; if exceeding the burthen of one hundred tons and not exceeding two hundred tons, then in the penalty of five hundred pounds; if exceeding the burthen of two hundred tons and not exceeding three hundred tons, then in the penalty of eight hundred pounds; and if exceeding the burthen of three hundred tons, then in the penalty of one thousand pounds; and the condition of every such bond shall be, that such certificate shall not be sold, lent, or otherwise disposed of to any person or persons whatever, and that the same shall be solely made use of for the service of the ship or vessel for which it is granted; and that in case such ship or vessel shall be lost or taken by the enemy, burnt or broken up, or otherwise prevented from returning to the port to which she belongs, or shall on any account have lost and forfeited the privileges of a British ship, or shall have been seized and legally condemned for illicit trading, or shall have been taken in execution for debt and sold by due process of law, or shall have been sold to the crown, or shall under any circumstances have been registered de novo, the certificate, if preserved, shall be delivered up, within one month after the arrival of the master in any port or place in his majesty's dominions, to the collector and controller of some port in Great Britain or of the Isle of Man, or of the British plantations, or to the governor, lieutenant governor, or commander in chief for the time being of the islands of Guernsey or Jersey; and that if any foreigner, or any person or persons for the use and benefit of any foreigner, shall purchase or otherwise become entitled to the whole or to any part or share of or any interest in such ship or vessel, and the same shall be within the limits of any port of Great Britain, or of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, or Man, or of the British colonies, plantations, islands, or territories aforesaid, then and in such case the certificate of registry shall, within seven days after such purchase or transfer of property in such ship or vessel, be delivered up to the person or persons hereinbefore authorized to make registry and grant certificate of registry at such port or place respectively as aforesaid; and if such ship or vessel shall be in any foreign port when such purchase or transfer of property shall take place, then that the certificate shall be delivered up to the British consul or other chief British officer resident at or nearest to such foreign port; or if such ship or vessel shall be at sea when such purchase or transfer of property shall take place, then that the certificate shall be delivered up to the British consul or other chief British officer at the foreign port or place in or at which the master or other person having or taking the charge or command of such ship or vessel shall first arrive after such purchase or transfer of property at sea, immediately after his arrival at such foreign port; but if such master or other person who had the command thereof at the time of such purchase or transfer of property at sea shall not arrive at a foreign port, but shall arrive at some port of Great Britain, or of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, or Man, or of his majesty's said colonies, plantations, islands, or territories, then that the certificate shall be delivered up, in manner aforesaid, within fourteen days after the arrival of such ship or vessel, or of the person who had the command thereof, in any port of Great Britain, or of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, or Man, or of any of his majesty's said colonies, plantations, islands, or territories: provided always, that if it shall happen that at the time of registry of any ship or vessel the same shall be at any other port than the port to which she belongs, so that the master of such ship or vessel cannot attend at the port of registry to join with the owner or owners in such bond as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for him to give a separate bond to the like effect, at the port where such ship or vessel may then be, and the collector and controller of such other port shall transmit such bond to the collector and controller of the port where such ship or vessel is to be registered, and such bond, and the bond also given by the owner or owners, shall together be of the same effect against the master and owner or owners, or either of them, as if they had bound themselves jointly and severally in one bond."

Sect. 21. "When and so often as the master or other person having or taking the charge or command of any ship or vessel registered in manner hereinbefore directed shall be changed, the master or owner of such ship or vessel shall deliver to the person or persons hereinbefore authorized to make such registry and grant such certificates of registry at the port where such change shall take place the certificate of registry belonging to such ship or vessel, who shall thereupon indorse and subscribe a memorandum of such change, and shall forthwith give notice of the same to the proper officer of the port or place where such ship or vessel was last registered pursuant to this act, who shall likewise make a memorandum of the same in the book of registers which is hereby directed and required to be kept, and shall forthwith give notice thereof to the commissioners of his majesty's customs: provided always, that before the name of such new master shall be indorsed on the certificate of registry he shall be required to give and shall give a bond in the like penalties and under the same conditions as are contained in the bond hereinbefore required to be given at the time of registry of any ship or vessel."

Sect. 22. "All bonds required by this act shall be liable to the same duties of stamps as bonds given for or in respect of the duties of customs are or shall be liable to under any act for the time being in force for granting duties of stamps."

Sect. 23. "If any person whatever shall at any time have possession of and wilfully detain any certificate of registry granted under this or any other act, which ought to be delivered up to be cancelled according to any of the conditions of the bond hereinbefore required to be given upon the registry of any ship or vessel, such person is hereby required and enjoined to deliver up such certificate of registry in manner directed by the conditions of such bond in the respective cases and under the respective penalties therein provided."

persons as directed by the bond.

Name of vessel which has been registered never afterwards to be changed, and to be painted on the stern.

Sect. 24. "It shall not be lawful for any owner or owners of any ship or vessel to give any name to such ship or vessel other than that by which she was first registered in pursuance of this or any other act; and that the owner or owners of all and every ship or vessel which shall be so registered shall, before such ship or vessel, after such registry, shall begin to take in any cargo, paint or cause to be painted, in white or yellow letters, of a length of not less than four inches, upon a black ground, on some conspicuous part of the stern, the name by which such ship or vessel shall have been registered pursuant to this act, and the port to which she belongs, in a distinct and legible manner, and shall so keep and preserve the same; and that if such owner or owners or master or other person having or taking the charge or command of such ship or vessel shall permit such ship or vessel to begin to take in any cargo before the name of such ship or vessel has been so painted as aforesaid, or shall wilfully alter, erase, obliterate, or in anywise hide or conceal, or cause or procure or permit the same to be done (unless in the case of square-rigged vessels in times of war), or shall in any written or printed paper, or other document, describe such ship or vessel by any name other than that by which she was first registered pursuant to this act, or shall verbally describe, or cause or procure or permit such ship or vessel to be described, by any other name to any officer or officers of his majesty's revenue in the due execution of his or their duty, then and in every such case such owner or owners or master or other person having or taking the charge or command of such ship or vessel shall forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds."

Sect. 25. "All and every person and persons who shall apply for a certificate of the registry of any ship or vessel shall and they are hereby required to produce to the person or persons authorized to grant such certificate a true and full account, under the hand of the builder of such ship or vessel, of the proper denomination, and of the time when and the place where such ship or vessel was built, and also an exact account of the tonnage of such ship or vessel, together with the name of the first purchaser or purchasers thereof (which account such builder is hereby directed and required to give under his hand on the same being demanded by such person or persons so applying for a certificate as aforesaid), and shall also make and subscribe a declaration before the person or persons hereinbefore authorized to grant such certificate that the ship or vessel for which such certificate is required is the same with that which is so described by the builder as aforesaid."

Builder's certificate of particulars of ship.

Sect. 26. "If the certificate of registry of any ship or vessel shall be lost or mislaid, so that the same cannot be found or obtained for the use of such ship or vessel when needful, and proof thereof shall be made to the satisfaction of the commissioners of his majesty's customs, such commissioners shall and may permit such ship or vessel to be registered de novo, and a certificate thereof to be granted: provided always, that if such ship or vessel be absent and far distant from the port to which she belongs, or by reason of the absence of the owner or owners, or of any other impediment, registry of the same cannot then be made in sufficient time, such commissioners shall and may grant a licence for the present use of such ship or vessel, which licence shall, for the time and to the extent specified therein, and no longer, be of the same force and virtue as a certificate of registry granted under this act: provided always, that before such registry de novo be made, the owner or owners and master shall give bond to the commissioners aforesaid in such sum as to them shall seem fit, with a condition that if the certificate of registry shall at any time afterwards be found, the same shall be forthwith delivered to the proper officers of his majesty's customs to be cancelled, and that no illegal use has been or shall be made thereof with his or their privity or knowledge; and further, that before any such licence shall be granted as aforesaid the master of such ship or vessel shall also make and subscribe a declaration that the same has been registered as a British ship, naming the port where and the time when such registry was made, and all the particulars contained in the certificate thereof, to the best of his knowledge and belief, and shall also give such bond and with the same condition as is before mentioned : provided also, that before any such licence shall be granted such ship or vessel shall be surveyed in like manner as if a registry de novo were about to be made thereof ; and the certificate of such survey shall be preserved by the collector and controller of the port to which such ship or vessel shall belong ; and in virtue thereof it shall be lawful for the said commissioners and they are hereby required to permit such ship or vessel to be registered after her departure, whenever the owner or owners shall personally attend to take and subscribe the declaration required by this act before registry be made, and shall also comply with all other requisites of this act, except so far as relates to the bond to be given by the master of such ship or vessel ; which certificate of registry the said commissioners shall and may transmit to the collector and controller of any other port, to be by them given to the master of such ship or vessel, upon his giving such bond, and delivering up the licence which had been granted for the then present use of such ship or vessel."

Sect. 27. " And whereas it is not proper that any person under any pretence whatever should detain the certificate of registry of any ship or vessel, or hold the same for any purpose other than the lawful use and navigation of the ship or vessel for which it was granted ; be it therefore enacted, that in case any person who shall have received or obtained by any means or for any purpose whatever the certificate of the registry of any ship or vessel (whether such person shall claim to be the master or to be the owner or one of the owners of such ship or vessel, or not,) shall wilfully detain and refuse to deliver up the same to the proper officers of his majesty's customs, for the purposes of such ship or vessel, as occasion shall require, or to the person or persons having the actual command, possession, and management of such ship or vessel as the ostensible and reputed master or as the ostensible and reputed owner or owners thereof, it may and shall be lawful to and for any such last-mentioned person to make complaint on oath of such detainer and refusal to any justice of the peace residing near to the place where such detainer and refusal shall be in Great Britain or Ireland, or to any member of the supreme court of justice or any justice of the peace in the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, or Man, or in any colony, plantation, island, or territory to his majesty belonging in Asia, Africa, or America, or in Malta, Gibraltar, or Heligoland, where such detainer and refusal shall be in any of the places last mentioned ; and on such complaint the said justice or other magistrate shall and is hereby required, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause the person so complained against to be brought before him to be examined touching such detainer and refusal ; and if it shall appear to the said justice or other magistrate, on examination of such person or otherwise, that the said certificate of registry is not lost or mislaid, but is wilfully detained by the said person, such person shall be thereof convicted, and shall forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds, and on failure of payment thereof he shall be committed to the common gaol, there to remain without bail or mainprize for such time as the said justice or other magistrate shall in his discretion deem proper, not being less than three months nor more than twelve months ; and the said justice or other magistrate shall and he is hereby required to certify the aforesaid detainer, refusal, and conviction to the person or persons who granted such certificate of registry for such ship or vessel, who shall, on the terms and conditions of law being complied with, make registry of such ship or vessel de novo, and grant a certificate thereof conformably to law, notifying on the back of such certificate the ground upon which the ship or vessel was so registered de novo ; and if the person who shall have detained and refused to deliver up such certificate of registry as aforesaid, or shall be verily believed to have detained the same, shall have absconded, so that the said warrant of the justice or other magistrate cannot be executed upon him, and proof thereof shall be made to the satisfaction of the commissioners of his majesty's customs, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to permit such ship or vessel to be registered de novo, or otherwise, in their discretion, to grant a licence for the present use of such ship or vessel in like manner as is hereinbefore provided in the case wherein the certificate of registry is lost or mislaid." 6. The Registry Act, &c.

3 & 4 Wil. 4, c. 55.

In Bowen v. Fox, 10 B. & C. 41, 5 Man. & R. 5, 4 C. & P. 452, it was made a question, but not decided, whether a person holding the certificate of a ship's register, which had been deposited as a security for advances for the use of the ship, and refusing to deliver it up when demanded, is guilty of a wilful detention within the meaning of the now repealed act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 41, s. 25. Decisions.

In Rex v. Pixley, 13 East, 91, the conviction upon an enactment similar to that of 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 55, s. 27, charged the defendant with unlawfully detaining and unlawfully refusing to deliver up a certificate of registry to the proper officer, on being required to deliver the same by the owner of the ship, and such conviction was held not to be supported by proof that the defendant withheld the certificate from a person sent by the owner with a letter requiring the defendant generally to deliver it in order that an indorsement might be made upon it at the custom-house.

A conviction under the above enactment of 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 55, s. 27, stated that the defendant refused to deliver up a certificate of registry to his majesty's officers of customs: held that this was bad, as not bringing the offence within the words of the section "shall refuse to deliver up to the proper officers of his majesty's customs."

The conviction did not state for what purpose the certificate was required: held per Lord Denman, C. J., and Williams, J., that this omission also made the conviction bad, as not satisfying the words of the same section "to deliver up for the purpose of such ship or vessel, as occasion shall require." Held, also, that these were defects in substance, and not cured by the general act 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 3. (R. v. Walsh, 1 Adol. & Ell. 481; 3 Nev. & M. 632, S. C.)

Sect. 28, "If any ship or vessel, after she shall have been registered pursuant to the directions of this act, shall in any manner whatever be altered so as not to correspond with all the particulars contained in the certificate of her registry, in such case such ship or vessel shall be registered de novo, in manner hereinbefore required, as soon as she returns to the port to which she belongs, or to any other port which shall be in the same part of the United Kingdom, or in the same colony, plantation, island, or territory, as the said port shall be in, on failure whereof such ship or vessel shall to all intents and purposes be considered and deemed and taken to be a ship or vessel not duly registered." Ship altered in certain manner to be registered de novo.

Sect. 29. "The owner or owners of all such ships and vessels as shall be taken by any of his majesty's ships or vessels of war, or by any private or other ship or vessel, and condemned as lawful prize in any court of admiralty, or of such ships or vessels as shall be condemned in any competent court as forfeited for breach of the laws for the prevention of the slave trade, shall, for the purpose of registering any such ship or vessel, produce to the collector and controller of his majesty's customs a certificate of the condemnation of such ship or vessel, under the hand and seal of the judge of the court in which such ship or vessel shall have been condemned (which certificate such judge is hereby authorized and required to grant), and also a true and exact account in writing of all the particulars contained in the certificate hereinbefore set forth, to be made and subscribed by one or more skilful person or persons to be appointed by the court then and there to survey such ship or vessel, and shall also make and subscribe a declaration before the collector and controller that such ship or vessel is the same vessel which is mentioned in the certificate of the judge aforesaid." Vessels condemned as prize, or for breach of laws against slave trade, certificate of condemnation to be produced.

Sect. 30. "Provided that no ship or vessel which shall be taken and condemned as prize or forfeiture as aforesaid shall be registered in the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, or Man, although belonging to his majesty's subjects residing in those islands, or in some one or other of them; but the same Prize vessels not to be registered at Guernsey, Jersey, or Man; but at certain ports.

shall be registered either at Southampton, Weymouth, Exeter, Plymouth, Falmouth, Liverpool, or Whitehaven, by the collector and controller at such ports respectively, who are hereby authorized and required to register such ship or vessel, and to grant a certificate thereof in the form and under the regulations and restrictions in this act contained."

Sect. 31. "When and so often as the property in any ship or vessel, or any part thereof, belonging to any of his majesty's subjects, shall, after registry thereof, be sold to any other or others of his majesty's subjects, the same shall be transferred by bill of sale or other instrument in writing, containing a recital of the certificate of registry of such ship or vessel, or the principal contents thereof, otherwise such transfer shall not be valid or effectual for any purpose whatever, either in law or in equity: provided always, that no bill of sale shall be deemed void by reason of any error in such recital, or by the recital of any former certificate of registry instead of the existing certificate, provided the identity of the ship or vessel intended in the recital be effectually proved thereby."

Sect. 32. "The property in every ship or vessel of which there are more than one owner shall be taken and considered to be divided into sixty-four equal parts or shares, and the proportion held by each owner shall be described in the registry as being a certain number of sixty-fourth parts or shares, and that no person shall be entitled to be registered as an owner of any ship or vessel in respect of any proportion of such ship or vessel which shall not be an integral sixty-fourth part or share of the same; and upon the first registry of any ship or vessel the owner or owners who shall take and subscribe the declaration required by this act before registry be made shall also declare the number of such parts or shares then held by each owner, and the same shall be so registered accordingly: provided always, that if it shall at any time happen that the property of any owner or owners in any ship or vessel cannot be reduced by division into any number of integral sixty-fourth parts or shares, it shall and may be lawful for the owner or owners of such fractional parts as shall be over and above such number of integral sixty-fourth parts or shares into which such property in any ship or vessel can be reduced by division to transfer the same one to another, or jointly to any new owner, by memorandum upon their respective bills of sale, or by fresh bill of sale, without such transfer being liable to any stamp duty: provided also, that the right of any owner or owners to any such fractional parts shall not be affected by reason of the same not having been registered: provided also that it shall be lawful for any number of such owners, named and described in such registry, being partners in any house or copartnership actually carrying on trade in any part of his majesty's dominions, to hold any ship or vessel, or any share or shares of any ship or vessel, in the name of such house or copartnership, as joint owners thereof, without distinguishing the proportionate interest of each of such owners, and that such ship or vessel or the share or shares thereof so held in copartnership shall be deemed and taken to be partnership property to all intents and purposes, and shall be governed by the same rules both in law and equity, as relate to and govern all other partnership property in any other goods, chattels and effects whatsoever.

Sect. 33. "No greater number than thirty-two persons shall be entitled to be legal owners at one and the same time of any ship or vessel, as tenants in common, or to be registered as such: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall affect the equitable title of minors, heirs, legatees, creditors, or others, exceeding that number, duly represented by or holding from any of the persons within the said number, registered as legal owners of any share or shares of such ship or vessel: provided also, that if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the commissioners of his majesty's customs that any number of persons have associated themselves as a joint-stock company, for the purpose of owning any ship or vessel, or any number of ships or vessels, as the joint property of such company, and that such company have duly elected or appointed any number, not less than three, of the members of the same to be trustees of the property in such ship or vessel or ships or vessels so owned by such company, it shall be lawful for such trustees or any three of them, with the permission of such commissioners, to make and subscribe the declaration required by this act before registry be made, except that instead of stating therein the names and descriptions of the other owners, they shall state the name and description of the company to which such ship or vessel or ships or vessels shall in such manner belong."

Sect. 34. "No bill of sale or other instrument in writing shall be valid and effectual to pass the property in any ship or vessel, or in any share thereof, or for any other purpose, until such bill of sale or other instrument in writing shall have been produced to the collector and controller of the port at which such ship or vessel is already registered, or to the collector and controller of any other port at which she is about to be registered de novo, as the case may be, nor until such collector and controller respectively shall have entered in the book of such last registry, in the one case, or in the book of such registry de novo, after all the requisites of law for such registry de novo shall have been duly complied with, in the other case, (and which they are respectively hereby required to do upon the production of the bill of sale or other instrument for that purpose,) the name, residence, and description of the vendor or mortgagor, or of each vendor or mortgagor, if more than one, the number of shares transferred, the name, residence, and description of the purchaser or mortgagee, or of each purchaser or mortgagee, if more than one, and the date of the bill of sale or other instrument, and of the production of it; and further, if such ship or vessel is not about to be registered de novo, the collector and controller of the port where such ship is registered shall and they are hereby required to indorse the aforesaid particulars of such bill of sale or other instrument on the certificate of registry of the said ship or vessel, when the same shall be produced to them for that purpose, in manner and to the effect following; videlicet, Bills of sale not effectual until produced to officers of customs, and entered in the book of registry or of intended registry.

'Custom House [Port and Date; Name, Residence, and Description of Vendor or Mortgagor] has transferred by [Bill of Sale or other Instrument] dated [Date, Number of Shares] to [Name, Residence, and Description of Purchaser or Mortgagee.]

Form of indorsement.

'A. B., Collector.

'C. D., Controller.'

And forthwith to give notice thereof to the commissioners of customs; and in case the collector and controller shall be desired so to do, and the bill of sale or other instrument shall be produced to them for that purpose, then the said collector and controller are hereby required to certify, by indorsement upon the bill of sale or other instrument, that the particulars before mentioned have been so entered in the book of registry, and indorsed upon the certificate of registry as aforesaid."

Notice to commissioners.

Sect. 35. "When and so soon as the particulars of any bill of sale or other instrument by which any ship or vessel, or any share or shares thereof, shall be transferred, shall have been so entered in the book of registry as aforesaid, the said bill of sale or other instrument shall be valid and effectual to pass the property thereby intended to be transferred as against all and every person and persons whatsoever, and to all intents and purposes, except as against such subsequent purchasers and mortgagees who shall first procure the indorsement to be made upon the certificate of registry of such ship or vessel in manner hereinafter mentioned."

Entry of bill of sale to be valid, except in certain cases.

Sect. 36. "When and after the particulars of any bill of sale or other instrument by which any ship or vessel, or any share or shares thereof, shall be transferred, shall have been so entered in the book of registry as aforesaid, the collector and controller shall not enter in the book of registry the particulars of any other bill of sale or instrument purporting to be a transfer by the same vendor or mortgagor or vendors or mortgagors of the same ship or vessel, share or shares thereof, to any other person or persons, unless thirty days shall elapse from the day on which the particulars of the former bill of sale or other instrument were entered in the book of registry; or in case the ship or vessel was absent from the port to which she belonged at the time when the particulars of such former bill of sale or other instrument were entered in the book of registry, then unless thirty days shall have elapsed from the day on which such ship or vessel arrived at the port to which the same belonged; and in case the particulars of two or more such bills of sale or other instruments as aforesaid shall at any time have been entered in the book of registry of the said ship or vessel, the collector and controller shall not enter in the book of registry the particulars of any other bill of sale or other instrument as aforesaid, unless thirty days shall in like manner have elapsed from the day on which the particulars of the last of such bill of sale or other instrument were entered in the books of registry, or from the day on which the ship or vessel arrived at the port to which she belonged, in case of her absence as aforesaid; and in every case where there shall at any time happen to be two or more transfers by the same owner or owners of the same property in any ship or vessel entered in the book of registry as aforesaid, the collector and controller are hereby required to indorse upon the certificate of registry of such ship or vessel the particulars of that bill of sale or other instrument under which the person or persons claims or claim property who shall produce the certificate of registry for that purpose within thirty days next after the entry of his said bill of sale or other instrument in the book of registry as aforesaid, or within thirty days next after the return of the said ship or vessel to the port to which she belongs, in case of her absence at the time of such entry as aforesaid; and in case no person or persons shall produce the certificate of registry within either of the said spaces of thirty days, then it shall be lawful for the collector and controller, and they are hereby required, to indorse upon the certificate of registry the particulars of the bill of sale or other instrument to such person or persons as shall first produce the certificate of registry for that purpose, it being the true intent and meaning of this act that the several purchasers and mortgagees of such ship or vessel, share or shares thereof, when more than one appear to claim the same property, or to claim security on the same property, in the same rank and degree, shall have priority one over the other, not according to the respective times when the particulars of the bill of sale or other instrument by which such property was transferred to them were entered in the book of registry as aforesaid, but according to the time when the indorsement is made upon the certificate of registry as aforesaid: provided always, that if the certificate of registry shall be lost or mislaid, or shall be detained by any person whatever, so that the indorsement cannot in due time be made thereon, and proof thereof shall be made by the purchaser or mortgagee, or his known agent, to the satisfaction of the commissioners of his majesty's customs, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to grant such further time as to them shall appear necessary for the recovery of the certificate of registry, or for the registry de novo, of the said ship or vessel under the provisions of this act, and thereupon the collector and controller shall make a memorandum in the book of registers of the further time so granted, and during such time no other bill of sale shall be entered for the transfer of the same ship or vessel, or the same share or shares thereof, or for giving the same security thereon."

Sect. 37. "If the certificate of registry of such ship or vessel shall be produced to the collector and controller of any port where she may then be, after any such bill of sale shall have been recorded at the port to which she belongs, together with such bill of sale, containing a notification of such record, signed by the collector and controller of such port as before directed, it shall be lawful for the collector and controller of such other port to indorse on such certificate of registry (being required so to do) the transfer mentioned in such bill of sale, and such collector and controller shall give notice thereof to the collector and controller of the port to which such ship or vessel belongs, who shall record the same in like manner as if they had made such indorsement themselves, but inserting the name of the port at which such indorsement was made: provided always, that the collector and controller of such other port shall first give notice to the collector and controller of the port to which such ship or vessel belongs of such requisition made to them to indorse the certificate of registry, and the collector and controller of the port to which such ship or vessel belongs, shall thereupon send information to the collector and controller of such other port, whether any and what other bill or bills of sale have been recorded in the book of the registry of such ship or vessel; and the collector and controller of such other port having such information shall proceed in manner directed by this act in all respects to the indorsing of the certificate of registry as they would do if such port were the port to which such vessel belonged."

3, & 4 Wil. 4, c. 55.

Sect. 38. "If it shall become necessary to register any ship or vessel de novo, and any share or shares of such ship or vessel shall have been sold since she was last registered, and the transfer of such share or shares shall not have been recorded and indorsed in manner hereinbefore directed, the bill of sale thereof shall be produced to the collector and controller of his majesty's customs, who are to make registry of such ship or vessel, otherwise such sale shall not be noticed in such registry de novo, except as hereinafter excepted: provided always, that upon the future production of such bill of sale, and of the existing certificate of registry, such transfer shall and may be recorded and indorsed as well after such registry de novo as before."

If upon registry de novo any bill of sale shall not have been recorded, the same shall then be produced.

Bill of sale previous to registry may be recorded after registry.

Sect. 39. "If upon any change of property in any ship or vessel the owner or owners shall desire to have the same registered de novo, although not required by this act, and the owner or proper number of owners shall attend at the custom house at the port to which such ship or vessel belongs for that purpose, it shall be lawful for the collector and controller of his majesty's customs at such port to make registry de novo of such ship or vessel at the same port, and to grant a certificate thereof, the several requisites hereinbefore in this act mentioned and directed being first duly observed and complied with."

Upon change of property, registry de novo may be granted if desired, although not required by law.

Sect. 40. "And whereas great inconvenience hath arisen from the registering officers being served with subpoenas requiring them to bring with them and produce, on trials in courts of law relative to the ownery of vessels, or otherwise, the oaths or declarations required to be taken by the owners thereof prior to the registering thereof, and the books of registry, or copies or extracts therefrom: and whereas it would tend much to the despatch of business if the attendance of such registering officers with the same upon such trials were dispensed with; be it therefore enacted, that the collector and controller of his majesty's customs at any port or place, and the person or persons acting for them respectively, shall, upon every reasonable request by any person or persons whomsoever, produce and exhibit for his, her, or their inspection and examination any oath or declaration sworn or made by any such owner or owners, proprietor or proprietors, and also any register or entry in any book or books of registry required by this act to be made or kept relative to any ship or vessel, and shall, upon every reasonable request by any person or persons whomsoever, permit him, her, or them to take a copy or copies or an extract or extracts thereof respectively; and that the copy and copies of any such oath or declaration, register or entry, shall, upon being proved to be a true copy or copies thereof respectively, be allowed and received as evidence upon every trial at law, without the production of the original or originals, and without the testimony or attendance of any collector or controller, or other person or persons acting for them respectively, in all cases, as fully and to all intents and purposes as such original or originals, if produced by any collector or collectors, controller or controllers, or other person or persons acting for them, could or might legally be admitted or received in evidence."

Copies of declarations, &c. and of extracts from books of registry admitted in evidence.

Sect. 41. "If the ship or vessel, or the share or shares of any owner thereof who may be out of the kingdom, shall be sold in his absence by his known agent or correspondent, under his directions either expressed or implied, and acting for his interest in that behalf, and such agent or correspondent who shall have executed a bill of sale to the purchaser of the whole of such ship or vessel, or of any share or shares thereof, shall not have received a legal power to execute the same, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of his majesty's customs, upon application made to them, and proof to their satisfaction of the fair dealings of the parties, to permit such transfer to be registered, if registry de novo be necessary, or to be recorded and indorsed, as the case may be, in manner directed by this act, as if such legal power had been produced; and also if it shall happen that any bill of sale cannot be produced, or if, by reason of distance of time, or the absence or death of parties concerned, it cannot be proved that a bill of sale for any share or shares in any ship or vessel had been executed, and registry de novo, of such ship or vessel, shall have become necessary, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of his majesty's customs, upon proof to their satisfaction of the fair dealings of the parties, to permit such ship or vessel to be registered de novo in like manner as if a bill of sale for the transfer of such share or shares had been produced: provided always, that in any of the cases herein mentioned good and sufficient security shall be given to produce a legal power or bill of sale within a reasonable time, or to abide the future claims of the absent owner, his heirs and successors, as the case may be; and at the future request of the party whose property has been so transferred, without the production of a bill of sale from him or from his lawful attorney, such bond shall be available for the protection of his interest, in addition to any powers or rights which he may have in law or equity against the ship or vessel, or against the parties concerned, until he shall have received full indemnity for any loss or injury sustained by him."

Sect. 42. "When any transfer of any ship or vessel, or of any share or shares thereof, shall be made only as a security for the payment of a debt or debts, either by way of mortgage, or of assignment to a trustee or trustees for the purpose of selling the same for the payment of any debt or debts, then and in every such case the collector and controller of the port where the ship or vessel is registered shall, in the entry in the book of registry, and also in the indorsement on the certificate of registry, in manner hereinbefore directed, state and express that such transfer was made only as a security for the payment of a debt or debts, or by way of mortgage, or to that effect; and the person or persons to whom such transfer shall be made, or any other person or persons claiming under him or them as a mortgagee or mortgagees, or a trustee or trustees only, shall not by reason thereof be deemed to be the owner or owners of such ship or vessel, share or shares thereof, nor shall the person or persons making such transfer be deemed by reason thereof to have ceased to be an owner or owners of such ship or vessel, any more than if no such transfer had been made, except so far as may be necessary for the purpose of rendering the ship or vessel, share or shares so transferred, available by sale or otherwise for the payment of the debt or debts for securing the payment of which such transfer shall have been made."

Sect. 43. "When any transfer of any ship or vessel, or of any share or shares thereof, shall have been made as a security for the payment of any debt or debts, either by way of mortgage or of assignment as aforesaid, and such transfer shall have been duly registered according to the provisions of this act, the right or interest of the mortgagee or other assignee as aforesaid shall not be in any manner affected by any act or acts of bankruptcy committed by such mortgagor or assignor, mortgagors or assignors, after the time when such mortgage or assignment shall have been so registered as aforesaid, notwithstanding such mortgagor or assignor, mortgagors or assignors, at the time he or they shall so become bankrupt as aforesaid, shall have in his or their possession, order, and disposition, and shall be the reputed owner or owners of the said ship or vessel, or the share or shares thereof, so by him or them mortgaged or assigned as aforesaid, but that such mortgage or assignment shall take place of and be preferred to any right, claim, or interest which may belong to the assignee or assignees of such bankrupt or bankrupts in such ship or vessel, share or shares thereof, any law or statute to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 44. "It shall and may be lawful for any governor, lieutenant-governor, or commander-in-chief of any of his majesty's colonies, plantations, islands, or territories, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required, if any suit, information, libel, or other prosecution or proceeding of any nature or kind whatever shall have been commenced or shall hereafter be commenced in any court whatever in any of the said colonies, plantations, islands, or territories respectively, touching the force and effect of any register granted to any ship or vessel, upon a representation made to any such governor, lieutenant-governor, or commander-in-chief, to cause all proceedings thereon to be stayed, if he shall see just cause so to do, until his majesty's pleasure shall be known and certified to him by his majesty, by and with the advice of his majesty's privy council; and such governor, lieutenant-governor, or commander-in-chief is hereby required to transmit to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, to be laid before his majesty in council, an authenticated copy of the proceedings in every such case, together with his reasons for causing the same to be stayed, and such documents (properly verified) as he may judge necessary for the information of his majesty."

"If any person or persons shall falsely make declaration to any of the matters hereinbefore required to be verified by declaration, or if any person or persons shall counterfeit, erase, alter, or falsify any certificate or other instrument in writing required or directed to be obtained, granted, or produced by this act, or shall knowingly or wilfully make use of any certificate or other instrument so counterfeited, erased, altered, or falsified, or shall wilfully grant such certificate or other instrument in writing, knowing it to be false, such person or persons shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of five hundred pounds."

Penalty of 500*l.* on persons making false declaration, or falsifying any document.

Sect. 46. "All the penalties and forfeitures inflicted and incurred by this act shall and may be sued for, prosecuted, recovered, and disposed of in such manner, and by such ways, means, and methods, as any penalties or forfeitures inflicted or which may be incurred for any offences committed against any law relating to the customs may now legally be sued for, prosecuted, recovered, and disposed of (a); and that the officer or officers concerned in seizures or prosecutions under this act shall be entitled to and receive the same share of the produce arising from such seizures as in the case of seizures for unlawful importation, and to such share of the produce arising from any pecuniary fine or penalty for any offence against this act as any officer or officers is or are now by any law or regulation entitled to upon prosecutions for pecuniary penalties (a)."

How penalties are to be recovered, and officers' shares.

Sect. 47. "This act may be altered, varied, or repealed by any act or acts to be passed in this session of parliament."

Act may be altered this session.

By the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 56, intituled "An Act to regulate the Admeasurement of the Tonnage and Burthen of the Merchant Shipping of the United Kingdom," [9th September 1835], reciting, "whereas by an act passed in the third and fourth years of the reign of his present majesty, for the registering of British vessels, certain rules are established for ascertaining the tonnage of ships as well on shore as afloat, and of vessels propelled by steam; and the account of such tonnage, whenever the same shall have been ascertained according to the rules therein prescribed (except in the case of ships admeasured afloat), it is thereby enacted shall be deemed the tonnage of such ships, and shall be repeated in every subsequent registry of such ships, unless any alteration shall have been made in their form and burthen, or unless it be discovered that the tonnage had been erroneously computed: and whereas it is considered that the capacity of a ship is the fairest standard by which to regulate its tonnage, that internal measurements will afford the most accurate and convenient method of ascertaining that capacity, and that the adoption of such a mode of admeasurement will tend to the interests of the ship builder and the owner, as well as to the proper collection of the dues which by law are payable on tonnage; and it is expedient to alter and amend the law in this respect:" it is therefore enacted, "that from and after the commencement of this act so much of the said recited act as establishes rules for ascertaining the tonnage of ships shall be and the same is hereby repealed so far as respects the merchant shipping of the United Kingdom to be thereafter registered."

Sect. 2. "From and after the commencement of this act the tonnage of every ship or vessel required by law to be registered shall, previous to her being registered, be measured and ascertained while her hold is clear, and according to the following rule; (that is to say,) divide the length of the upper deck, between the afterpart of the stem and the forepart of the stern-post into six equal parts. Depths: at the foremost, the middle, and the aftermost of those points of division, measure in feet and decimal parts of a foot the depths from the under side of the upper deck to the ceiling at the limber strake. In the case of a break in the upper deck, the depths are to be measured from a line stretched in a continuation of the deck. Breadths: divide each of those three depths into five equal parts, and measure the inside breadths at the following points; videlicet, at one fifth and at four fifths from the upper deck of the foremost and aftermost depths, and at two fifths and four fifths from the upper deck of the midship depth. Length: at half the midship depth measure the length of the vessel from the after-part of the stem to the forepart of the stern-post; then to twice the midship depth add the foremost and the aftermost depths for the sum of the depths; add together the upper and lower breadths at the foremost division, three times the upper breadth, and the lower breadth at the midship division, and the upper and twice the lower breadth at the after division, for the sum of the breadths; then multiply the sum of the depths by the sum of the breadths, and this product by the length, and divide the final product by three thousand five hundred, which will give the number of tons for register. If the vessel have a poop or half deck, or a break in the upper deck, measure the inside mean length, breadth, and height of such part thereof as may be included within the bulk-head; multiplying these three measurements together, and dividing the product by 92.4, the quotient will be the number of tons to be added to the result as above found. In order to ascertain the tonnage of open vessels, the depths are to be measured from the upper edge of the upper strake."

Tonnage, when ascertained, to be entered on register.

Sect. 3. "The tonnage or burthen of every ship belonging to the United Kingdom, ascertained in the manner hereinbefore directed, shall, in respect of any such ship which shall be registered after the commencement of this act (except as hereinafter excepted), be inserted in the certificate of the registry thereof, and be taken and deemed to be the tonnage or burthen thereof for all the purposes of the said recited act."

Mode of ascertaining tonnage of steam vessels.

Sect. 4. Provided always, "that in each of the several rules hereinbefore prescribed, when applied for the purpose of ascertaining the tonnage of any ship or vessel propelled by steam, the tonnage due to the cubical contents of the engine room shall be deducted from the total tonnage of the vessel as determined by either of the rules aforesaid, and the remainder shall be deemed the true register tonnage of the said ship or vessel. The tonnage due to the cubical contents of the engine room shall be determined in the following manner; that is to say, measure the inside length of the engine room in feet and decimal parts of a foot from the foremost to the aftermost bulk-head, then multiply the said length by the depth of the ship or vessel at the midship division as aforesaid, and the product by the inside breadth at the same division at two fifths of the depth from the deck taken as aforesaid, and divide the last product by 92.4, and the quotient shall be deemed the tonnage due to the cubical contents of the engine room.

Length and cubical contents of engine room to be set forth in description of steam vessel.

Sect. 5. Provided always, "that the tonnage due to the cubical contents of the engine room, and also the length of the engine room shall be set forth in the certificate of the registry as part of the description of the ship or vessel, and that any alteration of such tonnage due to the cubical contents of the engine room or of such length of the engine room, after registry, shall be deemed to be an alteration requiring registry de novo within the meaning of the said act for the registering of ships or vessels.

Sect. 6. "For the purpose of ascertaining the tonnage of all such ships, whether belonging to the United Kingdom or otherwise, as there shall be occasion to measure while their cargoes are on board, the following rule shall be observed and is hereby established; (that is to say,) measure, first, the length on the upper deck between the afterpart of the stem and the forepart of the stern-post; secondly, the inside breadth on the underside of the upper deck, at the middle point of the length; and, thirdly, the depth from the under side of the upper deck down the pump-well to the skin; multiply these three dimensions together, and divide the product by one hundred and thirty, and the quotient will be the amount of the register tonnage of such ship."

6. The Registry Act, &c.

5 & 6 Wil. 4, c. 56.

For ascertaining tonnage of vessels when laden.

Sect. 7. "The true amount of the register tonnage of every merchant ship or vessel belonging to the United Kingdom, to be ascertained according to the rule by this act established in respect of such ships, shall be deeply carved or cut in figures of at least three inches in length on the main beam of every such ship or vessel, prior to her being registered."

Amount of register tonnage to be carved on main beam.

Sect. 8. Provided always, "that nothing herein contained shall extend to alter the present measure of tonnage of any ship or vessel which shall have been registered prior to the commencement of this act, unless in cases where the owners of any such ships shall require to have their tonnage established according to the rule hereinbefore provided, or unless there shall be occasion to have any such ship admeasured again on account of any alteration which shall have been made in the form and burthen of the same, in which cases only such ships shall be re-admeasured according to the said rule and their tonnage registered accordingly."

Not to alter tonnage of vessels already registered.

Sect. 9. "This act shall commence and take effect upon and from the 1st day of January, 1836."

Commencement of act.

Sect. 10. "This act may be altered, amended, or repealed by any act or acts to be passed in the present session of parliament."

Act may be altered this session.

upon oath, that he, the said A. W., together with D. W., on the day of , instant, were, and still are, owners of a certain vessel called "The Reso- lution," now in the port of London, and that P. S., of , then had in his custody and possession, the certificate of the registry of the said vessel, and that they, the said A. W. and D. W., then were and still are desirous of transferring of their property in the said vessel, and of procuring an indorsement of such transfer, to be made on the said certificate by C. C., being the collector, and
C. A., being the controller of the port of London, being the port where the said vessel is registered, and they being the proper officers of the customs in that behalf, for which purpose occasion then required and still requires, that the said certi-

after the commission of such offence, in a summary way, by the order and adjudication of any one justice of the peace for the county or place in which the port shall be situate, from which any such ship or vessel shall depart, or at which any such ship or vessel shall arrive, on complaint to such justice for that purpose exhibited; and such penalty shall be levied, as well as the costs of such proceedings, on nonpayment, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, or person or persons liable to pay the same, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice; and such justice is hereby authorized and required to summon before him any witness or witnesses, and to examine such witness or witnesses upon oath, of and concerning such offences, and to hear and determine the same; and the overplus (if any) of the money so levied or recovered, after discharging the penalty or forfeiture for which such warrant shall be issued, and the costs and expenses of recovering and levying the same, shall be returned upon demand to the owner or owners of the goods or chattels so seized or distrained; and in case such penalty or forfeiture shall not be forthwith paid upon conviction, then it shall be lawful for such justice to order the offender or offenders so convicted to be detained and kept in safe custody, until return can be conveniently made to such warrant of distress, unless the offender or offenders shall give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justice, for his or their appearance before such justice on such day or days as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant of distress, such day or days not being more than seven days from the time of taking any such security, and which security the said justice is hereby empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise; but if, upon the return of such warrant, it shall appear that no sufficient distress can be had thereupon, then it shall be lawful for such justice, or any other justice of the peace for such county or place as aforesaid, and he is hereby authorized and required, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause such offender or offenders to be committed to the gaol of such county or place, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for any term not exceeding two calendar months, unless such penalty or forfeiture, and all reasonable charges, shall be sooner paid and satisfied; and one moiety of every such penalty or forfeiture, when so levied, shall be paid to the person or persons who shall sue or prosecute for the same, for his or her own use and benefit, and the other moiety thereof to the use of his majesty, his heirs, and successors."

Sect. 8. "If any person shall think himself or herself aggrieved by any conviction in pursuance of this act, it shall be lawful for such person to appeal to the justices of the peace at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the county or place, such appellant (if there be sufficient time after the cause of such complaint shall have arisen) first giving or causing to be given ten days' notice at least in writing of his or her intention of bringing such appeal, and of the matter thereof, to the justice whose conviction shall be so appealed against, and within seven days next after such notice entering into a recognizance before the said justice or some other justice of the peace for the county or place, with two sufficient sureties conditioned to try such appeal, and to abide the order of such justices at sessions thereon, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such quarter sessions; and for want of sufficient time for giving such notice previous to the quarter sessions next after the cause of such complaint shall have happened, then such appeal, after such notice and under such recognizance, may be made at the second general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for such county or place; and the justices at such first or second sessions, upon due proof of such notice having been given as aforesaid, and of the entering into such recognizance, shall hear and finally determine the cause and matter of such appeal in a summary way, and shall award such costs to the parties appealing or appealed against, as they the said justices shall think proper, and the determination of such justices at such quarter sessions shall be final, binding, and conclusive to all intents and purposes; and the said justices at such sessions may also, by their warrant or order, cause such costs so awarded by distress and sale to be levied of the goods and chattels of the person or persons who shall refuse or neglect to pay the same; and for want of sufficient distress may commit such person or persons to the common gaol or house of correction for the said county, there to remain for any time not exceeding two calendar months, or until payment of such costs."

Sect. 9. "No proceedings against, nor any conviction of any offender or offenders against this act, or by or before any justice of the peace, shall be quashed for want of form, nor be removed or removable by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Dublin; and where any distress shall be made for any sum or sums of money to be levied by virtue of this act, the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party or parties making the same be deemed a trespasser or trespassers, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, warrant of distress, or other proceedings relating thereto; nor shall the party or parties distraining be deemed a trespasser or trespassers ab initio, on account of any irregularity which shall be afterwards committed by the party or parties distraining, but the person or persons aggrieved by such irregularity shall and may recover full satisfaction for the special damage (if any) in an action on the case; but no plaintiff or plaintiffs shall recover in any action for such irregularity as aforesaid, if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made by or on behalf of the party distraining, before such action commenced."

Sect. 10. "Any action or suit which shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance and by the authority of this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and shall be brought in the county, city, or place, where the cause of action shall arise, and not elsewhere; and that the defendant or defendants in such action or suit to be brought may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if it shall appear to be so done, or if any such action or suit shall be brought after the time before limited for bringing the same, or shall be brought in any county, city, or place other than as aforesaid, then and in every such case the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; and upon such verdict, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be nonsuited, or shall discontinue his, her, or their action, or if a verdict shall pass against the plaintiff, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against such plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall and may recover double costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have for costs of suit in other cases by law."

State the offence thus:] *That C. VIII. The Pilot Act, and Regulations as to Pilots.

6 Geo. 4, c. 125.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 125, is the latest act respecting pilots and pilotage, and by the first section of that act, the 52 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 2, 52 Geo. III. c. 39, 55 Geo. III. c. 87, and all provisions in other acts relative to pilots and pilotage, are repealed.

The corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond to license pilots to act within certain limits.

Sect. 2. "From and after the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and they are hereby required, after due examination, to appoint and license, under their common seal, fit and competent persons duly skilled to act as pilots, for the purpose of conducting all ships and vessels sailing, navigating, and passing as well up and down or upon the rivers of Thames and Medway, and all and every the several channels, creeks, and docks thereof or therein, or leading or adjoining thereto, between Orfordness and London-bridge, as also from London-bridge to the Downs, and from the Downs westward as far as the Isle of Wight, and in the English channel, from the Isle of Wight up to London-bridge; and all ships and vessels sailing, navigating, and passing as aforesaid (save and except as hereinafter provided), shall be conducted and piloted within the limits aforesaid, by such pilots so to be appointed and licensed, and by no other pilots or persons whomsoever: provided always, that it shall be lawful for all pilots heretofore licensed by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, until the 31st day of January next after the passing of this act, and whilst their licences shall respectively continue in force, but no longer, to pilot or conduct any ships or vessels within such limits as such pilots might lawfully have conducted and piloted the same immediately before the passing of this act; and the licences so heretofore granted to such pilots respectively as aforesaid, shall, unless revoked or suspended, as hereinafter mentioned, continue in force notwithstanding this act, until the said 31st day of January, so that such pilots respectively do in all things conform themselves to the provisions of this act, and the bye-laws, rules, orders, and regulations hereinafter directed to remain in force, or to be established under the same."

Pilots heretofore appointed may act until the 31st January next.

No person shall be licensed by the corporation, except as herein specified, nor take charge of a ship drawing more than fourteen feet water, until he shall have acted three years, and have been then re-examined and again approved.

Sect. 3. "No person shall be licensed by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond as a pilot, who shall not have served as mate for three years on board of, or who shall not have been for one year in the actual command of a square-rigged vessel of not less than eighty tons' register tonnage, as to licences for the North Channel upwards, and not less than one hundred and fifty tons' register tonnage, as to licences for the North Channel, Queen's Channel, South Channel, or other channels downwards, or who shall not have been employed in the pilotage, or buoyage service of the said corporation of Trinity House for seven years, or who shall not have served an apprenticeship of five years to some pilot vessel licensed under the said act passed in the fifty-second year of the reign of his late majesty, or under this act; and that no person so licensed shall take charge as a pilot of any ship or vessel drawing more than fourteen feet water in the rivers Thames or Medway, or any of the channels leading thereto or therefrom, until such person shall have acted as a licensed pilot for three years, and shall have been, after such three years, on re-examination, approved of in that behalf by the said corporation of Trinity House, on pain of forfeiting 10*l.* for every such offence, as well by the person acting as such pilot, as also by the master or other person having the command of such ship or vessel, who shall permit any such person to take charge as a pilot of the same, contrary to the provision aforesaid."

Penalty as well by the person acting as by the person in command permitting him.

Pilots to pay annually 3*l.* 3*s.*, and 6*d.* in the pound on their earnings;

Sect. 4. "Each and every pilot already licensed by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or to be licensed by the said corporation under the authority of this act (except only such pilots as have been or shall be so licensed by the said corporation, upon their receiving certificates of examination by any sub-commissioners of pilotage), as in the said act of the fifty-second year of the reign of his late majesty King George III., and hereinafter directed, in lieu and satisfaction of and for all the ancient and accustomed duties heretofore payable by such pilots to the said corporation, shall from time to time and at all times hereafter pay or cause to be paid to the said corporation, or to such person or persons as they shall appoint to receive the same on their behalf, the sum of three guineas, in the month of January yearly; and that each and every pilot so licensed, or to be licensed by the said corporation as aforesaid, as well upon receiving such certificates as aforesaid, as otherwise, howsoever, shall also from time to time and at all times, from and after the first day of July next, pay or cause to be paid to the said corporation, or to such person or persons and at such places and times as the said corporation shall in that behalf appoint, a certain poundage of 6*d.* in the pound upon all the pilotage earned by each and every of such pilots, from the said first day of July inclusive, on pain of forfeiture, for default of any of the payments aforesaid, or for any concealment or fraud therein or relating thereto, double the amount payable, and of being suspended or dismissed from acting as a pilot, at the discretion of the said corporation; which said payments, hereby directed to be made as aforesaid, shall be carried to and applied to the purposes of the pilots' fund of the said corporation hereinafter mentioned."

Sect. 5. "It shall be lawful for the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and they are hereby required to appoint from time to time (as often and for such periods as they in their discretion shall think fit) proper and competent persons at such ports or places in England as they may think requisite (except within the liberty of the Cinque Ports, and all such other ports and places within or for which particular provision shall have been made by any act or acts of parliament, or by any charter or charters for the appointment of pilots), not to exceed five nor less than three persons at each port or place for which any such appointment shall be made, which persons so to be appointed shall be called sub-commissioners of pilotage, and shall take the oath in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked (C.), for the faithful discharge of their duty; and such persons so to be appointed shall examine, and they are hereby authorized (so long as their respective deputations or appointments shall not be revoked or superseded by the appointment of other persons in their places) to examine into the qualification of persons to act as pilots for such respective ports and places, and the adjoining coasts specified in their respective deputations or appointments as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the said corporation, upon their receiving a satisfactory certificate under the hands of any three of the persons so to be appointed, where the whole number at any port or place shall consist of four or five, and of any two where the whole number shall consist of three, that the person examined as aforesaid is duly qualified to act for such port or ports, and the adjoining coasts, to give a licence to such person to act as a pilot within the particular limits (describing the same) for which he shall have passed such examination."

Sect. 6. "It shall be lawful for the corporations of the Trinity Houses of the ports of Hull and Newcastle respectively, to appoint sub-commissioners of pilotage to examine pilots, and give licences for them to pilot ships and vessels into or out of any ports, harbours, or places within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that such sub-commissioners as have been already appointed either by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or by the said corporations of the Trinity Houses of the ports of Hull and Newcastle respectively, under the authority of any act or acts of parliament heretofore passed, shall continue to act in the same manner as if they were appointed under this act."

Sect. 7. "When and as soon as the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond shall have licensed pilots for any particular port or ports, and the respective coasts near the same as aforesaid, they shall cause notice of such licences to be published by fixing such notice in writing at the Trinity House, and at the Custom House in London, and also at the respective custom houses of the ports for which, and for the coasts near the same, such licences shall be granted, and shall also afterwards cause such notice to be published in the London Gazette, and in one or more of the newspapers circulated in that part of the country where the ports shall respectively be situated, which publication in the London Gazette shall be a good and sufficient evidence of such notice having been given; and from and after a time or times to be limited in the said notice, which shall not in any case, or in relation to any ships or vessels whatever, be less than six weeks from the publication thereof as aforesaid, and shall be proportionably more at the discretion of the said corporation, in relation to ships and vessels engaged in foreign voyages at the time of such publication, all ships and vessels sailing, navigating, or passing into or out of the said respective ports, or upon the coasts thereof (save and except as hereinafter mentioned) shall be conducted and piloted by such pilots only as shall be so licensed as aforesaid, and by no other pilots or persons whomsoever."

Sect. 8. "It shall be lawful for the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and they are hereby authorized and required to establish, vary, and alter, from time to time, as circumstances shall render the same necessary, rates of pilotage, in relation to all pilotage performed in any river, port, or place, or upon any coast whatever, by any pilot or pilots already licensed, or who shall be licensed by the said corporation upon their receiving certificates of examination from sub-commissioners of pilotage as aforesaid, which rates shall be regulated by and proportioned as well to the size and draught of water of the vessels, as to the distance piloted, the detention and responsibility of the pilot, and such other circumstances as the said corporation may think fit to take into consideration in fixing and establishing such rates; of which establishment or alteration of rates of pilotage notice shall be given by hanging up printed tables thereof, corrected from time to time, as variations therein shall be made at the several custom houses at the ports to which the said rates shall apply; and no greater or less rates, or other reward or emolument for such pilotage, shall, under any pretence whatever, be demanded, solicited, received, paid, or offered, on pain of forfeiting 10*l.* for every such offence, as well by the person demanding, soliciting, or receiving, as by the person paying or offering such greater or less rates, reward, or emolument: provided that ships, returning by distress of weather, contrary winds, or on account of accident, into ports, in the districts of the Isle of Wight, Plymouth and Falmouth, shall be subject to pay one-half of the common pilotage in the said ports."

Sect. 9. "If the major part in number of the pilots who shall be licensed by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, for any particular port or place in consequence of their receiving certificates of examination as aforesaid, shall be dissatisfied with the rates so established or altered for such port or place; or in case any owner of any ship or vessel interested in any such rates, shall be dissatisfied therewith, it shall be lawful for such parties respectively to appeal to his majesty, his heirs and successors, in his or their most honourable privy council, and for any committee of such privy council calling to their assistance any such persons as they may think fit, to hear and determine the matter of such appeal or appeals, and to settle, alter, and regulate such rates as to them shall appear to be expedient, in case the matter of such appeal shall, in the discretion of the said privy council, or committee thereof, appear to require the making of any order therein.

Sect. 10. "All and every the licences to be granted under the authority of this act, by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, shall be granted in the first instance up to and until the 31st day of January next ensuing the date thereof, and no longer; and that the same licences, and also all and every the licences heretofore granted by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and which shall be in force at the time of the passing of this act, shall and may be renewed and confirmed from year to year, up to and until the 31st day of January in every year, and no longer, at the discretion of the said corporation, such renewal and confirmation to be by indorsement on such licences respectively, signed by the secretary to the said corporation for the time being, or by such other person or persons as shall or may be thereunto authorized by the said corporation."

Sect. 11. "All persons licensed to act as pilots, or in pilot vessels, by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, by virtue of this Act, shall from time to time and at all times hereafter be subject to the regulations and government of the said corporation, who are hereby authorized and empowered, as well for ensuring the good conduct and constant attendance of such pilots upon their duty, as for enforcing the general purposes of this act, from time to time to make and frame all such bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances as they shall think fit, therein specifying and directing also what annual or other sums shall be paid by any such pilots to the sub-commissioners of pilotage, for the examination of such pilots, and for granting and renewing or confirming their licences from time to time; and it shall be lawful for the said corporation respectively to annex such reasonable penalties and forfeitures for the breach of such bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances when made, as to them shall seem expedient in that behalf; and from time to time to annul, alter, and amend all or any of the existing bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances, and to make such other and new bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances as they shall think proper, so as such bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances be made conformable to the true intent and meaning of this act, and shall not be repugnant to the laws of this realm: provided always, that no bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations or ordinances hereafter to be made by the said corporation, shall have force or effect before they shall have been examined, sanctioned, and approved by the chief justice of his majesty's court of King's Bench, or by the chief justice of his majesty's court of Common Pleas, the sanction and approbation of either of which chief justices shall be verified under his hand and seal; and all and every such bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances, when so made and confirmed as aforesaid, shall be observed and kept and put in execution, and have the same force and effect and operation, to all intents and purposes, as if the same were respectively enacted by this act."

Sect. 12. "And in order that all such bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances may be previously examined by the parties interested therein, be it further enacted, that copies of all such proposed bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations and ordinances shall be transmitted to his majesty's privy council, and to the commissioners of customs in London, three calendar months before the same shall be submitted to such chief justice as aforesaid; and the commissioners of the customs are hereby required, upon the receipt of such copy, to cause the same to be printed and hung up, as soon as the same can be done, in the several custom houses of the principal ports in Great Britain, there to be open to the inspection of all persons interested therein at all seasonable times; and notice shall be given in the Gazette of such proposed bye-laws being so hung up for inspection as aforesaid."

Sect. 13. "All such bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances as shall be so made and confirmed as aforesaid, shall be printed, and shall be hung up in some public or conspicuous place in the several custom houses of the ports of England, within the limits for which the pilots respectively shall be licensed, and also at the Trinity House in London."

Sect. 14. "From and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful for the lord warden of the Cinque Ports and constable of Dover Castle, or his lieutenant for the time being, and they are hereby required to appoint and license fit and competent persons duly skilled as pilots, for the purpose of conducting all ships and vessels sailing, navigating, and passing from or by Dungeness, up the rivers Thames and Medway to London bridge and Rochester bridge, and all and every the several channels, creeks, and docks of the same, and from the south buoy of the Brake to the westward, as far as the west end of the Owers; and all ships and vessels sailing, navigating, and passing as aforesaid (save and except as hereinafter provided), shall be conducted and piloted within the limits aforesaid, by such pilots so appointed and licensed, and by no other pilots or persons whomsoever: provided always, that it shall be lawful, after the passing of this act, for any pilot or pilots heretofore licensed by the said lord warden and constable for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being, to pilot or conduct any ship or vessel within such limits as such pilot or pilots might lawfully have conducted and piloted the same immediately before the passing of this act; and the licences so heretofore granted to such pilots as aforesaid shall continue in force notwithstanding this act, so that such pilots do in all things conform themselves to the provisions of this act, and the rules and regulations hereinafter directed to remain in force or be established under the same."

Sect. 15. "No person shall, from and after the passing of this act, take charge of any ship or vessel, as a pilot belonging to the society or fellowship of pilots of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, commonly called Cinque-Port pilots, before he shall be examined by the master and two wardens, or by four wardens of the said society or fellowship for the time being, touching his abilities, and shall be approved and admitted into the society or fellowship of the Trinity House of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, by the lord warden of the Cinque Ports, and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being; and if any person shall presume to act as a pilot belonging to the said society or fellowship, without having been so examined, approved, and admitted as aforesaid, every such person shall for the first offence forfeit 10*l.*, for the second 20*l.*, and for every other offence 40*l.*"

Sect. 16. "No person belonging to the said society or fellowship of pilots of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, commonly called Cinque-Port pilots, shall, from and after the passing of this act, be allowed to take charge as a pilot of any ship or vessel drawing more than eleven feet six inches water, until he shall have been licensed and acted as a pilot for three years; or of any ship or vessel drawing more than fourteen feet water, until he shall have been licensed and acted as a pilot for two years more, making five years; or of any ship or vessel drawing more than seventeen feet water, until he shall have been licensed and acted as a pilot two years more, making seven years in the whole; and at the expiration of such period of seven years, such pilot shall be again examined as to his fitness and competency, and if he shall be approved of and licensed on such examination, shall be authorized and allowed and entitled to take charge of any ships or vessels of any draught of water."

Sect. 17. "The master and such wardens of the said society or fellowship of pilots of the Trinity House of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, as shall be appointed from time to time to examine into the skill and ability of any person on his being first admitted as a pilot into the said society or fellowship, or after he shall have been licensed and served for seven years, shall take the oath marked (B.) in the schedule hereunto annexed, to be administered unto him or them respectively by the registrar of the court of Loadmanage, who is hereby authorized to administer such oath."

Sect. 18. "A proper and sufficient number of pilots of the Cinque Ports, not less than eighteen at any one time, and in succession, from time to time, without intermission or any unnecessary delay, shall, at all seasonable times, by day and night, constantly ply at sea, or be afloat between the South Foreland and Dungeness, to take charge of ships and vessels coming from the westward; and such pilots shall not allow any ship or vessel, having a signal for a pilot flying, to pass without attempting to board her; and that upon proper signals being made at and from signal-houses now erected, or which may be erected, on commanding situations, near to Dover, for that purpose, giving notice of the approach of any fleet of ships or vessels coming from the westward, all Cinque-Port pilots not on duty at the time shall, according to such rules and regulations as to number, rotation, or otherwise, as have been or shall be made in that behalf, forthwith prepare to go afloat, and shall go off in sufficient time to fall in with such ships and vessels, on pain of forfeiting, in case of neglect herein, for the first offence, the sum of 20*l.*, and for the second the offender shall be suspended from acting as a pilot for twelve months, and for the third offence shall forfeit his licence to act as such pilot, and shall be rendered thereby incapable of acting thereafter as a pilot."

Sect. 19. "The master or other person having the command of any ship or vessel coming from the westward, and bound to any place in the rivers Thames or Medway, not having a duly qualified Cinque-Port pilot on board, shall, on the arrival of such ship or vessel off Dungeness, and until she shall have passed the south buoy of the Brake, or a line to be drawn from Sandown Castle to the said buoy, or have been at anchor for one hour, as hereinafter mentioned, display and keep flying the usual signal for a pilot to come on board; and if any duly qualified Cinque-Port pilot shall be within hail or approaching and within half a mile, with the proper distinguishing flag flying in his vessel or boat, the master or other person having the command of such ship or vessel shall, by heaving to in proper time or shortening sail, or by all practicable means consistently with the safety of the ship or vessel, facilitate such pilot getting on board, and shall give the charge of piloting his ship or vessel to such Cinque-Port pilot; and every person commanding any such ship or vessel, who shall not display and keep flying the usual signal for a pilot to come on board, from the time such ship or vessel shall have arrived off Dungeness, and until she shall have passed the south buoy of the Brake, or a line to be drawn from Sandown Castle to the said buoy, (unless in the meantime a duly qualified Cinque-Port pilot shall have come on board), or who shall within the limits aforesaid decline to take on board the first duly qualified Cinque-Port pilot who shall offer, or to give charge of his ship or vessel to such duly qualified Cinque-Port pilot, or who shall not heave to, shorten sail, or otherwise consistently with the safety of the ship or vessel facilitate such pilot's coming on board as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay double the amount of the sum which would have been demanded for the pilotage of such ship or vessel: provided always, that if any ship or vessel coming from the westward, and bound to any place in the rivers Thames or Medway, shall anchor any where in the Downs between the South Foreland, and a line drawn from Sandown Castle to the south buoy of the Brake, having any licensed pilot other than a duly qualified Cinque-Port pilot on board, it shall not be necessary for the master of such ship or vessel to display or keep flying the usual signal for a pilot to come on board thereof, any longer than for and during one hour next after such ship or vessel shall so have anchored as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for any duly qualified Cinque-Port pilot at any time before such ship or vessel shall have been at anchor one hour with such signal flying as aforesaid, to repair on board the same, and to take charge of her up the said rivers, but not otherwise."

Sect. 20. "And whereas the pilots of the Cinque Ports are divided into two parts or classes, called The Upper and Lower Book Pilots: and whereas the permitting Cinque-Port pilots of the lower book to take charge of ships which before the passing of the said act of the fifty-second year of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Third could only be taken by pilots of the upper book has diminished and will diminish the profits of the upper book pilots, and has increased and will increase the profits of the lower book pilots, and it is therefore reasonable that compensation should be made by the lower book pilots to the persons who were at the time of the passing of the said last-mentioned act upper book pilots; be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Court of Loadmanage from time to time to settle the amount of the deductions to be made from the rates received by lower book pilots, for taking charge of vessels of greater draught of water than they could before the passing of the said act by law take, and in what proportions and how and in what manner and to whom the same are to be paid, and how the same shall be applied in making compensation to the persons who were upper book pilots at the time of the passing of the said act, for the losses they may sustain by such lower book pilots taking charge of such vessels, as aforesaid, provided that such deductions so to be fixed as aforesaid shall from time to time be diminished and decreased as such per-

Sect. 21. "All persons licensed or to be licensed to act as Cinque-Port pilots shall from time to time and at all times hereafter be subject to the regulations and government of the lord warden of the Cinque Ports and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, and it shall be lawful for the master and wardens of the said society or fellowship of pilots of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, and the lord warden of the Cinque Ports and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, his lieutenant for the time being, and the deputy lieutenant for the time being, or either of them, with the assent of the commissioners of Loadmanage, or the major part of them, present at an assembly commonly called A Court of Loadmanage, to be held by the said lord warden or his deputy, as and when they shall see fit, or occasion shall require, to annul, alter, or amend the rules and regulations of the said lord warden or Court of Loadmanage, which shall be in force at the time of the passing of this act, and which are hereby directed to remain in force notwithstanding the same, and to make from time to time such other sufficient rules and orders for enforcing the due observance of the provisions of this act by all Cinque-Port pilots, and for providing for the good government, constant attendance, and regulation of all such pilots in going off to and taking charge of, and conducting and navigating his majesty's ships and vessels, and the ships and vessels in his majesty's employ, and also all ships and vessels whatever and wheresoever, within the proper and usual limits of such pilots, or wherein they shall for the time being act or be; and for effectually securing the performance of all the duties and services of such pilots at all times, and all alterations and amendments in such rules and regulations so in force as aforesaid, and all other rules and regulations, or alterations or amendments thereof, hereafter to be made, shall, before the same are allowed to take effect, or become binding on any person or persons whatever, be printed and transmitted to the Custom House in London, and there hung up in some conspicuous place in the long room of the said Custom House; and notices shall be published in the Gazette, and put up at the custom houses within the Cinque Ports, of such rules and regulations, or any alterations thereof, for inspection, for one calendar month, in order that any persons interested therein, whether as owners or masters of ships, or pilots, or otherwise, may transmit to the lord warden of the Cinque Ports, or his lieutenant, any objections which they may have thereto, for the purpose of the same being altered or confirmed; and if no objection to the rules and regulations so made or altered shall be proposed, by or on the behalf of any person or persons, within the space of thirty days after the notices shall have been given and made public, in the manner hereinbefore provided, they shall have the same force and effect to all intents and purposes as all other rules and regulations for the government of pilots within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports have; but if an objection shall be made to the lord warden, or his lieutenant, by or on behalf of any person or persons, to any rule or regulation, or to any alteration in any rule or regulation, of which notice shall be given as aforesaid, within thirty days after the publication thereof, then and in such case the operation thereof shall be suspended until reference shall be had to his majesty's most honourable privy council, who are hereby authorized and empowered to hear as well any person who shall be deputed by the Court of Loadmanage, as by the person or persons objecting, and finally to decide as to the confirming, altering, or rejecting such rules or regulations, which decision of the privy council shall be final and binding on all parties; and copies of such rules or regulations shall be delivered to every member of the said society or fellowship, and also to every new member of the said society on his election; and a copy or extract thereof shall be at all times in the possession of every pilot belonging to the Cinque Ports, as well those already admitted and licensed as all others hereafter to be licensed as such pilots; and it shall be lawful in such rules and regulations to establish rates of payment out of such surplus earnings of the lower book pilots, as may arise from their being allowed to take the higher classes of ships, in the absence of pilots of the upper book, under the provisions of this act, for the better support and maintenance of the upper book pilots, and also penalties and forfeitures for the enforcing such rules and regulations, and better ordering of the said pilots, and for suspending or depriving any of the said pilots of their licences for breaking such rules or orders, or omitting to do any thing required by the same to be done, or for acting in anywise contrary to such rules or orders."

Sect. 22. "If any such rules and regulations so hereafter to be made in relation to Cinque-Port pilots as aforesaid shall appear to be in any material point erroneous, insufficient, or defective, it shall be lawful for the owner of any ship, or other person interested in the matter of such rules or regulations, to apply to his majesty's most honourable privy council, who shall thereupon amend, correct, or enlarge the same, or cause such other proper and sufficient rules and regulations to be drawn up for the purposes aforesaid; which rules and regulations so made, or so amended, corrected, and enlarged, shall be distributed, published, and made use of in such manner as his majesty's said privy council shall in that behalf appoint and direct; and the same shall take effect from such time as in the said rules or regulations shall be expressed in regard to the commencement thereof."

Sect. 23. "And whereas under the provisions of an act passed in the forty-eighth year of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Third, intituled 'An Act for the better Regulation of Pilots, and of the Pilotage of Ships and Vessels navigating the British Seas,' the number of pilots of the Cinque Ports was increased to one hundred and forty, and it hath been found that the said last-mentioned number is at present, in the time of peace, more than sufficient for the trade and navigation of this kingdom; be it therefore enacted, that until the number of such pilots shall by death or otherwise be reduced below one hundred and twenty, or shall be added to, as hereinafter mentioned, it shall not be lawful for the said lord warden and constable of Dover Castle, or his lieutenant for the time being, without special permission in that behalf given by his majesty's most honourable privy council, upon the recommendation of the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, to fill up any more than each alternate vacancy which shall arise in the number of such pilots: provided always, that twenty Cinque-Port pilots more, or any less number of such pilots, shall and may be added to the then existing number whenever such addition shall be directed to be made by an order of such privy council, upon application thereto for that purpose by the said corporation of Trinity House, and in like manner from time to time, so as the number of Cinque-Port pilots shall not at any one time exceed one hundred and eighty, of which said reduction or additions respectively notice shall be given by or under the authority of the lord warden of the Cinque Ports, in the London Gazette, and in one or more newspaper or newspapers circulating in the counties of Middlesex and Kent."

Sect. 24. "Whenever such additions to the number of the said pilots shall respectively take place, as hereinbefore provided, the numbers so increased shall from thenceforth be kept up from time to time by the appointment of pilots in succession, as often as any vacancy or vacancies shall happen by death, incapacity, or dismissal: provided always, that in time of peace no more than each alternate vacancy in the number of Cinque-Port pilots shall be filled up without a special permission in that behalf given by his majesty's privy council, upon the recommendation of the said corporation of Trinity House, unless the number of such pilots shall, at the time of such filling up, be reduced below one hundred and twenty, in which case such vacancy shall and may be filled up from time to time without such permission as aforesaid."

prices hereinafter enumerated in the tables marked (A.) and (B.) respectively in the schedule marked (A.) to this act annexed, shall and may be lawfully demanded and received by any pilot licensed, or to be licensed, by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or by the lord warden of the Cinque Ports, and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being respectively, for the piloting or conducting of any ship or vessel from place to place, as expressed in the said tables respectively; that is to say, the respective rates or prices enumerated in the said table marked (A.) shall and may be demanded and received by any pilot licensed, or to be licensed by the said corporation; and the respective rates or prices enumerated in the said table marked (B.) shall and may be demanded and received by any pilot licensed, or to be licensed, by the said lord warden of the Cinque Ports and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being; and no greater or less rates or prices, or other reward or emolument, shall, under any pretence whatever, be demanded, solicited, received, paid, or offered, than such rates or prices, on pain of forfeiting 10*l.* for every such offence, as well by the person demanding, soliciting, or receiving, as also by the person paying, or offering such greater or less rate or price, reward, or emolument."

Sect. 26. "It shall and may be lawful for the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond (as to the said rates or prices to be demanded and received by pilots licensed, or to be licensed, by the said corporation) and for the said lord warden of the Cinque Ports, and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being, (as to the said rates or prices to be demanded and received by pilots licensed, or to be licensed, by the said lord warden and constable, or his lieutenant), and they are hereby respectively authorized and empowered, from time to time, and at any time or times hereafter, with the consent of his majesty, his heirs, and successors, in his or their most honourable privy council, to increase, reduce, alter, or modify, all or any or either of the said respective rates or prices so enumerated in the said tables respectively, or to substitute other rates or prices in lieu thereof, and the same rates or prices so increased, reduced, altered, modified, or substituted as aforesaid, again in like manner, and with the like consent, from time to time to increase, reduce, alter, or modify, or others to substitute in lieu thereof, and to fix and determine the period (so that the same be not less than three calendar months from the giving of the notice hereinafter mentioned), from and after which such altered or substituted rates and prices are to be demanded, of which rates and prices, and of the period from and after which the same are to be demanded, notice shall from time to time be given, by hanging up printed tables thereof in some public or conspicuous place in the Custom House of London, and also at the Trinity House in London; and from and after the period specified in such last-mentioned tables, the respective rates or prices therein enumerated may and shall be demanded and received by any pilot licensed by the said corporation of Trinity House, or by the lord warden of the Cinque Ports and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being respectively, instead of the said several rates and prices mentioned in the said tables marked (A.) and (B.) respectively; and from and after such period, no greater or less rates or prices, or other reward or emolument, shall, under any pretence whatever, be demanded, solicited, received, paid, or offered, on pain of forfeiting 10*l.* for every such offence, as well by the person demanding, soliciting, or receiving, as also by the person paying or offering such greater or less rate or price."

Sect. 27. "Every person who shall apply for a licence to act as a pilot by virtue of this act, shall, before any licence shall be granted to him, execute a bond in a penal sum, at the discretion of the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or of the lord warden of the Cinque Ports and constable of Dover Castle for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being (as the case may be), to an amount not exceeding 100*l.*, to be paid to the said corporation, or to the society or fellowship of pilots of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet (as the case may be), their successors or assigns, with a condition subjoined thereto for better securing the due obedience of such pilot to the bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances made in pursuance of any act or acts of parliament heretofore passed, or which shall be made and framed pursuant to this act, which bond shall be capable of being given in evidence in any court of law or equity, without being stamped according to the laws relating to the stamp duties: provided always, that all bonds before given by pilots under any former act or acts of parliament shall continue in force, and be deemed to be given under this act, unless new bonds shall in any case be required by the said corporation, or by the said lord warden and constable, or his lieutenant respectively, in which case new bonds shall be given accordingly."

Sect. 28. "All bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances made under the said recited act of the forty-eighth year of the reign of his said late majesty, or under the said recited act of the fifty-second year of the reign of his said late majesty, or either of them, and which shall be in force under the same respectively at the time of the passing of this act, shall remain, continue, and be in full force and virtue, until the same respectively shall have been annulled or altered, or other bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, or ordinances made in lieu thereof under this act, and shall be and are hereby declared to be good and valid bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances under this act, as fully as if they had been made under the authority of the same; any thing hereinbefore, or in any other act of parliament, to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 29. "As well every such licence so granted or to be granted, renewed, or confirmed, by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond as aforesaid, as also every such licence so granted or to be granted by the said lord warden of the Cinque Ports and constable of Dover Castle, or his lieutenant for the time being, as aforesaid, shall and may be by the said corporation, or by the said lord warden and constable of Dover Castle, or his lieutenant for the time being respectively, annulled, suspended, or adjudged to be forfeited, in such manner and at any such time or times as to them the said corporation and lord warden, or his lieutenant for the time being respectively, shall seem meet, as well during as at the end of the period for which such licences respectively shall have been so granted, renewed, or confirmed as aforesaid."

Sect. 30. "Every pilot whose licence shall be revoked, annulled, suspended, or adjudged to be forfeited, or who shall be suspended from acting as a pilot, as hereinbefore or hereinafter mentioned, shall and may, at any time within six months next after such revocation, annulling, suspension, or adjudication shall have been made, and upon giving notice to the corporation or other authority by which such licence shall have been so revoked, annulled, or suspended, or such adjudication made as aforesaid, and every person who, having complained of any such pilot, shall be dissatisfied with the adjudication made upon the matter of such complaint by the corporation or other authority which shall have cognizance thereof, shall and may, at any time within six months next after such adjudication and upon giving notice to the corporation or other authority by which such adjudication was made, appeal to his majesty's most honourable privy council, who shall thereupon hear the appeal, and confirm or annul any determination or adjudication in the premises, or at their discretion make any particular and special order relating thereto, and to the matter of such appeal, and the costs thereof, as the case may require."

Sect. 31. "It shall be lawful for the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and for the said society or fellowship of pilots of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, and also for all other corporate bodies, or persons having lawful authority to appoint pilots within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, to license vessels of such size and description as shall appear to them to be proper, for the purpose of having pilots constantly in attendance in such vessels at sea, and to nominate and appoint, and from time to time to remove and again appoint the masters of such vessels respectively; and for the better support of such pilot vessels, it shall be lawful for any number of pilots, licensed by virtue of this act, or otherwise lawfully licensed, with the consent of the said corporate bodies, or persons by whom respectively such pilots have been or shall be appointed as aforesaid, to constitute a joint stock company or companies, for the providing and maintaining of such pilot vessels, which companies and the said vessels shall at all times be subject to such rules and regulations as shall from time to time be sanctioned and approved in that behalf by the corporate bodies, or persons by whom respectively such pilots shall respectively have been licensed."

Sect. 32. "Every pilot-boat or vessel, or other boat or vessel, in the pilot service of any corporation or society established by law, in relation to pilotage, or of or belonging to any person authorized to act as a pilot by such corporation or society, shall, at all times, and on every station, be fitted with black sides, and have the upper streak, next the gunwale, painted white, and shall, while afloat, carry a flag at the mast-head, or on a sprit or staff, or in some other equally conspicuous situation, which flag shall be of large dimensions, proportioned to the size of the boat or vessel carrying the same, and shall be half red and half white, in horizontal stripes, of which the uppermost shall be white, and the same shall at all times be kept and preserved in a clean and distinct condition, so as to be easily discerned at a proper and sufficient distance; and every such boat or vessel shall also have the name of the principal pilot thereof, for the time being, painted in broad white letters, of three inches in length, on a black ground, on her stern, and on each bow such number as shall be expressed in the licence of such principal pilot, which name and number shall not be hid or concealed by any person at any time, on pain of forfeiting, for the omission or evasion of any of the provisions hereinbefore made, in respect of such pilot-boat or vessel, the sum of 20*l.* to be paid by the senior pilot on board, who is hereby declared answerable for the due observance of the matters aforesaid, by every person on board such boat or vessel; and in case any pilot shall be carried off in any boat not in the service of any such corporation or society, such pilot shall exhibit a similar flag at the mast-head, or on a sprit or staff, to distinguish that such boat has a pilot on board, on pain of such pilot so carried off forfeiting the sum of 20*l.*, unless he shall show reasonable cause for having omitted to exhibit such flag."

Sect. 33. "If any boat or vessel, not having a licensed pilot on board, shall without lawful authority carry such distinguishing flag as aforesaid, the owner or owners, or the master or other person having charge of such boat or vessel, displaying or carrying any such flag, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay a sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 34. "If any boat or vessel shall run before any ship or vessel not having a licensed pilot on board, when such ship or vessel cannot, from particular circumstances, be boarded for the purpose of directing her course, until a licensed pilot can be put on board, the pilot on board such boat or vessel, or if no pilot shall be on board and the person having charge of her shall run her before such ship or vessel, at the request or by the direction of the master, or other person having the command thereof, then such person having charge of such boat or vessel shall be entitled to the full pilotage for the distance run, until a duly licensed pilot shall be put on board, as if such pilot, or person respectively, had been actually on board such ship or vessel, and had the charge of her as a pilot."

Sect. 35. "From and after the passing of this act, all bodies politic and corporate, and all and every other person or persons, authorized to appoint or license pilots in or for any port of England, or any of the seas, coasts, harbours, or rivers thereof, or places therein, shall from time to time, as and when each appointment of a pilot shall be by them respectively made, forthwith transmit to the corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, at the Trinity House in London, and to the commissioners of his majesty's customs, at the Custom House in London, the christian and surname, age, and place of residence of every such pilot so appointed, distinguishing the limits within which such pilot is appointed to act, and by whom such appointment is made; and the said bodies politic and corporate, and other persons, authorized to appoint or license pilots as aforesaid, shall and they are hereby required to transmit to the said corporation of Trinity House, at the Trinity House aforesaid, and to the said commissioners of customs, at the Custom House aforesaid, annually, on the thirty-first day of December, or within one calendar month afterwards, a list, corrected up to the said thirty-first day of December in each year, of the names and residences of all the pilots within their several jurisdictions, in which list so to be transmitted to the Trinity House as aforesaid, shall be stated all such alterations (if any) as may have been made in the rates of pilotage charged, or in the rules and regulations for governing pilots within their respective districts."

Sect. 36. "And whereas by certain acts of parliament for the more effectual performance of quarantine, pilots are required, on going on board ships arriving from foreign parts, in certain cases to give information to the commanders thereof respecting proclamations and orders in council relative to the performance of quarantine, which renders it necessary that notice of such proclamations and orders should have been previously communicated to all pilots throughout England; be it further enacted, that the said commissioners of his majesty's customs shall from time to time with all convenient speed transmit to the principal officers of the revenue under their management, at the several ports in England, the names and places of residence of all such pilots of whose nomination they shall receive notice from the proper authority, or who shall be in the list so annually to be transmitted to such commissioners as aforesaid, as shall reside within the limits of each port respectively, in order that the said principal officers at the several ports may be enabled to communicate and deliver to every pilot within the limits of such ports respectively copies of all proclamations or orders in council respecting the performance of quarantine by ships arriving from infected places, which the said officers are hereby required to communicate accordingly."

Sect. 37. "The said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and the Court of Loadmanage of the Cinque Ports, and all other corporations and persons authorized to manage or direct pilots in any part of England, under the authority of any act of parliament or charter whatever, shall annually, on the first day of January in every year, or within one calendar month then next following, transmit to the office of the receiver of the sixpenny duty in the port of London a list of all the vessels of every description employed by them respectively, or by persons under their authority, for the purposes of pilotage, with the number of men and boys belonging to or serving in any such vessels."

Sect. 38. "No pilot shall be taken to sea beyond the limits of his district by the commanding officer of any of his majesty's ships, or by the master or other person having the command of any other ship or vessel whatever, without such pilot's free consent, except under circumstances of absolute and unavoidable necessity; and then and in such case every pilot so taken to sea shall over and above his pilotage have and receive ten shillings and sixpence per diem, to be computed from and inclusive of the day next after the day on which the ship or vessel shall pass the limit to which such pilot was engaged to pilot her up to, and until he shall be returned to the port or place where he was taken on board, or until he shall have been discharged from the ship for a sufficient time to have enabled him to return there."

Sect. 39. "All pilots whose licences shall authorize them to pilot ships or vessels from any place to the westward up to London Bridge, shall qualify themselves, and shall be examined as to their qualification and ability to conduct any ship or vessel into and out of Ramsgate Harbour, and the harbours of Dover, Sandwich, and Margate, and shall be obliged to pilot any ships or vessels into and out of any of the said harbours; and if any such pilot shall refuse to take charge of or conduct any ship or vessel into or out of any of the said harbours, such pilot shall forfeit all pay and reward to which he might otherwise have been entitled for the pilotage of any such

Sect. 40. "Every licensed pilot who shall take charge of and conduct any ship or vessel into or out of Ramsgate Harbour, or into or out of the harbours of Dover, Sandwich, or Margate, shall be entitled to and shall receive for such pilotage at and after the rate of five shillings for every foot of the draught of water of the ship or vessel so piloted and conducted by him into or out of any such harbours."

Sect. 41. "The master or other person commanding any ship or vessel bound to the river Thames, and which shall repair to Standgate Creek, or any other place appointed for the performance of quarantine, shall pay the full charges of pilotage up to Standgate creek, or other the place so appointed, and the pilot conducting such ship or vessel to Standgate creek, or other the place so appointed as aforesaid, shall be entitled to the further sum of eight shillings per diem for the days he shall be obliged to remain on quarantine."

Sect. 42. "If any pilot taking charge of any ship or vessel into the rivers Thames or Medway shall quit such ship or vessel at Gravesend or Standgate creek, or in any other part of the Thames or Medway respectively, before such ship or vessel shall have arrived at the place to which she is bound in the said rivers respectively, without the consent of the captain or other person having the command thereof, unless some other duly qualified pilot shall with such consent come on board, and shall take the charge and conduct of such ship or vessel for the residue of the pilotage to be performed, every such pilot so quitting such ship or vessel shall forfeit for every such offence all pay or reward to which he might be entitled for having conducted or piloted such ship or vessel to Gravesend, Standgate Creek, or such parts of the Thames or Medway respectively as aforesaid, and shall also be subject to such other penalty or punishment as by virtue of any of the provisions of this act, or of the bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, and ordinances, hereby directed to remain in force, or which may be made or established in pursuance hereof, any pilots shall be liable to for quitting a ship or vessel before she shall arrive at her place of destination."

Sect. 43. "Every pilot shall write his Christian and surname in the log-book of every master or other person having the command for the time being of any ship or vessel entering the port of London, and required to be piloted according to the directions of this act; and every pilot or other person inserting a false name shall forfeit the sum of 20*l.*; and the master or other person having the command of such ship or vessel shall, in making the entry or report of such ship or vessel inwards, insert or cause to be inserted in such entry or report, the name or names of the pilot or pilots employed or engaged to pilot such vessel into the said port, which insertion shall be made in the said entry or report (without fee or reward) by the proper officer of the customs, who shall report the same to the corporation of the Trinity House daily, and to the lord warden of the Cinque Ports monthly; and such officer is hereby authorized and required to reject such entry or report, unless and until the name or names of the pilot or pilots so employed or engaged as aforesaid shall be inserted or notified to such officer for insertion in such entry or report as aforesaid; and also that the principal searcher or clearing officer of the customs at Gravesend shall demand and take the name or names of the pilot or pilots of all ships or vessels clearing outwards from the port of London, and shall transmit monthly lists of such names to the said corporation of Trinity House, on pain of forfeiting a sum not exceeding 10*l.* nor less than 5*l.*, to be paid by each and every of the persons aforesaid, who shall neglect to comply with any of the foregoing regulations."

Sect. 44. "All sums of money which shall become due to any licensed pilot for the pilotage of any ship or vessel, except ships and vessels not having British registers, trading to and from the port of London, shall and may be recovered from the owners or masters of such ship or vessel, or from the consignees or agents thereof, who shall have paid or made themselves liable to pay any other charge for the said ship or vessel in the port of her arrival or delivery, as to pilotage inwards, and in the port from whence she shall clear out or sail as to pilotage outwards, which sums of money shall and may be levied in such and in the like manner, according to the amount of any such sums of money as aforesaid respectively, as any penalty or penalties of the like amount may be recovered and levied under and by virtue of this act, demand thereof being made in writing at least fourteen days before such levy."

Sect. 45. "The consignees or agents of any ship or vessel, from whom any sum of money due to any licensed pilot for pilotage shall have been recovered, or shall be recoverable, or by whom any such sum of money shall have been paid, are hereby authorized and empowered to retain in their hands respectively out of any monies which they may have received, or shall thereafter receive, for or on account of such ship or vessel, or the owner or owners thereof, so much as shall be sufficient to pay and discharge such pilotage, and any expenses attending the same."

Sect. 46. "And in order to prevent as well impositions and disputes respecting the charges for, as evasions in the payment of the pilotage of such ships and vessels trading to and from the port of London, and not having British registers, as are by law required to be piloted by pilots licensed by the said corporation of Trinity House, be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the master or other person having the charge of every such ship or vessel which shall enter into or sail from the said port of London, or the consignees of or agents for such ship or vessel, shall pay or cause to be paid at the Trinity House in London, to such person or persons as shall from time to time be in that behalf appointed by the said corporation of Trinity House, the full pilotage inwards and outwards respectively of every such ship or vessel; that is to say, in all cases as to pilotage outwards the full amount of pilotage for the distance which such ship or vessel shall by law be required to be piloted by such licensed pilot as aforesaid; and so far as concerns the pilotage inwards, where a duly licensed pilot shall have been on board such ship or vessel, the full amount of pilotage for the distance piloted by him, if greater than that which such ship or vessel shall be so required to be piloted; and if less, or if no such pilot shall have been on board, then the full amount of the pilotage for the distance which such ship or vessel shall be by law required to be piloted as aforesaid; and if such pilotage inwards be not paid within fourteen days from the day of such ship or vessel's reporting inwards, the same shall and may be recovered by the said corporation from the master or other person having the charge of every such ship or vessel, or from the consignees or agents thereof, who shall have paid or made themselves liable to pay any other charge for such ship or vessel in the said port of London, and shall and may be levied in such and the like manner, according to the amount of any such sums of money respectively, as any penalty or penalties may be recovered and levied under and by virtue of this act."

Sect. 47. "The person or persons so to be appointed by the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond as last aforesaid shall, upon his or their receiving such pilotage, give to the person paying the same a certificate thereof in writing, and that no ship or vessel not having a British register, and being required by law to be piloted as aforesaid, shall be cleared at the office of his majesty's customs in the said port of London, on her outward-bound voyage, without the production of such certificate as aforesaid; and the said person or persons so to be appointed as aforesaid shall, upon proof to the satisfaction of the said corporation that such pilotage service hath been duly performed, pay over to the pilot duly licensed, who shall have had charge of every such ship or vessel, all such sum or sums of money as shall have been received by such person or persons appointed as aforesaid, and as shall be due and payable to such pilot for or in respect of such pilotage service so by him performed, after deducting and retaining thereout the poundage hereinbefore made payable to the said corporation; and the residue of such pilotage received by such person or persons so appointed as aforesaid shall, together with the poundage aforesaid, be carried to and applied to the purposes of the pilots' fund of the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond hereinafter mentioned."

Sect. 48. "In any case where such pilotage shall have been received as aforesaid, for or in respect of any ship or vessel not having a British register, if it shall appear to the said corporation that no licensed pilot was in fact employed on board thereof, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said corporation, and they are hereby authorized, if they shall so think fit, out of such pilotage to make or give to any unlicensed person or persons who shall have piloted or assisted in piloting such ship or vessel during so long time as no licensed pilot shall to the knowledge of such unlicensed person or persons, have offered to take charge thereof, such compensation or reward as in the discretion of the said corporation they shall deem proper in that behalf, not exceeding the sum which would have been payable to a duly licensed pilot."

Sect. 49. "And in order the better to facilitate the ascertaining and settling the amount of the pilotage outward of ships and vessels not having British registers in the port of London, under the authority of this act, be it further enacted, that the rates or amount of pilotage outward, to be payable and paid in respect of all such ships and vessels, shall from time to time be calculated and made out according to the scale or amount of the tonnage of every such ship or vessel, upon or according to which such ship or vessel shall be rated in the said port of London, to the payment of the light and other dues payable to the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or according to the draught of water thereof, as the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond shall in their discretion think most proper; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 50. "And in order to prevent or settle controversies concerning the draught of water of ships and vessels from time to time on the river Thames, (not having British registers,) be it further enacted, that whenever any difference about the draught of water of any ship or vessel shall arise between the master or other person having the command of any such ship or vessel, and any person who shall have piloted the same into the said river, or who shall be required to pilot the same therefrom, pursuant to the directions of this act, the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or some proper officer or person appointed by them, shall admeasure the draught of water of such ship or vessel, and shall settle and determine the same between the parties, upon application made by either of them to the said corporation within twelve hours after such ship or vessel shall have arrived at her moorings in the river on any inward voyage, or before the cargo thereof shall be begun to be unladen, or before such ship or vessel shall quit her moorings on any outward voyage, for which admeasurement the officer or person making the same shall be paid one guinea if the ship or vessel shall be below the entrance to the London Docks at Wapping, and half a guinea if above the said entrance to the London Docks, by the person against whom the said officer or person so appointed by the corporation of the Trinity House shall decide."

Sect. 51. "And whereas it may be expedient from time to time to relieve such ships and vessels not having British registers as may come to the port of London with fish, corn, or other provisions, in manner hereinafter directed; be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and they are hereby authorized and empowered from time to time, at their discretion, to make all such regulations in relation to the piloting of ships not having British registers, bringing fish, corn, or other provisions into the port of London, and which are or ought to be piloted by pilots licensed by the said corporation of Trinity House, for the ease and relief of such ships and vessels in respect of the rates or amount of pilotage hereby made payable or demandable for such ships and vessels, or for the exemption of such ships or vessels from any such rates or amount, or from any rules or regulations as to the pilotage of such ships or vessels under the provisions of this act, or of any other act of parliament relating to pilotage, or under any law or usage whatsoever, as the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond shall from time to time deem just, proper, and expedient, in relation to such ships and vessels respectively; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 52. "And whereas under and by virtue of the said acts, passed in the forty-eighth and fifty-second years of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Third, the surplus rates of pilotage imposed on ships not having British registers have been applied in creating funds for the relief of superannuated and infirm pilots belonging to the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, and the fellowship of the Cinque Ports respectively, as in the said acts mentioned; and it is expedient that the surplus rates of pilotage imposed by this act on such ships should be carried to such funds respectively, and that the said funds should be applied as hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore enacted, that as well the fund already created for such superannuated and infirm pilots belonging to the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond as aforesaid, as also all such surplus rates by this act imposed or to be imposed as aforesaid, on ships not having British registers, which shall pertain to the establishment of the said corporation of Trinity House, shall be carried to a fund to be called 'The Pilots' Fund,' and that such last-mentioned fund shall be applied by the said corporation in the manner following; (that is to say,) after defraying the expenses of carrying this act into execution, so far as concerns the the said corporation of Trinity House, the said fund shall be applied by the said corporation for the better support, maintenance, or relief of such indigent pilots belonging to the said corporation, as shall become incapable of discharging their duty from advanced age, or from any accident or infirmity, and of the wives, widows, and children of such pilots, to be applied and distributed in such manner and under such rules and regulations as the said corporation of Trinity House shall order and provide; and that as well the fund already created for such superannuated and infirm pilots belonging to the society or fellowship of the Cinque Ports as aforesaid, as also all such surplus rates of pilotage by this act imposed or to be imposed as aforesaid on ships not having British registers, which shall pertain to the establishment of the Cinque Ports, shall be applied by the said Court of Loadmanage for the better support, maintenance, or relief of such indigent pilots belonging to the said society or fellowship as shall become incapable of discharging their duty from advanced age, or from any accident or infirmity, to be applied and distributed in such manner and under such rules and regulations as the said Court of Loadmanage shall order and provide; and as well all and every the pilots who shall receive any such surplus rates, as also the person or persons to whom the pilotage of ships and vessels not having British registers, and entering into or sailing from the said port of London, is by this act directed to be paid, shall and they are hereby required to pay over all such surplus rates to such receivers, and at such convenient places as shall be in that behalf respectively appointed by the said corporation of Trinity House, and by the said lord warden and Court of Loadmanage respectively; of all which receipts, and of the appropriations aforesaid, the said corporation, and the said lord warden and Court of Loadmanage respectively, shall annually lay an account before parliament, within twenty days after the commencement of each session."

Sect. 53. "No owner or master of any ship or vessel shall be answerable for any loss or damage which shall happen to any person or persons whatsoever, from or by reason or means of no licensed pilot being on board of any such ship or vessel, or of no duly qualified pilot being on board thereof, unless it shall be proved that the want of such licensed or of such duly qualified pilot respectively shall have arisen from any refusal to take such licensed or qualified pilot on board, or from the wilful neglect of the master of such ship or vessel in not heaving to, or using all practicable means, consistently with her safety, for the purpose of taking on board thereof any pilot who shall be ready and offer to take charge of the same."

Sect. 54. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to make the owner of any ship or vessel liable in any such case for any loss or damage beyond the value of such ship or vessel, and her appurtenances, and the freight due or to grow due for and during the voyage wherein such loss or damage may happen or arise."

Sect. 55. "No owner or master of any ship or vessel shall be answerable for any loss or damage which shall happen to any person or persons whomsoever from or by reason or means of any neglect, default, incompetency, or incapacity of any licensed pilot acting in the charge of any such ship or vessel, under or in pursuance of any of the provisions of this act, where and so long as such pilot shall be duly qualified to have the charge of such ship or vessel, or where and so long as no duly qualified pilot shall have offered to take charge thereof."

Sect. 56. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to deprive any person or persons of any remedy or remedies upon any contract of insurance, or of any other remedy whatsoever, which he or they might have had if this act had not been passed, by reason or on account of the neglect, default, incompetency, or incapacity of any pilot duly acting in the charge of any ship or vessel under or in pursuance of any of the provisions of this act, or by reason or on account of no pilot, or of no duly qualified pilot, being on board of any such ship or vessel, unless it shall be proved that the want of a pilot, or of a duly qualified pilot, shall have arisen from any refusal to take a pilot or a duly qualified pilot on board, or from the wilful neglect of the master of such ship or vessel, in not heaving to or using all practicable means consistently with the safety of such ship or vessel, for the purpose of taking on board any pilot who shall be ready and offer to take charge of such ship or vessel."

Sect. 57. "No pilot licensed or to be licensed as aforesaid, who shall have executed the bond hereinbefore directed to be executed by him, and shall be piloting or conducting, within the limits specified in his licence, any ship or vessel which he shall be duly qualified to pilot, or be piloting in the absence of a duly qualified pilot, shall be liable to any action for damages at the suit of the party grieved in any greater sum than the amount which shall have been specified by way of penalty in such bond, and the pilotage payable to him in respect of the voyage on which such ship or vessel shall then be, for any loss or damage which shall happen from or by reason or means of his neglect or want of skill whilst acting in his capacity of a pilot on board such ship or vessel."

Sect. 58. "Every master of any ship or vessel who shall act himself as a pilot, or who shall employ or continue employed as a pilot any unlicensed person, or any licensed person acting out of the limits for which he is qualified, or beyond the extent of his qualification, after any pilot licensed and qualified to act as such within the limits in which such ship or vessel shall then actually be, shall have offered to take charge of such ship or vessel, or have made a signal for that purpose, shall forfeit for every such offence double the amount of the sum which would have been legally demandable for the pilotage of such ship or vessel, and shall likewise forfeit for every such offence an additional penalty of 5*l.* for every fifty tons' burthen of such ship or vessel, if the corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, as to cases in which pilots licensed by or under the said corporation shall be concerned, or the said lord warden for the time being, or his lieutenant for the time being, as to cases in which the Cinque-Port pilot shall be concerned, shall think it proper that the person prosecuting should be at liberty to proceed for the recovery of such additional penalty, and certify the same in writing" (a).

(a) The master is not liable to the penalty for refusing to employ a pilot unless the pilot produces his licence as required by sect. 66, although it is not demanded. (Hammond v. Blake, 10 B. & Cres. 424.)

Sect. 59. "That, for and notwithstanding any thing in this act contained, the master of any collier, or of any ship or vessel trading to Norway, or to the Cattegat or Baltic, or round the North Cape, or into the White Sea, on their inward or outward voyages, or of any constant trader inwards, from the ports between Boulogne inclusive and the Baltic (all such ships and vessels having British registers, and coming up either by the North Channel, but not otherwise); or of any Irish trader using the navigation of the rivers Thames and Medway; or of any ship or vessel employed in the regular coasting trade of the kingdom; or of any ship or vessel wholly laden with stone from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, and being the production thereof; or of any ship or vessel not exceeding the burthen of sixty tons, and having a British register, except as hereinafter provided; or of any other ship or vessel whatever, whilst the same is within the limits of the port or place to which she belongs, the same not being a port or place in relation to which particular provision hath heretofore been made by any act or acts of Parliament, or by any charter or charters for the appointment of pilots, shall and may lawfully, and without being subject to any of the penalties by this act imposed, conduct or pilot his own ship or vessel when and so long as he shall conduct or pilot the same without the aid or assistance of any unlicensed pilot, or other person or persons, than the ordinary crew of the said ship or vessel."

Sect. 60. "From and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful for his majesty, by and with the advice of his privy council, or by any order or orders in council, to permit and authorize ships and vessels not exceeding the burthen of sixty tons, and not having a British register, to be piloted and conducted without having a duly licensed pilot on board, upon the same terms and conditions as are by this act imposed on British ships and vessels, not exceeding the like burthen."

Sect. 61. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to subject the master or owner of any ship or vessel to any of the penalties of this act, for employing any person or persons whomsoever as a pilot or pilots in and for the assistance of such ship or vessel whilst the same shall be in distress, or in consequence thereof, or under any circumstances which shall have rendered it necessary for such owner or master to avail himself of the best assistance which at the time could be procured; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 62. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to subject to any penalty the master or mate of any ship or vessel, being the owner or a part owner of such ship or vessel, and residing at Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet, for conducting or piloting such his own ship or vessel from any of the places aforesaid up or down the rivers Thames or Medway, or into or out of any port or place within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports."

Sect. 63. "When any ship or vessel shall have been brought into any port or ports in England by any pilot duly licensed, nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to subject to any penalty the master or mate, or other person belonging to such ship or vessel, and having the command thereof, or, if in ballast, any person or persons appointed by any owner, or master or agent of the owner thereof, for afterwards removing such ship or vessel in such port or ports, for the purpose of entering into or going out of any dock, or for changing the moorings of such ship or vessel."

Sect. 64. "Every master, or other person, having the command for the time being of any ship or vessel, who shall report, or be privy or consenting to any other person's reporting, to any pilot taking the charge of such ship or vessel a false account of the draught of water of such ship or vessel, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence, in addition to the payment of the full rate of pilotage to the pilot entitled thereto, double the amount of such pilotage; and any master or other person, having the command for the time being of any ship or vessel, or having any interest, share, or property therein, who shall fraudulently alter any marks on the stem or stern post thereof,

Sect. 65. "A particular description of the person of every pilot shall be written in or upon or endorsed on the back of his licence; and every captain or master or other person having the command of a ship or vessel shall, on receiving a pilot on board, inspect his licence; and if he shall have reason to think that such pilot is not the person to whom the licence was granted, such captain or master or other person is hereby required forthwith to transmit a copy of such licence to the corporation or other authority by whom such licence shall have been granted, stating the date thereof, together with such account and description of the person producing such licence as may lead to the discovery of the offender."

Sect. 66. "No person shall take charge of any ship or vessel, or in any manner act as a pilot, or receive any compensation for acting as a pilot, until his licence shall have been registered by the principal officers of the custom house of the place at or nearest to which such pilot shall reside, (which officers are hereby required to register the same without fee or reward), nor without having his licence at the time of his so acting in his personal custody, and producing the same to the master of any ship or vessel, or other person who shall be desirous of employing him as a pilot, or to whom he shall offer his services, on pain of forfeiting a sum not exceeding 30*l*., nor less than 10*l*., for the first offence; and for the second or any subsequent offence, a sum not exceeding 50*l*., nor less than 30*l*.; and upon further pain, as to any person licensed as aforesaid, of forfeiting his licence or being suspended from acting as a pilot, by and at the discretion of the corporation or other authority from which such pilot's licence was derived, either for the first, second, or any subsequent offence."

Sect. 67. "Every pilot, licensed or to be licensed as aforesaid, shall, at all times when thereunto required, produce or deliver and yield up his licence to the corporation or other authority by which the same was granted; and that on the death of any such pilot, his executors or administrators, or one of them, or the person or persons to whose hands the licence of such deceased pilot shall come, shall without wilful delay transmit such licence to the corporation or other authority by which the same was granted, on pain of such pilot, executor, administrator, or other person, forfeiting for any neglect therein, a sum not exceeding 20*l*. nor less than 40*s*."

Sect. 68. "From and after the passing of this act, if any pilot, licensed by virtue of this act, or otherwise duly licensed, shall keep, or be concerned in keeping, either by himself or any agent or servant, or other person, or shall in any way be interested in the keeping of any public house or tavern or place of public entertainment, or in the selling of any wine or spirituous liquors, or tobacco or tea (unless such pilot shall have kept or been concerned or interested in the same before the 1st day of March, 1808, and shall be duly authorized by the corporation, or other authority under which such pilot shall act, to continue in such business or employment; or if any pilot, licensed as aforesaid, shall be convicted of any offence against any law or laws relating to the revenues of customs or excise, or shall be concerned in or shall wilfully connive at any indirect practices or frauds against the revenues of customs or excise, or shall procure, abet, connive at, or participate in, any destruction, spoil, or concealment, fraud, exaction, or corrupt practice, relating to ships or vessels, or persons in distress at sea, or by shipwreck, or relating to the tackle, apparel, or furniture, or the cargoes of such ships or vessels, or relating to the crew or passengers belonging thereto, or the monies, goods, or chattels of any of them, then and in every such case every pilot shall (over and above all other punishments, mulcts, and penalties for such offences), be adjudged to forfeit his licence, or shall be suspended from acting as a pilot, by and at the discretion of the corporation or other authority from which such pilot's licence was derived."

Sect. 69. "If any person, suspended or adjudged to have forfeited his licence as a pilot, shall, during the time of such suspension, or after such adjudication, take upon himself to conduct any ship or vessel as a pilot, such person shall be liable to all such penalties, to be recovered and applied in like manner and form as are provided by this act, against any person who shall pilot or conduct any ship or vessel without ever having been licensed as a pilot."

Sect. 70. "It shall be lawful for any licensed pilot within the limits of his licence, and the extent of his qualification therein expressed, to supersede in the charge of any ship or vessel any person not licensed to act as a pilot, or not licensed so to act within such limits, or acting beyond the extent of his qualification; and every person assuming or continuing in the charge or conduct of any ship or vessel, without being a duly licensed pilot, or without being duly licensed to act as a pilot within the limits in which such ship or vessel shall actually be, or beyond the extent of his qualification, as expressed in his licence, after any pilot, duly licensed and qualified to act in the premises, shall have offered to take charge of such ship or vessel, shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding fifty pounds nor less than twenty pounds."

Sect. 71. "For and notwithstanding any thing in this act contained, any person whatsoever shall and may lawfully, and without being subject to any penalty by this act imposed, assume, or continue in the charge or conduct of any ship or vessel as a pilot, where and so long as a pilot duly licensed and qualified shall not have offered to take the charge of such ship or vessel, or made a signal for that purpose, or where and so long as such ship or vessel shall be in distress, or under circumstances which shall have rendered it necessary for the master of such ship or vessel to avail himself of the best assistance which at the time could be procured."

Sect. 72. "Every pilot licensed or to be licensed as aforesaid, who shall, when not actually engaged in his capacity of pilot, refuse or decline or wilfully delay to go off to or on board of or to take charge of any ship or vessel wanting a pilot, and within the limits specified in his licence, and of which he shall be qualified to take charge, upon the usual signal for a pilot being displayed from such ship or vessel, or upon being required so to do by the captain, or by any commissioned or warrant officer of or belonging to such ship or vessel (if the same shall be in his majesty's service), or by the master or other person having the command of such ship or vessel, or by any person or persons interested therein as principal or agent (if the same shall not be in his majesty's service), or upon being required so to do in either of the cases aforesaid, by any officer of the corporation or society to which such pilot shall belong, or by any principal officer of his majesty's customs (unless in any of the cases aforesaid), it shall be unsafe for such pilot to obey such signal, or comply with such requisition, or he shall be prevented from so doing by illness or other sufficient cause to be shown by him in that behalf; and every pilot licensed or to be licensed as aforesaid, who shall on any frivolous pretext quit any ship or vessel, or decline the piloting thereof, after he has been engaged to pilot the same, or after going alongside thereof, before the service shall have been performed for which he was hired, and without leave of the captain of such ship or vessel (if in his majesty's service), or of the master or other person having the command of such ship or vessel (if not in his majesty's service), shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding one hundred pounds, nor less than ten pounds, and shall be liable to be dismissed from being a pilot, or suspended from acting as such, at the discretion of the corporation or other authority by whom such pilot was licensed."

Sect. 73. "In case any pilot, licensed or to be licensed as aforesaid, shall employ or make use of, or shall compel or require any person having the command or charge of any ship or vessel, to employ or make use of any boat, anchor, cable, hawser, or any other matter or thing in or for the service or pretended service of such ship or vessel beyond what shall actually and bonâ fide be necessary and proper for the use thereof, with intent thereby to enhance or increase the charge or expense of pilotage or pilot assistance of such ship or vessel, whether for the gain and emolument of such pilot, or for the gain or emolument of any other person or persons whomsoever, then and in every such case the person so offending shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding fifty pounds, nor less than ten pounds, and shall also be liable to be deprived of his licence, or suspended from acting as a pilot, at the discretion of the corporation or other authority by whom he was licensed."

Sect. 74. "In case any pilot, licensed or to be licensed as aforesaid, shall lend his licence to any unlicensed person to assist him in acting or claiming to act as a licensed pilot, or in case any such licensed pilot, or any person not being a pilot, but acting under pretext or colour of being a pilot, shall by drunkenness render himself incapable of conducting any ship or vessel, or shall wilfully or negligently run any ship or vessel on shore, or lose or injure the same, or the tackle or furniture thereof, or shall wilfully and knowingly conduct, lead, decoy, or betray any ship or vessel into danger in any manner not already provided against by any statute or statutes, or shall unnecessarily or improperly cut any cable or cables of or belonging to any ship or vessel, or cause or procure the same to be cut unnecessarily and improperly; or if any such person shall by wilful misrepresentation of any circumstances upon which the safety of any ship or vessel shall appear materially to depend, for the time being, obtain or endeavour to obtain the charge and conduct of any such ship or vessel, then and in every such case the person so offending, or who shall aid in, procure, abet, or connive at the committing of any such offence or offences, shall, besides being liable to damages at the suit of the party grieved, forfeit, and pay a sum not exceeding one hundred pounds nor less than twenty pounds; and if the person so offending shall be a pilot, he shall also be liable to be deprived of his licence, or suspended from acting as a pilot at the discretion of the corporation or other authority by whom his licence was granted."

Sect. 75. "And whereas the dock master or dock masters appointed by divers dock companies in the port of London, under and by virtue of divers acts of parliament, have power and authority to direct the mooring and unmooring, moving or removing of ships and other vessels, within certain distances from the entrances out of the river Thames into the docks of such companies respectively; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, if any pilot having the charge or direction of any ship or vessel within such distances from the respective entrances into the said docks respectively from the river Thames, and either intended to go into or having recently come out of the docks of the said companies respectively, shall neglect or refuse to obey such orders or directions as shall or may from time to time be given to such pilot by the said dock master or dock masters respectively, under and by virtue of and agreeably to the powers vested in him and them by any act or acts of parliament, touching or relating to the mooring, unmooring, moving, or removing of such ships or vessels so being under the charge or direction of such pilot as aforesaid, then and in every such case, every pilot so offending shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding fifty pounds, nor less than twenty pounds; and every such pilot shall be liable to be dismissed from being a pilot, or suspended from acting as such, at the discretion of the corporation, or other authority by whom such pilot was licensed."

Sect. 76. "All fines, penalties, or forfeitures hereinbefore or hereinafter imposed by this act, or by any of the bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, or ordinances hereby directed to remain in force, or hereafter to be made under the authority of this act, which shall exceed the sum of twenty pounds (the manner of levying whereof shall not by this act be otherwise expressly provided for), and likewise all fines, penalties, or forfeitures imposed as aforesaid (the manner of levying which shall not by this act be otherwise expressly provided for), in cases where the lowest penalty recoverable not being greater than twenty pounds, and the largest penalty recoverable being greater than twenty pounds, the party prosecuting shall proceed in respect thereof for a sum greater than twenty pounds, with the written consent of the corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or of the said lord warden or his lieutenant for the time being respectively (as the case may be), shall and may be recovered with full costs of suit, by action of debt, bill, plaint or information in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, to be commenced within twelve calendar months next after such offence or offences shall be committed, or within such other time as is hereinafter in that behalf directed; the venue in which said action, bill, plaint, or information shall and may, at the option of the plaintiff or informant, be laid, and the said action, bill, plaint, or information tried either in the county of Middlesex or the City of London, or else in such county or place wherein the offence or offences shall have been committed, and no essoign, protection, wager of law, or any more than one imparlance, shall be allowed; and in any such case or cases it shall be lawful to sue for the largest penalty or penalties recoverable in that behalf, and the jury giving the verdict shall and may award either such largest penalty or penalties, or any other smaller sum or sums of money, not less than the sum specified as the lowest penalty recoverable in that behalf."

Sect. 77. "All fines, penalties, or forfeitures hereinbefore or hereinafter imposed by this act, or by any of the bye-laws, rules, orders, regulations, or ordinances hereby directed to remain in force, or hereafter to be made under the authority of this act, and which shall not exceed twenty pounds, (the manner of levying whereof shall not by this act be otherwise expressly provided for); and likewise all fines, penalties, or forfeitures imposed as aforesaid (the manner of levying which shall not by this act be otherwise expressly provided for), in cases where the lowest penalty recoverable, not being greater than twenty pounds, and the largest penalty recoverable being greater than twenty pounds, the party prosecuting shall proceed in respect thereof for any sum not exceeding twenty pounds, with such written consent as aforesaid, shall and may be levied and recovered within six calendar months after the offence or offences committed, or within such other times as is hereinafter in that behalf directed, before any justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, division, or place where the offence or offences shall be committed; or if committed by any pilot, then before any justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, division, or place aforesaid, or before any justice or justices of the peace, or any magistrate or magistrates of the city, town, or port to which such pilot shall belong; or if committed by any owner or master of any ship or vessel, before any justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, division, or place where the offence or offences shall have been committed, or before any justice or justices of the peace, or any magistrate or magistrates of the county, city, town, or port at which such owner or master shall reside, or to which the ship of such owner or master shall belong; or if committed on any part of the sea from Orfordness to the mouth of the river Thames, or from Dungeness to the mouth of the river Thames, or upon the rivers Thames or Medway, then only before some justice or justices of the peace of the counties of Kent, Surrey, Essex, or Middlesex, or before some magistrate or magistrates of the City of London; and all and every the justice and justices, magistrate and magistrates aforesaid, is and are hereby empowered and required, upon complaint to him or them made, to grant a warrant to bring before him or them such offender or offenders at the time or place in such warrant specified; and if on conviction of the offender or offenders respectively on his, her, or their confession, or on the evidence of any one or more credible witness or witnesses upon oath, (which oath such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, is and are hereby empowered to administer), such fine, penalty, or forfeiture shall not be forthwith paid, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, to levy the penalty by distress, and for want of distress to commit every such offender or offenders to the common gaol or house of correction for the county, city, or place where such offender or offenders shall be convicted, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any time not exceeding six calendar months, nor less than twenty-one days, unless such fine, penalty, or forfeiture, and all reasonable charges attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner paid :

provided always, that in case the said respective periods of twelve calendar months and six calendar months, or either of them, within which fines, penalties, or forfeitures are to be sued for as aforesaid, shall in any case or cases elapse and run out before any action or prosecution hereby authorized and directed shall have been commenced for the recovery of such fines, penalties, or forfeitures; and if it shall in manner hereinafter mentioned be made to appear, as soon after the circumstances of the case shall reasonably admit, that the commencement of the action or prosecution has been delayed by reason of the absence of any party or parties whether offending or complaining, or by the absence of any necessary witness or witnesses, then upon such circumstances being stated by affidavit in writing, made before any judge of any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, it shall thereupon be lawful for any such judge or judges to order or authorize the commencement of such action or prosecution within such further time as such judge shall think fit to limit in that behalf; and in such case the action or actions, prosecution or prosecutions so ordered or authorized shall and may be commenced and prosecuted within the time or respective times so limited, in like manner and with the like effect in all respects as if such prosecutions had been commenced and prosecuted within the said respective periods of twelve months and six months hereby limited."

Justice of any county into which an offender may escape, may endorse the original warrant, which shall authorize the peace officers to execute it.

Sect. 78. "In case any person against whom a warrant shall be issued by any justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, before or after any conviction for any offence against this act, shall escape, go into, or reside, or be in any other county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place not within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates granting such warrant, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace of the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place into which such person shall escape, either before or after conviction, and they and every of them are hereby required upon proof made upon oath of the hand-writing of any justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, granting such warrant, to endorse his or their name or names on such warrant, and the same when so endorsed shall be sufficient authority to all peace officers to execute such warrant in such other county, riding, division, city, town, or place, out of the jurisdiction of the justice or justices granting the said warrant; and any justice or justices respectively, on the offender being apprehended and brought before him or them, within their respective jurisdictions, may proceed to hear and determine the complaint, in the same manner as if it had originally arisen within his or their respective jurisdictions, or may direct the offender to be carried, and such offender shall accordingly, in that case, be carried to or before the justice or justices who granted the original warrant, to be dealt with according to law."

Witnesses not appearing may be committed to the house of correction.

Sect. 79. "If any person who shall be summoned as a witness upon any complaint or information before any justice or justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates, shall refuse or neglect to appear at the time by such summons appointed, having no just cause for such neglect or refusal, it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, on proof of such summons having been served, and of a tender of reasonable expenses having been made to such person on his being served with such summons, to issue a warrant, under his hand and seal or their hands and seals, to bring such person before him or them; and if on appearance, or on being brought before any justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, such person shall refuse to be examined on oath concerning the premises, without having some just cause for such refusal, it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, by warrant under his hand and seal, or their hands and seals, to commit such person to the house of correction of the county, city, division, or place where any such person shall be apprehended, there to remain for any time not exceeding six weeks, nor less than ten days, as any such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, shall direct."

Sect. 80. "Every person who in any examination upon oath, under the provisions of this act, shall wilfully give false testimony, or a false account of the matter sworn to by such person, shall be liable to be prosecuted for the same by indictment, and if duly convicted of false swearing in the premises, shall be subject and liable to such punishments, disqualifications, and disabilities, as any person would be subject or liable to for wilful and corrupt perjury, in any other case by the laws and statutes of the realm."

Sect. 81. "And for the more easy and speedy conviction of offenders against this act, be it further enacted, that all and every justice and justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates, before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against this act, or against any bye-law, rule, regulation, or order hereby directed to remain in force, or hereafter to be made under the authority hereof, shall and may cause the conviction to be drawn up according to the following form, or in words to the like effect; videlicet,

'Be it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , A. B. is convicted before me [or us], one [or two, as the case may be] of his majesty's justices of the peace for the [here specify the offence, and the time and place when and where committed, as the case may be,] contrary to an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled [here insert the title of this act], and I [or, we] do adjudge that the said [insert the offender's name] hath therefore forfeited the sum of [here insert the penalty]. Given under my hand and seal [or, our hands and seals] the day and year first above written.'

And no certiorari, or other writ or process for the removal of any such conviction or any proceedings thereon, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, shall be allowed or granted."

Sect. 82. "It shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons so convicted by any justice or justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates before mentioned, of any offence or offences against this act, or against any bye-law, rule, order, regulation, or ordinance hereby directed to remain in force, or hereafter to be made under the authority hereof, within three calendar months next after such conviction, to appeal to the justices of the peace assembled at the general quarter sessions holden for the county, city, or place where the matter of appeal shall arise, first giving ten days' notice of such appeal to the person or persons appealed against, and of the matter thereof, and within fourteen days next after such notice entering into a recognizance before some justice of the peace for such county, city, or place, with sufficient sureties conditioned to try such appeal, and for abiding the determination of the court therein; and such justices so assembled shall, upon due proof of such notice having been given, and recognizance entered into, hear and determine the matter of such appeal, and may either confirm or quash and annul the said conviction, and award such costs to either party as to them shall seem just and reasonable (and the decision of the said justices therein shall be final, binding, and conclusive); and no proceeding to be had or taken in pursuance of this act shall be quashed or vacated for want of form only, or be removed by certiorari or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster or elsewhere; any law or statute to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 83. "One-third of all fines or penalties to be levied in pursuance of this act, or under any bye-law, rule, order, regulation, or ordinance hereby directed to remain in force, or hereafter to be made under the authority of this act, by whomsoever incurred, (save and except such fines or penalties, the application whereof shall by this act be otherwise expressly provided for), shall go to the person who shall inform or sue for the same, and the remainder of all such fines or penalties shall be carried to and applied to the purposes of the said fund belonging to the said corporation of Trinity House, called the Pilots' Fund, in case such fines or penalties shall be incurred by pilots licensed by the said corporation, or by any person or persons in relation to any matters wherein such last-mentioned pilots shall be in anywise concerned; and in case such fines or penalties shall be incurred by pilots belonging to the fellowship of the Cinque Ports, or by pilots under any other jurisdictions or authorities, or by any other person or persons in relation to any matters wherein such pilots respectively shall be in anywise concerned, then the remaining two-thirds of such last-mentioned fines or penalties shall be carried to and applied to the purposes of such fund as hath been or shall be created for the relief of such indigent pilots belonging to the said fellowship, or such other jurisdictions or authorities respectively, as shall become incapable of discharging their duty from advanced age, or from any accident or infirmity."

Sect. 84. "If any suit or action shall be brought or prosecuted against any person or persons for anything done or to be done in pursuance of this act, in every such case the action or suit shall be commenced within six calendar months next after the fact committed, and not otherwise, and shall be laid or brought in the county, city, or place where the cause of action arises, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in such action or suit may plead the general issue not guilty, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if it shall appear so to be done, or if any such action or suit shall be brought after the time limited for bringing the same, then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; and if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuited, or suffer a discontinuance of his or their action or actions, or if a verdict shall pass against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall have treble costs, and shall have such remedy for the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have for costs of suit in other cases of law."

Sect. 85. "All acts of parliament, and all clauses, provisions, powers, authorities, regulations, penalties, and forfeitures contained in any act, which in any manner relate to the regulation of pilots or pilotage within any river, port, or harbour, or within any local limits specified in any such act, clause, or provision, and in which any reference is made to the said acts passed in the forty-eighth and fifty-second years of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Third as aforesaid, or either of them, or in any manner apply thereto, or vary or alter any of the provisions thereof as to pilots or pilotage within any such limits, shall continue in full force notwithstanding the repeal of the said acts of the forty-eighth and fifty-second years aforesaid, and shall be deemed to refer and apply to this act, and shall be so construed as if the same were particularly referred to in this act; any thing in this act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 86. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to any ships or vessels belonging to his majesty, his heirs and successors, as to their being compelled to take pilots on board."

Sect. 87. "Nothing herein contained shall extend to affect or impede the jurisdiction of the court of Loadmanage, as far as respects the pilots appointed under the authority of the said court; and provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to affect or impair the jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty."

Sect. 88. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prejudice or take away any right, property, authority, or jurisdiction of the mayor of the City of London, or of the mayor and commonalty and citizens of the City of London, to, in, and upon the river Thames aforesaid."

Sect. 89. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the taking away, abridging, defeating, impeaching, or interrupting of any grants, liberties, franchises, or privileges heretofore granted by any charters or acts of parliament to the pilots of the Trinity House of the town of Kingston-upon-Hull, or the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, or to give any authority to the corporation of the Trinity House of Deptford Strond, within any ports or districts having separate jurisdictions in matters of pilotage, under any act of parliament or charter, or to alter or repeal any provisions contained in any act or acts of parliament relating to the pilots of any ports or districts in relation to which particular provision shall have been made in any act or acts of parliament as to the pilots or pilotage, or to the pilotage within the limits prescribed by any act or acts of parliament relating to pilotage for such ports, or to the burthen of vessels navigating to or from such ports."

Sect. 90. "All provisions, clauses, penalties, and forfeitures, contained in an act passed in the eighth year of the reign of queen Elizabeth, or any other act or acts made and in force for the preservation of sea-marks and beacons, shall extend and be construed to extend to all vessels duly appointed to exhibit lights therein for the preservation of ships and vessels at sea, and to all persons removing, injuring, or destroying such vessels or lights, which offences may be laid and tried in any county in England."

Sect. 91. "Every person who shall ride by, make fast to, or remove, or wilfully run down, or run foul of any vessel, appointed or placed to exhibit lights, or any buoy or beacon belonging to the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or belonging to or placed by any other corporation having lawful authority to place the same, shall, besides being liable to the expense of replacing or making good any damage occasioned thereby, forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding 50*l.*, nor less than 10*l.*, to be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in which no essoign, protection, privilege, wager of law, or more than one imparlance shall be granted or allowed; one-third of which said penalty shall go to the persons who shall inform or sue for the same, and the remainder of which said penalty shall go to the said corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or other the corporation to which such vessel, buoy, or beacon shall belong, or by which the same shall have been placed as aforesaid, as the case may be, to be applied to the charitable purposes of the said corporations respectively."

Sect. 92. "This act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such, by all judges, justices, and others, without being specially pleaded."

Sect. 93. "This act may be altered, amended, or repealed by any act or acts to be passed in this present session of parliament."

IX. The Navigation Act.

- 3 & 4 Wil. 4, c. 54. By the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 54, intituled "An Act for the Encouragement of British Shipping and Navigation," [28th August 1833,] reciting, "Whereas an act was passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late majesty, king George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for the Encouragement of British Shipping and Navigation,' whereby the laws for the encouragement of British shipping and navigation were consolidated and amended: and whereas since the passing of the said act divers acts for the further amendment of the law have been found necessary, and it will be of advantage to the trade and commerce of the country that the said acts should be consolidated into one act;" it is enacted, "that this act shall commence upon the 1st day of September, 1833, except where any other commencement is herein particularly directed."
- 6 Geo. 4, c. 109. Commencement of act.
- Ships in which only enumerated goods of Europe may be imported. Sect. 2. "The several sorts of goods hereinafter enumerated, being the produce of Europe; (that is to say,) masts, timber, boards, tar, tallow, hemp, flax, currants, raisins, figs, prunes, olive oil, corn or grain, wine, brandy, tobacco, wool, shumac, madders, madder roots, barilla, brimstone, bark of oak, cork, oranges, lemons, linseed, rape seed, and clover seed, shall not be imported into the United Kingdom to be used therein, except in British ships, or in ships of the country of which the goods are the produce, or in ships of the country from which the goods are imported."
- Places from which only goods of Asia, Africa, or America may be imported. Sect. 3. "Goods, the produce of Asia, Africa, and America, shall not be imported from Europe into the United Kingdom, to be used therein, except the goods hereinafter mentioned: (that is to say,)
 'Goods the produce of the dominions of the emperor of Morocco which may be imported from places in Europe within the Straits of Gibraltar:
 'Goods, the produce of Asia or Africa, which (having been brought into places in Europe within the Straits of Gibraltar, from or through places in Asia or Africa within those Straits, and not by way of the Atlantic Ocean) may be imported from places in Europe within the Straits of Gibraltar.
 'Goods, the produce of places within the limits of the East India company's charter, which (having been imported from those places into Gibraltar or Malta in British ships) may be imported from Gibraltar or Malta:
 'Goods taken by way of reprisal by British ships:
 'Bullion, diamonds, pearls, rubies, emeralds, and other jewels or precious stones.'"
- Ships in which only goods of Asia, Africa, or America may be imported. Sect. 4. "Goods, the produce of Asia, Africa, or America, shall not be imported into the United Kingdom, to be used therein, in foreign ships, unless they be the ships of the country in Asia, Africa, or America, of which the goods are the produce, and from which they are imported, except the goods hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,)
 'Goods, the produce of the dominions of the Grand Seigneur, in Asia or Africa, which may be imported from his dominions in Europe, in ships of his dominions:
 'Raw silk and mohair yarn, the produce of Asia, which may be imported from the dominions of the Grand Seigneur in the Levant Seas, in ships of his dominions.
 'Bullion.'"
- Manufacture deemed produce. From Guernsey, &c. Sect. 5. "Provided that all manufactured goods shall be deemed to be the produce of the country of which they are the manufacture."
 Sect. 6. "No goods shall be imported into the United Kingdom from the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, except in British ships."
- Exports to Asia, &c., and to Guernsey, &c. Sect. 7. "No goods shall be exported from the United Kingdom to any British possession in Asia, Africa, or America, nor to the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, except in British ships."

Sect. 8. "No goods shall be carried coastwise from one part of the United Kingdom to another, except in British ships."

Sect. 9. "No goods shall be carried from any of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, to any other of such islands, nor from one part of any of such islands to another part of the same island, except in British ships."

Sect. 10. "No goods shall be carried from any British possession in Asia, Africa, or America, to any other of such possessions, nor from one part of any of such possessions to another part of the same, except in British ships."

Sect. 11. "No goods shall be imported into any British possession in Asia, Africa, or America, in any foreign ships, unless they be the ships of the country of which the goods are the produce, and from which the goods are imported."

Sect. 12. "No ship shall be admitted to be a British ship unless duly registered and navigated as such; and that every British registered ship (so long as the registry of such ship shall be in force, or the certificate of such registry retained for the use of such ship) shall be navigated during the whole of every voyage, (whether with a cargo or in ballast), in every part of the world, by a master who is a British subject, and by a crew, whereof three fourths at least are British seamen; and if such ship be employed in a coasting voyage from one part of the United Kingdom to another, or in a voyage between the United Kingdom and the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, or from one of the said islands to another of them, or from one part of either of them to another of the same, or be employed in fishing on the coasts of the United Kingdom or of any of the said islands, then the whole of the crew shall be British seamen."

Sect. 13. "Provided that all British-built boats or vessels under fifteen tons' burthen, wholly owned and navigated by British subjects, although not registered as British ships, shall be admitted to be British vessels, in all navigation in the rivers and upon the coasts of the United Kingdom, or of the British possessions abroad, and not proceeding over sea, except within the limits of the respective colonial governments within which the managing owners of such vessels respectively reside; and that all British-built boats or vessels wholly owned and navigated by British subjects, not exceeding the burthen of thirty tons, and not having a whole or a fixed deck, and being employed solely in fishing on the banks and shores of Newfoundland, and of the parts adjacent, or on the banks and shores of the provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, or New Brunswick, adjacent to the gulf of St. Lawrence, or on the north of Cape Canso, or of the islands within the same, or in trading coastwise within the said limits, shall be admitted to be British boats or vessels, although not registered, so long as such boats or vessels shall be solely so employed."

Sect. 14. Provided that "all ships built in the British settlements at Honduras, and owned and navigated as British ships, shall be entitled to the privileges of British registered ships in all direct trade between the United Kingdom or the British possessions in America and the said settlements; provided the master shall produce a certificate under the hand of the superintendent of those settlements, that satisfactory proof has been made before him that such ship (describing the same) was built in the said settlements, and is wholly owned by British subjects; provided also, that the time of the clearance of such ship from the said settlements for every voyage shall be endorsed upon such certificate by such superintendent."

Sect. 15. "No ship shall be admitted to be a ship of any particular country, unless she be of the built of such country; or have been made prize of war to such country; or have been forfeited to such country under any law of the same, made for the prevention of the slave trade, and condemned as such prize or forfeiture by a competent court of such country; or be British built (not having been a prize of war from British subjects to any other foreign country); nor unless she be navigated by a master who is a subject of such foreign country, and by a crew of whom three-fourths at least are subjects of such country; nor unless she be wholly owned by subjects of such country usually residing therein, or under the dominion thereof: provided always, that the country of every ship shall be deemed to include all places which are under the same dominion as the place to which such ship belongs."

Sect. 16. "No person shall be qualified to be a master of a British ship, or to be a British seaman within the meaning of this act, except the natural-born subjects of his majesty, or persons naturalized by any act of parliament, or made denizens by letters of denization; or except persons who have become British subjects by virtue of conquest or cession of some newly acquired country, and who shall have taken the oath of allegiance to his majesty, or the oath of fidelity required by the treaty or capitulation by which such newly acquired country came into his majesty's possession; or persons who shall have served on board any of his majesty's ships of war in time of war for the space of three years: provided always, that the natives of places within the limits of the East India Company's charter, although under British dominion, shall not, upon the ground of being such natives, be deemed to be British seamen: provided always, that every ship (except ships required to be wholly navigated by British seamen) which shall be navigated by one British seaman, if a British ship, or one seamen of the country of such ship, if a foreign ship, for every twenty tons of the burthen of such ship, shall be deemed to be duly navigated, although the number of other seamen shall exceed one fourth of the whole crew: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to repeal or alter the provisions of an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for consolidating and amending the laws then in force with respect to trade from and to places within the limits of the East India Company's charter."

Sect. 17. Provided that "it shall be lawful for his majesty, by his royal proclamation during war, to declare that foreigners, having served two years on board any of his majesty's ships of war in time of such war, shall be British seamen within the meaning of this act."

Sect. 18. "No British registered ship shall be suffered to depart any port in the United Kingdom, or any British possession in any part of the world (whether with a cargo or in ballast), unless duly navigated: provided always, that any British ships, trading between places in America, may be navigated by British negroes, and that ships trading eastward of the Cape of Good Hope within the limits of the East India Company's charter may be navigated by Lascars, or other natives of countries within those limits."

Sect. 19. "If any British registered ship shall at any time have, as part of the crew in any part of the world, any foreign seamen not allowed by law, the master or owners of such ship shall for every such foreign seaman forfeit the sum of 10*l.*: provided always, that if a due proportion of British seamen cannot be procured in any foreign port, or in any place within the limits of the East India Company's charter, for the navigation of any British ship; or if such proportion be destroyed during the voyage by any unavoidable circumstance, and the master of such ship shall produce a certificate of such facts under the hand of any British consul, or of two known British merchants, if there be no consul at the place where such facts can be ascertained, or from the British governor of any place within the limits of the East India Company's charter; or, in the want of such certificate, shall make proof of the truth of such facts to the satisfaction of the collector and controller of the customs of any British port, or of any person authorized in any other part of the world to inquire into the navigation of such ship, the same shall be deemed to be duly navigated."

Sect. 20. "If his majesty shall, at any time by his royal proclamation, declare that the proportion of British seamen necessary to the due navigation of British ships shall be less than the proportion required by this act, every British ship navigated with the proportion of British seamen required by such proclamation shall be deemed to be duly navigated, so long as such proclamation shall remain in force."

Sect. 21. Provided that "goods of any sort or the produce of any place, not otherwise prohibited than by the law of navigation hereinbefore contained, may be imported into the United Kingdom from any place in a British ship, and from any place not being a British possession in a foreign ship of any country, and however navigated, to be warehoused for exportation only, under the provisions of any law in force for the time being, made for the warehousing of goods without payment of duty upon the first entry thereof."

Sect. 22. "If any goods be imported, exported, or carried coastwise, contrary to the law of navigation, all such goods shall be forfeited, and the master of such ship shall forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 23. "All penalties and forfeitures incurred under this act shall be sued for, prosecuted, recovered, and disposed of, or shall be mitigated or restored, in like manner as any penalty or forfeiture can be sued for, prosecuted, recovered, and disposed of, or may be mitigated or restored, under an act passed in the present session of parliament for the prevention of smuggling."

Act may be altered this session.

X. Cordage for Shipping.

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 56, s. 2, no person after the 25th July, 1785, shall use, in the making of cables, hawsers, or other ropes for the use of shipping, or knowingly sell the same, in the manufacturing whereof there shall be used any hemp, usually known by the name of short chucking, half clean, whale line, or other toppings, cordilla, damaged hemp bought at a public or other sales, or any hemp from which the staple part thereof shall have been taken away by the manufacturer, on pain of forfeiting (if he be the manufacturer thereof) such cable, hawser, or other rope, and treble the value thereof; and the vender thereof, knowingly, (and not being the manufacturer,) shall forfeit treble the value thereof.

25 Geo. 3, c. 56.

Short chucking, &c. not be used in making cordage for shipping.

By sect. 3 & 4, for better distinguishing the quality of such cables, &c. whenever the same shall be manufactured in whole or in part of any hemp, the use whereof is not prohibited by this act, and the quality whereof shall be inferior to clean Petersburg hemp, the same shall be deemed inferior cordage, and the maker shall distinguish the same by running from end to end of each cable three tarred mark-yarns, spun with turn contrary to that of rope yarn, and also one like tarred yarn in every other rope for the use of shipping; and shall mark or write on a tally to be affixed thereon the word staple or inferior (as the case shall be), and also his name signed by himself or his attorney, together with the name of the place where manufactured; in default thereof every such manufacturer shall for every offence forfeit 10*s*. for every hundred weight.

Cordage to be distinguished as staple and inferior.

And maker's name to be affixed.

Sect. 5. And if any rope-maker shall wilfully and knowingly permit or suffer his name to be put as aforesaid on the tally of any cable, &c. not being of his own proper manufacturing; or if the vender or proprietor of any such cable, &c., or any other person whomsoever, shall wilfully and knowingly mark upon the tally affixed thereon the name of any person, not being the manufacturer thereof, he shall forfeit 20*l*.

Penalty on putting a false name on cordage.

Sect. 6. And if any person shall make any cables of any old or worn stuff, which shall contain above seven inches in compass, he shall forfeit four times the value thereof.

Penalty on making cables of old stuff.

Sect. 8. And when any ship belonging to any of his majesty's subjects resident in Great Britain or in the British colonies shall come into any port in this kingdom, the master at the time of making his entry at the custom-house shall make entry on oath of all foreign made cordage on board, for which no duties have been paid (standing and running rigging in use excepted); and such master shall, before such ship be cleared inwards, where any discharge shall be made of her lading, pay for such foreign made cordage, as shall be specified or mentioned in the said entry, the like duties as by the laws now in being are charged upon foreign made cordage imported into this kingdom; and if such master shall make default herein, such foreign made cordage on board such ship shall be forfeited, and he shall also forfeit 20s. for every hundred weight thereof.

Sect. 9 & 10. But the same shall not extend to cordage brought from the East Indies, nor to the materials at present in the use of any ship built abroad before the passing of this act, the property of any British subject.

Sect. 7. All pecuniary penalties or forfeitures by this act imposed exceeding 5*l.* are to be recovered in the courts of Westminster; if not exceeding 5*l.* the same may be levied by distress, by one justice, on the oaths of two witnesses, and if sufficient distress cannot be found, such justice shall commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction for any time not exceeding three calendar months, nor less than seven days, or until such penalty and all costs and charges attending the same shall be paid. And all such penalties and forfeitures, and also all cordage which shall be forfeited, shall be paid and delivered to the person who shall sue, who may sell or otherwise dispose of such cordage (after being cut into lengths not exceeding twelve feet) to his own use.

Sect. 11. Provided, that if any person shall think himself aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of this act, and for which no particular method of relief is appointed, he may, within four months after such matter done, appeal to the sessions, giving fourteen days' notice, in writing, of his intention to appeal and the matter thereof to the person appealed against, and within four days after giving such notice, entering into recognizance before some justice for the county, city, or place, with two sureties, to try such appeal, and abide the order, and pay such costs as shall be awarded at such sessions; and on due proof of such notice, the justices at such sessions shall hear and finally determine such appeal, and award such costs as they shall think proper.

Sect. 12. And no order, verdict, judgment, or other proceeding shall be quashed for want of form only, or be removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever; and where any distress shall be made, it shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making the same trespassers ab initio for want of form or any irregularity; but the persons aggrieved may recover damages in an action on the case, provided sufficient amends have not been made before action brought.

Sect. 3. "Whenever it shall appear to the justices at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden at any time after the passing of this act, in any county, riding, or division in England or Wales, by any presentment to be made by the grand jury at any assizes or great session or session of gaol delivery, or session of the peace, to be holden for any such county, riding, or division, or by any presentment to be at any time made by any two or more justices of the peace in and for such county, riding, or division, and laid before the justices at any such general or quarter sessions of the peace, that any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building accustomedly made use of for holding the assizes, or grand or other sessions of the peace, or that any lodgings for the accommodation of his majesty's judges of assize in and for such county, riding, or division, shall be insufficient, inconvenient, deficient, or in want of repair or improvement, or that there is a necessity for the erection of a new shire-hall, county-hall, or other building, or of lodgings for his majesty's judges of assize, it shall and may be lawful for the justices assembled at the general or quarter sessions at which such presentment shall be laid before such justices, or at the then next general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, for such county, riding, or division, and they are hereby required, to cause notice to be given three times at least in some public newspaper circulating within such county, riding, or division, of such report or presentment having been laid before them at such sessions, and of their intention to take the same into consideration at the next ensuing or some subsequent general or quarter sessions or adjournment thereof; and in case the justices at such last-mentioned sessions, or the major part of them, shall resolve that such report or presentment is well-founded, then it shall and may be lawful for such justices, and they are hereby required, at the sessions mentioned in such notice, or at some subsequent sessions or adjournment thereof, with the like notice, to take such measures, either by contract or otherwise, as shall appear to them to be requisite and proper for the altering, enlarging, repairing, or improving of any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, or for the pulling down of any such shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings, or any part thereof, and for the building of any new shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings of his majesty's judges, or any part thereof, in lieu of any building or any part of any building which shall be so pulled down, regard being had, in the case of contracts, to the reasonableness of the price and responsibility of the contractors; and every contractor shall give sufficient security for the due performance of his contract to the clerk of the peace for such county, riding, or division; and such contract may be inspected at all reasonable times by any justices, or by any other person contributing to the rate of such county, riding, or division, without fee or reward."

Sect. 4. "After such presentment and notice as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, or the major part of them, and they are hereby empowered, to purchase any houses, lands, tenements, or hereditaments for the purpose of enlarging, improving, or rendering more commodious, or for the building or rebuilding any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, or any part thereof, and to direct the property so purchased to be conveyed to such person or persons as the said justices shall think fit, in trust for the purposes aforesaid, under the regulations and directions in this act contained; and such houses, lands, tenements, or hereditaments shall, when inclosed and added to such shire-hall, county-hall, or other buildings or lodgings, be deemed and taken to be parts of such shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings, and to be within the county, riding, or division, to the use of which such shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings may be applied, to all intents and purposes whatever, so long as the same shall be used by such county, riding, or division, for the purposes of this act, and no longer."

Sect. 5. "In case any presentment shall be expressly made by any grand jury, that the place wherein any old shire-hall, county-hall or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, is situated, is improper, and that the shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, ought, therefore, to be removed to some other place within the county, riding, or division, or in case any presentment shall be made by any grand jury, that any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, shall be in such a state that the same ought to be pulled down, and a new building erected, it shall be lawful for the justices at their general or quarter sessions assembled, and they are hereby required to take such presentment into their consideration; and if it shall be resolved by the justices assembled at two successive general or quarter sessions, or the major part of them, that any old shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, ought to be removed or pulled down, and that such new shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, are necessary, it shall be lawful for the justices so assembled to contract for the building of a new shire-hall, county-hall, or other building, in any part of the county, riding, or division which they may deem most eligible, (not being more than one mile from the site of the shire-hall, county-hall, or other building, in lieu of which the same shall be built); and whenever the building of any court of justice is or shall be so attached to any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building, as to render it impracticable or inconvenient to repair, enlarge, improve, or rebuild the said shire-hall, county-hall, or other building, without also altering or pulling down the building of the said court, then and in such cases it shall be lawful for the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled to cause such courts to be altered or pulled down, or to be rebuilt, either on the same or on any other site, subject to the same provisions as are by this act appointed with respect to shire-halls, county-halls, or other buildings as aforesaid."

Sect. 6. Provided that "if the said justices so assembled in two successive general or quarter sessions shall see fit, it shall and may be lawful for such justices to give, grant, or convey gratuitously, the whole of the ground or soil of any such shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, or any part or parts of the same respectively, for the purpose of widening, opening, or otherwise improving any road, street, way, or passage, or roads, streets, ways, or passages, in any county, riding, or division, or in any city or town, within or adjoining to which such shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, shall be situate; and if the whole of such ground or soil shall not be necessary for making the improvement or improvements, then to sell or dispose of the residue thereof in manner herein provided."

Sect. 7. "All matters and things whatever, which might or ought to be lawfully done, performed, and executed in any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building, or in the lodging of his majesty's judges as aforesaid, which shall be wholly or in part pulled down, or the site of which shall be removed under the provisions of this act, shall and may be lawfully done, performed, and executed in any new shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid, which may be built, or rebuilt in the lieu and stead of any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings so pulled down, or in any shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings which shall be built, rebuilt, repaired, or enlarged, in lieu of any part of any former shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings, in lieu of or* addition to any part of any former shire-hall, county-hall, or building or lodgings as aforesaid; and that all matters and things done, performed, or executed, in such new shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings, shall be as good, valid, and effectual to all intents and purposes, whatever, as if they had been done, performed, and executed in such former shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings as aforesaid."

Sect. 8. "Whenever the courts of assize, nisi prius, oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, for any county at large in England, shall be held in or near any city or town which is also a county of itself, and at the same time with the like or any of the like courts for the said city or town, the lodgings of the judge or judges shall be construed and taken to be situate both within the county at large, and also within the county of such city or town, for the purpose of transacting the business of the assizes for such county at large, and for the county of such city or town during the time that such judge or judges shall continue therein for the execution of their several commissions."

Sect. 9. Provided that "in case it shall at any time happen that any such shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodging shall be injured by means of fire or any sudden accident, between the several times of holding the general or quarter sessions for such county, riding, or division, it shall and may be lawful for any two or more justices of the peace for such county, riding, or division, to make an order that such repairs shall be immediately done and made, as may be necessary and sufficient for the upholding of any such shire-hall, county-hall, or other building or lodgings; and such order of such two justices, together with an account of any proceedings which may have taken place in consequence thereof, shall be laid before the next court of general or quarter sessions to be holden for such county, riding, or division; and it shall be lawful for such court, and such court is hereby authorized and required, to order the payment of such sum or sums of money as in the opinion of such court shall appear to have been properly expended in such repairs as aforesaid."

Sect. 18. "All the powers and provisions contained in an act of the fifth year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled 'An Act to facilitate, in those Counties which are divided into Ridings or Divisions, the Execution of an Act of the last Session of Parliament, for consolidating and amending the Laws relating to the building, repairing, and regulating of certain Gaols and Houses of Correction in England and Wales,' shall extend to the several matters and things required by this act to be done by the justices of the peace at any general quarter session of the peace, in as full and ample a manner as if the same had been inserted in and made part of this act."

Sect. 19. "The powers in this act contained shall not extend or be construed to extend to any halls or other buildings not belonging to and not being the property of counties, ridings, or divisions of counties, or holden in trust for them, but which belong to and are the property of cities and towns corporate, although such halls and other buildings may have been accustomably made use of for holding the assizes or great or other sessions of the counties, ridings, or divisions wherein they are respectively situate."

Sect. 20. "All fines, forfeitures, and penalties imposed by this act shall, on conviction of the offender before any one justice of the peace within his jurisdiction, be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice of the peace, who is hereby authorized to hear and examine witnesses on oath or affirmation on any complaint, and to determine the same; and all such fines, forfeitures, and penalties shall be paid from time to time to the treasurer of the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place for the time being, and shall be applied and disposed of in aid of any rate applicable to the use of any such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, and to or for no other use or purpose whatsoever; and for want of sufficient distress the offender shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction for any such term or time, not exceeding three calendar months, as such justice shall think proper."

Sect. 21. "If any suit or action shall be prosecuted against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this act, such person may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done by authority of this act; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his or her action after issue joined, or if upon demurrer, or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant hath by law in other cases; and if a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff in any such action, such plaintiff shall not have costs against the defendant, unless the judge before whom the trial shall be, shall certify his approbation of the action and of the verdict obtained thereon."

I do not find it any where clearly settled how far slander or scandalous words become objects of the criminal jurisdiction, and so cognizable before justices of the peace, by reason of the different circumstances in matters of so intermediate a nature; for the same words, when spoken of different persons, and even of the same person, with a different emphasis and manner of delivering them, may receive a very different interpretation.

In general, it seemeth, that words which directly tend to a breach of the peace, as if one man challenge another, are cognizable before justices of the peace; for which the party may be bound to the good behaviour, and even indicted. (R. v. Wrightson, 2 Salk. 698; R. v. Executors of Summers, 1 Keb. 931.)

But if they do not tend directly to a breach of the king's peace, but are matters only of private slander between party and party, which no way affect the public administration of justice, as in case where the common people are wont to call one another knaves and rogues and whore and thieves, I do not find it asserted by any good authority that justices of the peace have any jurisdiction at all in such matters; but the proper remedy seems to be in one of these two ways, either by a prosecution in the spiritual court, or by an action upon the case at the common law. See "Libel," Vol. III.

There is one species of slander, of which the law takes a more special notice; and that is, when it relates to the great men of the realm, concerning whom it is enacted, by the 3 Edw. I. c. 44, 2 Rich. II. st. 1, c. 5, and 12 Rich. II. c. 11, "that none shall tell or publish any false news or tales, whereby discord, or occasion of discord, or slander, may grow between the king and his people, or the great men of the realm; and that none shall devise, speak, or tell any false news or lies of any prelates, lords, judges, or other great men of the realm, whereof any discord or slander may arise; on pain of imprisonment, until he hath brought into court the first author of the tale; if he cannot find the author, he shall be punished by advice of council."

Publish any false News or Tales.]—But this extends only to extra-judicial slanders; for, if a man charge them in due course of law, although the charge be false, yet there will lie no action de scandalis magnatum, neither at common law nor by the statutes. (2 Inst. 328.)

the insuring of any slaves, or any property or other subject matter engaged or employed in accomplishing any of the objects, or the contracts in relation to the objects, which objects and contracts have hereinbefore been declared unlawful; or shall wilfully and fraudulently forge or counterfeit any certificate, certificate of valuation, sentence, or decree of condemnation or restitution, copy of sentence or decree of condemnation or restitution, or any receipt (such receipts being required by this act), or any part of such certificate, certificate of valuation, sentence, or decree of condemnation or restitution, copy of sentence or decree of condemnation or restitution, or receipt as aforesaid; or shall knowingly and wilfully utter or publish the same knowing it to be forged or counterfeited, with intent to defraud his majesty, his heirs, or successors, or any other person or persons whatsoever, or any body politic or corporate; then and in every such case the person or persons so offending, and their procurers, counsellors, aiders, and abettors shall be, and are hereby declared to be felons, and shall be transported beyond seas for a term not exceeding fourteen years, or shall be confined and kept to hard labour for a term not exceeding five years, nor less than three years, at the discretion of the court before whom such offender or offenders shall be tried and convicted."

Sect. 13. "Nothing in this act contained shall prevent or be construed to prevent any persons from dealing or trading in, purchasing, selling, bartering, or transferring, or from the contracting for the dealing or trading in, purchase, sale, barter, or transfer of any slaves or slave lawfully being within any island, colony, dominion, fort, settlement, factory, or territory belonging to or in the possession of his majesty, in case such dealing or trading, purchase, sale, barter, transfer, or contract shall be made and entered into, with the true intent and purpose of employing or working such slaves or slave within such and the same island, colony, dominion, fort, settlement, factory, or territory, in which they, he, or she, may lawfully be, at the time of the making or entering into any such dealing or trading, purchase, sale, barter, transfer, or contract."

Sect. 50. "All offences committed against this act may be inquired of, tried, determined, and dealt with, as if the same had been respectively committed within the body of the county of Middlesex."

By the 1 Wil. IV. c. 55, the rate of bounties payable upon the seizure of slaves is reduced.

Statutes 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 73, 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 45, 6 Wil. IV. c. 5, and 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 81, 82, further the abolition of slavery, and give compensation to former slave owners.

Spring-Guns.

AS to the common-law right to set spring-guns, &c., see "Game," Vol. II. Right to set.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 1, reciting, "whereas it is expedient to prohibit the setting of spring-guns and man-traps, and other engines calculated to destroy human life, or inflict grievous bodily harm," it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, if any person shall set or place, or cause to be set or placed, any spring-gun, man-trap, or other engine calculated to destroy human life, or inflict grievous bodily harm, with the intent that the same or whereby the same may destroy or inflict grievous bodily harm upon a trespasser or other person coming in contact therewith, the person so setting or placing, or causing to be set or placed, such gun, trap, or engine as aforesaid, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor." 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 18.

Sect. 2. Provided that "nothing herein contained shall extend to make it illegal to set any gin or trap such as may have been or may be usually set with the intent of destroying vermin." Persons setting or placing spring guns, man traps, &c., guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sect. 3. "If any person shall knowingly and wilfully permit any such spring-gun, man-trap, or other engine as aforesaid, which may have been set, fixed, or left in any place then being in or afterwards coming into his or her possession or occupation, by some other person or persons, to continue so set or fixed, the person so permitting the same to continue shall be deemed to have set and fixed such gun, trap, or engine, with such intent as aforesaid." Persons permitting guns, traps, &c. set by others, to continue, deemed to have set the same.

Sect. 4. Provided that "nothing in this act shall be deemed or construed to make it a misdemeanor, within the meaning of this act, to set or cause to be set, or to be continued set, from sunset to sunrise, any spring-gun, man-trap, or other engine which shall be set, or caused or continued to be set, in a dwelling-house, for the protection thereof." Proviso for guns, traps, &c., set for the protection of dwelling-houses.

Sect. 5. Provided that "nothing in this act contained shall in any manner affect or authorize any proceedings in any civil or criminal court, touching any matter or thing done or committed previous to the passing of this act." Not to affect proceedings already commenced.

Sect. 6. Provided that "nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to that part of the United Kingdom called Scotland." Not to extend to Scotland.

are hereby severally repealed accordingly, save and except only so far as is hereinafter in that behalf provided."

Sect. 2. "That an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to repeal the Duties upon Horses let to hire for the purpose of travelling in Great Britain, and to grant other duties in lieu thereof, and to provide for letting the same to farm,' shall continue in force until and upon the 31st day of January, in the year of our Lord 1833, and shall from thenceforth cease, determine, and be repealed, save and except only so far as is hereinafter in that behalf provided."

Sect. 3. Provided always, "that nothing in this act contained shall extend to repeal any of the said several acts and parts of acts hereinbefore mentioned, so far as the same or any of them repeal the whole or any part of any former act or acts, or with respect to any duty or arrears of any duty, or any debt or sum of money, which at any time before the several days or times hereinbefore respectively appointed for the repeal of the said several acts and parts of acts shall have accrued or been incurred under or by virtue of the said acts and parts of acts or any of them respectively, and which shall then or at any time afterwards be or become due or payable, and remain in arrear and unpaid, or with respect to any penalty or forfeiture or punishment incurred for or in respect of any offence committed at any time before the said several days or times hereinbefore respectively appointed for the repeal of the said several acts and parts of acts, but that all such duties and arrears of duty, debts, sums of money, penalties, forfeitures, and punishments, shall respectively be sued or prosecuted for, recovered, obtained, and inflicted by the same ways and means and in the same manner as if this act had not been made."

Sect. 4. "In lieu of the duties repealed by this act there shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid unto and for the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, in and throughout Great Britain, for and in respect of every stage carriage and every horse let for hire, and every licence relating to the same, and for and in respect of passengers conveyed for hire as mentioned and described in the schedule (A.) to this act annexed, the several duties or sums of money set down in figures against the same respectively, or otherwise specified and set forth in the same schedule; and that the said schedule shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act; and that all the said duties shall be under the management of the commissioners of stamps, and shall be denominated and deemed to be stamp duties."

Sect. 5. "Every carriage used or employed for the purpose of conveying passengers for hire to or from any place in Great Britain, and which, when passing along any highway or other road, shall travel at the rate of three [same extended by 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 65, s. 7, infra, to four miles] miles or more in the hour, shall, without regard to the form or construction thereof, be deemed and taken to be a stage carriage within the meaning of this act; provided the passengers, or any one or more of them, thereby conveyed, shall be charged or shall pay separate and distinct fares or a separate and distinct fare, or shall be charged or pay at the rate of separate and distinct fares, for their respective places or seats or his place or seat therein or conveyance thereby; and in all proceedings at law or otherwise, and upon all occasions whatsoever, it shall be sufficient to describe any carriage used or employed as aforesaid by the term 'stage carriage,' without further or otherwise describing the same: provided always, that the said term 'stage carriage' shall not be deemed to extend to or to include any carriage used or employed as aforesaid wholly upon any railway, nor to any carriage drawn or impelled by the power of steam, or otherwise than by animal power."

By 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 65, s. 7, reciting that, by the 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 120, it is enacted, "that every carriage used or employed as therein mentioned, and which when passing along any highway or other road shall travel at miles an hour not to be deemed stage carriages.

By 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 120, s. 6, "it shall not be lawful for any person to keep, use, or employ any stage carriage, unless such person shall have a licence in force so to do, granted to him under the authority of this act by two or more of the commissioners of stamps, or by some person duly authorized by the said commissioners to grant such licence, nor unless there shall be fixed on such carriage, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, the numbered plates by this act directed to be delivered with every such licence, nor unless the several particulars by this act directed to be painted on every such carriage shall be painted hereon; any thing in any other act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Stage carriages not to be used without licences, nor without plates, nor without having painted thereon the particulars hereby required.

Sect. 7. "In any action, information, or other proceeding for the recovery of any duty or penalty incurred under this act in respect of or with relation to any stage carriage, if evidence shall be given that the carriage in respect of which or in any manner relating to which any such action, information, or proceeding shall be commenced or prosecuted was seen travelling or going upon any highway or other road, having fixed or placed thereon any numbered plate provided or used in pursuance of this or any former act relating to stage carriages, or having thereupon any plate resembling or intended to resemble any such plate as aforesaid, or having painted upon such carriage any of the particulars required by this act to be painted upon stage carriages, such carriage shall be deemed and taken to be a stage carriage; and such evidence as aforesaid shall be received as sufficient proof that such carriage was kept, used, and employed for the purpose of conveying passengers for hire as a stage carriage within the meaning of this act, unless the contrary be proved; and that in all such actions, informations, and proceedings as aforesaid the person named or described in the licence granted with or relating to the number of the plate (if any there shall be) fixed or placed upon any such carriage, whether such licence shall be in force or not, or the person whose name (if any) shall be painted on any such carriage, shall for the purposes of this act (unless the contrary be proved) be deemed to be the person to whom such carriage doth belong."

Carriages with plates or particulars painted thereon to be deemed stage carriages.

Sect. 8. "Any two or more of the commissioners of stamps, or any person duly authorized by the said commissioners, shall grant a licence under their or his hands or hand to any and every person of the age of twenty-one years or upwards who shall apply for such licence in the manner hereinafter mentioned, to keep, use, and employ any stage carriage in any part of Great Britain; and that every such licence to any person for or in respect of any stage carriage which shall go from or shall come to London or Westminster, or from or to any place within the county of Middlesex, or the weekly bills of mortality, shall be granted at the head office for stamps in Westminster; and every such licence to any person for or in respect of any stage carriage which shall go from or shall come to any other town or place within Great Britain shall be granted, either at the said head office, or by the person duly authorized by the said commissioners to grant such licences for the district within which the town or place is situated from which or at which such stage carriage shall begin or end its journey; and the said commissioners, or the person so authorized to grant such licence as aforesaid, shall at the time of granting every such licence for the first time, and at all other times when necessary, deliver to the person applying for such licence the numbered plates hereinafter required to be fixed upon the stage carriage mentioned in such licence: provided always, that no person shall be entitled

Sect. 9. "Before any licence, whether original or supplementary, shall be granted or renewed under the provisions of this act for or in respect of any stage carriage, a requisition for such licence, in such form as the commissioners of stamps shall from time to time provide for that purpose, shall be made and signed by the proprietor or one of the proprietors of the stage carriage in respect of which such licence shall be applied for; and in every such requisition there shall be truly specified and set forth the christian name and surname and place of abode of the person applying for such licence, and of every person who shall be a proprietor or part proprietor of such carriage, or who shall be concerned, either solely or in partnership with any other person, in the keeping, using, or employing of such carriage; and in case any person, on applying for any such licence, shall neglect or omit to specify truly in such requisition as aforesaid the name of any person who shall be a proprietor or part proprietor of such carriage, or who shall be concerned as aforesaid in the keeping, using, or employing of such carriage, every person so offending shall forfeit ten pounds."

Sect. 10. "If any person applying for or procuring or attempting to procure any licence under this act for or in respect of any stage carriage shall use or employ any false or fictitious name or place of abode, or other false or fictitious description of any person or supposed person, or shall insert or cause to be inserted in any requisition for any such licence, or in any such licence, any false or fictitious name or place of abode, or other false or fictitious description of any person or supposed person as being the proprietor or part proprietor of the stage carriage for or in respect of which such licence shall be applied for or procured, or shall wilfully or knowingly insert or cause to be inserted in any such requisition, or in any such licence as aforesaid, the name of any person as being a proprietor or part proprietor of such carriage who shall not at the time of the application for such licence be in fact a proprietor or part proprietor of such carriage, the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, he shall be liable to be punished by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as the court shall award; such imprisonment to be in the common gaol or house of correction, and either with or without hard labour, as the court shall think fit; and in Scotland, whenever any person shall so offend, he shall be liable to be punished in like manner."

Sect. 11. "There shall be specified in every licence to be granted or renewed under this act for or in respect of any stage carriage the following particulars, or such of them as the commissioners of stamps shall think proper; (that is to say,) the christian name and surname and the place of abode of the person and of every person who shall be a proprietor or part proprietor of the stage carriage in respect of which such licence shall be granted, or who shall be concerned, either solely or in partnership with any other person, in the keeping, using, or employing of such carriage, the number painted or marked on the plates to be fixed on such carriage, the names of the extreme places from which and to which such carriage shall be authorized by such licence to go or pass, and the route or line of road by which such carriage shall travel to or from such extreme places, and also the distance in miles or fractional parts of a mile, or both, as the case may require, between such extreme places, the number of journeys, and the total number of miles upon which the duty granted by this act shall be assessed, and which such carriage shall be authorized to perform or to travel, either Stage Coaches separately or in conjunction with one or more other licensed stage carriage and Post or carriages, within the day, week, or month, as the said commissioners Horses. may think fit, the days of the week on which such carriage shall be authorized to be used, and the greatest number of passengers to be conveyed by such carriage, distinguishing (when the same is intended to convey both inside and outside passengers) the number to be carried on or about the outside from the number to be carried in the inside of such carriage; and a copy of every such licence, and of every indorsement which shall from time to time be made thereon, shall be kept at the office or place from which such licence shall be issued, in order that any person may have a copy thereof, paying 1s. for the same."

Copy of licence to be given on payment of 1s.

Sect. 12. Provided always, "that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps, where they shall deem it expedient, at the time of granting any such licence as aforesaid, to compound with any person, on such terms and conditions as they shall think fit, for the duties which may become payable in respect of such stage carriage; and then and in such case, instead of the number of journeys and the total number of miles which such carriage shall be authorized to perform within the day, week, or month, there shall be specified in the licence granted for or in respect of such carriage the amount of the composition, per day, week, or month, to be paid for and in respect of such carriage in lieu of the duties specified in the said schedule to this act annexed, together with such stipulations and conditions as the said commissioners shall think proper for better securing the payment of such composition."

Duties may be compounded for.

In case of a composition, the amount to be specified in the licence.

Sect. 13. "From and after the passing of this act every licence for the keeping, using, employing, or letting out to hire of any stage carriage which shall have been granted under any former act, and which shall have been in force on the 31st day of July in this present year 1832, shall be and the same is hereby revived and continued, and shall be deemed to be and to have been in full force and effect from the said 31st day of July; and every such licence which shall be so revived and continued as aforesaid, and also every other such licence as aforesaid which shall have been or shall be granted under any former act after the said 31st day of July and before the 11th day of October in this present year 1832, shall respectively remain and continue in force until and upon the 10th day of October in the said year 1832, (unless sooner determined by the parties to whom the same shall have been granted,) and shall then cease and determine, any thing in any former act or in such licences respectively to the contrary notwithstanding; and that every such licence as aforesaid, whether original or supplementary, which shall be granted, under the authority of this act, after the 10th day of October and before the 1st day of November in the said year 1832, shall be dated on the 11th day of October in the same year; and every such licence which shall be granted after the 31st day of October in the said year 1832, and before the first Monday in the month of October in the year 1833, shall be dated on the day on which the same shall be granted; and every such licence granted as aforesaid under the authority of this act shall have effect and continue in force from the day of the date thereof until the first Monday in the month of October 1833 (unless sooner discontinued in manner hereinafter mentioned), and no longer; and every such licence as aforesaid which shall be granted at any time on or after the first Monday in October and before the 1st day of November in the year 1833, or in any subsequent year, shall be dated on the first Monday in October in the year in which the same shall be granted, specifying the day of the month; and every such licence which shall be granted at any other time than as aforesaid in the said last-mentioned year, or in any subsequent year, shall be dated on the day on which the same shall be granted; and every such licence as aforesaid which shall be dated on the first Monday in any month of October, or on any other day in any year, shall have effect and continue in force from the day of the date thereof until the first Monday in the month of October then next ensuing, or until the Monday next ensuing the granting of such licence, if such Monday shall be the first Monday in October (unless sooner discontinued as aforesaid), and no longer; and every such licence shall be renewed from year to year, by the grant of an original licence, on payment of the duty of 5*l.* by this act charged thereon."

Sect. 14. "When any person to whom any licence shall have been granted under this act for or in respect of any stage carriage shall determine to discontinue or give up such licence, such person shall give notice in writing of such his determination to the commissioners of stamps or to the officer by whom such licence was granted; and when the time for giving up such licence according to such notice shall have elapsed, and such licence shall have been given up to the said commissioners or officer, such licence shall cease and determine, and shall be no longer in force, and the person so previously licensed shall not be charged with the duties payable according to the terms of such licence, in respect of such stage carriage, for any period subsequent to the expiration of such notice and the re-delivery of such licence, provided he shall within seven days next after the expiration of such notice deliver up to the said commissioners or officer the numbered plates mentioned in such licence."

Sect. 15. "Whenever any licence granted under this act for or in respect of any stage carriage shall cease or expire, or be discontinued, the person to whom such licence shall have been granted shall, within seven days next after the expiration or discontinuance thereof, deliver up to the commissioners of stamps, or to the officer by whom such licence was granted, the numbered plates mentioned in such licence, or in default thereof such person shall continue to be subject and liable to the payment of the same rate of duty as under this act was payable according to the terms of such licence before the expiration or discontinuance thereof, and such person shall be chargeable and charged with the payment of the said duty according to the time of delivering up the said plates to the said commissioners or officer; and such duty shall be recoverable by the same ways and means as if such licence had continued in force."

Sect. 16. "Whenever any person to whom any original licence chargeable under this act with the duty of 5*l.* shall have been granted for or in respect of any stage carriage shall afterwards, and within the term for which such licence was granted, take any other person into partnership in the keeping, using, or employing of such stage carriage; and whenever, after the granting of any such original licence as aforesaid to any persons in copartnership, and within the period for which the same was granted, any alteration shall take place in such copartnership; and also whenever any person to whom any such original licence as aforesaid shall have been granted shall afterwards, and within the period for which the same was granted, be desirous of increasing or decreasing the number of journeys specified in such licence to be performed or travelled by such stage carriage in the day, week, or month, as the same may be specified in such licence, or of altering the route or line of road by which such stage carriage shall travel to or from the extreme places from which and to which such stage carriage shall be authorized by such licence to go or pass, or of altering such extreme places by extending or shortening the distance which such stage carriage shall be authorized to perform or travel on the same line of road, or of altering the days of the week on which such stage carriage shall be authorized to be used, or of increasing or decreasing the number of passengers to be conveyed by such stage carriage, either in the whole or in the inside or on or about the outside thereof, then and in any of the several cases aforesaid, upon the surrender and delivery of any such original licence, or of any existing supplementary licence which may have been taken out in lieu thereof, to the commissioners of stamps, or to the officer by whom the same was granted, the said commissioners or officer shall grant to such person or copartnership of persons a supplementary licence, with any such alterations or variations as aforesaid, in lieu of the licence so surrendered and delivered up, on payment only of the duty of 1*s.* by this act charged on such supplementary licence; and in like manner a supplementary licence shall be granted and taken out from time to time as often as any of the several cases aforesaid shall occur during the period for which any such original licence shall have been previously granted."

Stage Coaches and Post Horses.

Sect. 17. "Whenever any such supplementary licence as aforesaid shall be granted in lieu of any pre-existing licence such pre-existing licence shall thenceforth cease and determine, and such supplementary licence shall be deemed to be the only licence then in force; and it shall not be necessary upon any occasion to prove that any original licence had been previously taken out for or in respect of the stage carriage for which such supplementary licence shall have been granted, nor shall the circumstances under which such supplementary licence was issued be required to be proved, nor the regularity of the issuing thereof in any manner questioned."

2 & 3 Wil.4, c. 120.
Such supplementary licence to be then the only licence in force.

Sect. 18. "The duty payable in respect of any licensed stage carriage shall be payable and paid to his majesty by the person or persons named as the proprietor or proprietors in the licence relating to such stage carriage; and in all actions, informations, and other proceedings for the recovery of any such duty each and every of the said proprietors severally, or the whole, or any two or more of them jointly, may be charged with and prosecuted for the same; and the amount of the rate of duty imposed by this act upon or in respect of any such carriage, computed upon the number of miles which such carriage shall be authorized by such licence to travel in the day, week, or month, as the case may be, or the amount of the composition specified in such licence, computed upon the time which shall have elapsed since the date thereof, shall be deemed to be the amount of duty due and payable in respect of such carriage (unless the same shall be proved to have been paid); and proof of the granting of any such licence, and of the terms thereof, shall in all cases be sufficient evidence of the duty due, without any evidence being given of the actual keeping, using, or employing of the stage carriage in such licence mentioned by the person named therein as the person to whom the same shall have been granted: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to exonerate from liability to the payment of such duty any proprietor whose name may not be inserted in such licence, but that every such proprietor may be charged with and prosecuted for such duty either alone or jointly with any one or more other proprietor or proprietors, whether named in such licence or not."

Duty to be payable by the person named in the licence; and to be computed according to the terms of the licence.

Evidence of the duty due.

Sect. 19. Provided always, "that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps, or their proper officer, to examine into all the circumstances relative to the number of journeys or the number of miles actually performed or travelled by any stage carriage, and in cases where the same shall be less than the number expressed in the licence relating to such carriage it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or their said officer, to make such allowances of duty as to them respectively shall appear to be just and proper to the person licensed in respect of such carriage upon proof being made to the satisfaction of the said commissioners or officer as to the number of journeys or miles actually performed or travelled by such carriage; and it shall also be lawful for the said commissioners to make such regulations with respect to such carriages, where any such allowance shall be applied for, as they shall from time to time deem necessary or expedient, as well for effectually securing the duties on such carriages as for doing justice to the owners or proprietors thereof, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and if any person licensed as aforesaid, in any account to be rendered by him in pursuance of this act, or of any such regulations as aforesaid, of the number of journeys or miles actually performed or travelled by any stage carriage, shall neglect or omit to insert therein any journey actually performed by such carriage, or shall insert therein a less number of miles than shall have been actually travelled by such carriage during the period for which such account shall be rendered, he shall forfeit 50*l*."

Commissioners may make allowance for the duties on journeys not performed by any licensed stage carriage.

Penalty for rendering a false account of the journeys performed by any stage carriage, 50*l*.

Sect. 20. "The person to whom any such licence as aforesaid shall have been granted at the head office for stamps, or some person on his behalf, shall, on the first Monday in every calendar month, between the hours of ten in the morning and three in the afternoon, unless the same be a holiday, and then on the next day not being a holiday, pay the whole of the duty charged and accrued due under or by virtue of such licence within the four or five preceding weeks, as the case may be, in respect of the stage carriage mentioned in such licence, to the receiver general of stamp duties, or to the proper officer for the time being for receiving stage carriage duties at the said head office; and that the person to whom any such licence as aforesaid shall have been granted at any other place than the said head office, or some person on his behalf, shall at the periods aforesaid pay the whole of the duty charged and accrued due as aforesaid, under or by virtue of such last-mentioned licence, to the person by whom such licence shall have been granted, or to such other person as the commissioners of stamps shall appoint or authorize to receive the same."

Sect. 21. "If any person to whom any licence shall be granted under the provisions of this act, to keep, use, or employ any stage carriage shall make default in payment of any sum of money not exceeding in amount the sum of 50*l.*, which shall become due or payable in respect of such licence, at the time and in the manner by this act appointed for payment thereof, it shall be lawful for any two of the commissioners of stamps to grant a warrant to any constable or other peace officer, or to any officer of stamp duties, or other person named in such warrant, directing him to distrain every such person so making default as aforesaid by his goods and chattels, and also to seize and take the carriages, horses, harness, and other articles and things by this act made subject and liable to such duty, for the amount of the duty so due or payable as aforesaid, and of all the costs, charges and expenses incident or relating to the taking and keeping of such distress; and it shall be lawful for such constable, or for any such officer or other person as aforesaid, to make such distress and seizure accordingly, and the distress so taken to detain and keep for the space of five days, at the costs and charges of the person distrained; and if the amount of such duty, and of all the costs, charges, and expenses aforesaid, shall not be paid within such space of five days, then such constable or officer or other person shall cause the goods and chattels, carriages, horses, harness, and other things so seized or taken, to be sold in the manner directed by this act, and shall render the overplus, if any, of the money arising by the sale thereof, after deducting and retaining the amount of such duty, and all the costs, charges, and expenses aforesaid, as well as the charges and expenses of the sale, to the person so distrained, or to the owner of the carriages, horses, harness, or other things so seized and taken as aforesaid; and for the purpose of taking such distress it shall be lawful for such constable or other peace officer, or for such officer of stamp duties, or other person named in such warrant, in the presence of any constable or other peace officer, where any refusal or resistance shall be made, to break open in the day-time any house, building, or other place where any such carriages, horses, harness, or other articles or things, or any goods or chattels, to be seized or taken under such warrant as aforesaid, shall be."

Sect. 22. "If any person shall keep, use, or employ any stage carriage without having such licence as by this act is required, such person shall, over and above any penalty which may be incurred under this act, be accountable to his majesty for the same duty as such person would have been chargeable with and liable to pay for or in respect of such carriage in case such person had obtained a proper licence for the same under this act, for the particular journey, distance, or number of miles, and for the number of journeys in the day, week, or month, and for the number of passengers, which such person shall at any time have advertized or otherwise notified or expressed that such carriage was intended or had been or was to be employed to go or carry respectively, or which such carriage shall actually have gone or carried respectively, at any one period during which such carriage shall have been kept or used, at the election of the said commissioners; and that every person so keeping, using, or employing such carriage, shall be chargeable with such duty for the same from the time when such carriage was first kept or used without such licence as aforesaid, down to the time when any licence shall be taken out for the same by such person, or to the time when the use thereof shall be absolutely discontinued, and also with the duty which would have been payable for the proper licence which such person ought to have taken out in respect of such carriage as aforesaid." Stage Coaches and Post Horses.

Sect. 23. "It shall not be lawful for any person licensed in respect of any stage carriage to use, have, or keep more than one pair of plates under or by virtue of any one licence, but that for every pair of plates there shall be a separate and distinct licence." 2 & 3 Wil. 4, c. 120. A separate licence required for every pair of plates.

Sect. 24. "Whenever the number or device on any plate or plates shall become obliterated or defaced, so that the same shall not be distinctly visible and legible, and also whenever any plate or plates shall be proved to the satisfaction of the commissioners of stamps to have been lost or mislaid, the person to whom the licence relating to any such plate or plates shall have been granted shall surrender and deliver up such of the said plates as he shall have in his possession, and shall produce such licence to the said commissioners or to their proper officer, and such person shall then be entitled to have new plates delivered to him in lieu of the plates so delivered up or lost or mislaid, upon payment for the use of his majesty, of any sum, in the discretion of the said commissioners, not exceeding the sum of ten shillings for each pair of plates; and where the number on such new plates shall be different from the number on such plates so delivered up or lost or mislaid, the said commissioners or officer shall indorse and sign upon the licence a memorandum of the issuing of such new plates in lieu of the plates in such licence mentioned: provided always, that if any such plate or plates which shall have been proved as aforesaid, or represented to have been lost or mislaid, shall afterwards be found, the same shall forthwith be delivered up to the said commissioners; and if any person in or into whose possession or power any such plate or plates as last aforesaid shall be or come shall refuse or neglect for the space of five days to deliver up the same to the said commissioners, he shall forfeit 20*l*." New plates to be delivered in lieu of defaced or lost plates.

Sect. 25. "Whenever, in the opinion of the commissioners of stamps or their proper officer, it shall be expedient to recall any plates for the purpose of changing the same for any other plates, and such commissioners or officer shall give notice to the person or to any one of the persons to whom the licence relating to such plates shall have been granted that the said commissioners or officer do or doth by such notice recall such plates, the person to whom such licence shall have been granted shall, within one week after such notice, deliver up such plates, and produce the licence relating to the same, to the said commissioners or their proper officer, and shall also apply to the said commissioners or such officer for new plates, and thereupon the said commissioners or such officer shall deliver to the person so applying for the same new plates in lieu of the plates so as aforesaid recalled; and where the number on such new plates shall be different from the number on such recalled plates the said commissioners or officer shall endorse and sign upon the licence a memorandum of the surrender of the plates in such licence mentioned, and of the granting of such new plates in lieu thereof, and from thenceforth such licence shall be deemed to relate to such new plates in the same manner as if the number thereof had been originally inserted in the body of such licence." Commissioners may recall and change plates.

Sect. 26. "The plates by this act required to be fixed upon every stage carriage shall be fixed, one on each side of such carriage, upon the upper fore quarter at the lower angle adjoining to the door, or if there be no upper fore quarter, then on the centre panel of each door in the side of such carriage, or if there be a door only in one side of such carriage, then one of such plates shall be fixed upon the centre pannel of that door, and the other upon some conspicuous part of the opposite side of such carriage, or if there be no door in either side of such carriage, then one of such plates shall be fixed upon some conspicuous part of each side of such carriage; and if it shall happen that the commissioners of stamps, or their proper officer, shall be dissatisfied with the position of any plate upon any such carriage, and shall direct such plate to be fixed upon some other conspicuous part of such car- In what manner plates are to be placed upon stage carriages.

Sect. 27. "If any person shall keep, use, or employ, or shall be concerned as proprietor [sec. 117, post, 758,] or part proprietor in the keeping, using, or employing of any stage carriage, without having a licence in force so to do granted to him under this act, or if any person, whether he shall have any such licence or not, shall keep, use, or employ any stage carriage, such carriage not having placed and fixed thereupon and in the manner directed by this act the numbered plates required by this act to be fixed on stage carriages, or having thereupon any such plate as aforesaid the number or device whereon shall be in any manner obliterated, defaced, or obscured, so that the same shall not be distinctly visible and legible, or if any person to whom any such licence shall have been granted shall, for the space of one week after notice in manner by this act directed to be given to such person that the plates to which such licence shall relate have been recalled, neglect or refuse to deliver up the plates mentioned in such notice, according to the terms thereof, every person so offending in any of the several cases aforesaid shall forfeit 20*l*."

Sect. 28. "If any person to whom any licence shall have been granted in respect of any stage carriage shall permit or suffer such carriage to perform a greater number of journeys or to travel a greater number of miles than shall be mentioned in or allowed by such licence, or to be used on any other day or for the performing of any other journey than shall be mentioned or allowed in or by such licence, or shall fix or place upon such carriage any plate having a number different from the number mentioned in or authorized by the licence in force at the time of using such carriage, such person shall be deemed to be a person keeping, using, and employing a stage carriage without having a licence in force so to do, and shall accordingly be subject and liable to the penalty of 20*l*. by this act imposed in that behalf; and in all actions, informations, or other proceedings against such person for the recovery of such penalty in any of the cases aforesaid it shall be sufficient to charge or allege that such person did keep, use, and employ a stage carriage without having a licence in force so to do granted to him under this act, and it shall not be necessary further or otherwise to state or describe any such offence, nor to prove that such carriage was used or employed for the conveyance of passengers at separate fares."

Sect. 29. "Whenever any person to whom any licence shall have been granted for or in respect of any stage carriage shall die, or become bankrupt or insolvent, during the existence of such licence, it shall be lawful for his executor, administrator, or assignee, or trustee, to keep, use, and employ such stage carriage according to the terms of such licence for the space of thirty days next after the death, bankruptcy, or insolvency of the person to whom such licence was granted, without being liable for so doing to the penalty by this act imposed on any person who shall keep, use, or employ any stage carriage without having a licence in force so to do: provided always, that such executor, administrator, assignee, or trustee shall be liable to and chargeable with the payment of the duty which shall accrue or become payable in respect of such stage carriage from the time of such death, bankruptcy, or insolvency, and shall also be liable to all other the provisions and regulations of this act in the same manner as if such executor, administrator, assignee, or trustee had duly obtained the licence in his own name for the keeping, using, and employing of such stage carriage."

Sect. 30. "If any carriage, whether licensed as a stage carriage or not, shall be found upon or near to any public highway, and any person shall ply for passengers to be conveyed by such carriage for hire at separate fares, such carriage not having placed and fixed thereupon the numbered plates required by this act to be fixed on stage carriages, the driver [sec. 117, post, 758, R. v. Barker, 3 East, 504,] of such carriage, or the person having the care thereof, or plying for passengers to be conveyed thereby, such driver or person, not being the owner of such carriage, shall forfeit 10*l*., and if he shall be the owner of such carriage he shall forfeit 20*l*.; and moreover it shall be lawful for any constable or other peace officer, or any officer of stamp duties, without any warrant for that purpose, to apprehend such driver or other person having the care of such carriage or plying for passengers to be conveyed thereby, and to carry and convey him before any justice of the peace having jurisdiction where the offence shall be committed, to be dealt with as hereinafter mentioned; and it shall also be lawful for such constable or other peace officer, or officer of stamp duties, to drive or take the carriage not having such plates, with the horse or horses harnessed thereto or drawing the same, or to cause the same to be driven or taken, to some public greenyard, or some livery stables or other place of safety, and there to lodge the same for safe custody until the determination of such justice shall be known; and the justice before whom such driver or other person shall be brought shall hear and determine such offence; and in case the person convicted of any such offence shall be the owner of any such carriage, and if the said penalty of 20*l.*, together with all costs and expenses, and the expenses of taking such carriage and horse or horses to and keeping the same at such greenyard, stables, or other place, shall not be fully paid or discharged within five days after such conviction, such carriage and horse or horses, together with the harness used therewith, shall be sold by order under the hand of such justice, and the surplus (if any) of the produce of such sale, after deducting therefrom the said penalty, costs, and expenses, and also the expenses of such sale, shall be rendered to such owner; but in case the person so convicted shall not be the owner of such carriage, then on default being made in payment of the said penalty of 10*l.* such justice shall commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the space of three calendar months, unless such last-mentioned penalty shall be sooner paid; and such justice shall give an order for the delivering up of the carriage, and horse or horses, and harness, to the owner thereof, on his paying the expenses of taking and keeping the same; and in case of his refusal to pay such expenses forthwith, then such carriage, and horse or horses, and harness, or a sufficient part thereof to defray such expenses, shall be sold by order under the hand of such justice; and after payment thereof of all such expenses as aforesaid, together with the expenses of such sale, the surplus, (if any,) of the produce of such sale, together with such part of the carriage, and horse or horses, and harness, as shall remain unsold, shall be rendered and restored to the owner."

Sect 31. "From and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for the proprietor or driver of any stage carriage duly licensed by the commissioners of stamps, and having thereon the proper numbered plates or plate required by law to be placed on stage carriages, or for any other person, to stand or ply with such carriage for passengers to be carried for hire, and to take up, convey, and set down such passengers with or from such carriage at any place either within the distance of five miles from the general post office in the City of London or elsewhere, any thing contained in an act passed in the last session of parliament, for amending the laws relating to hackney carriages, notwithstanding; provided that for this purpose such stage carriage shall not deviate from the proper route or line of road, if any shall be specified or described in the licence relating to such stage carriage, or shall not go beyond the limits allowed by such licence."

Sect. 32. "If any person shall forge or counterfeit, or shall cause or procure to be forged, counterfeited, or resembled, any numbered plate directed to be provided, or which shall have been provided, made, or used in pursuance of this act or of any former act relating to the duties payable in respect of stage carriages, or shall wilfully fix or place, or shall cause or permit or suffer to be fixed or placed, upon any stage carriage or other carriage, any such forged or counterfeited plate, or if any person shall sell or exchange or expose to sale or utter any such forged or counterfeited plate, or if any person shall knowingly and without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused) have or be possessed of any such forged or counterfeited plate, knowing such plate to be forged or counterfeited, every person so offending, and every person knowingly and wilfully aiding, abetting, or assisting any person in committing any such offence as aforesaid, shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and being thereof convicted shall be liable to be punished by fine or imprisonment, or by both, such imprisonment to be in the common gaol or house of correction, and either with or without hard labour, as the court shall think fit; and in Scotland, whenever any person shall so offend, he shall be liable to be punished in like manner; and it shall be lawful for any officer of stamp duties, or for any constable or other peace officer, or any toll-gate keeper, to seize and take away any such plate, in order that the same may be produced in evidence against such offender, or be disposed of as the commissioners of stamps shall think proper."

Sect. 33. "If after the expiration or discontinuance of any licence granted to any person under any former act relating to stage carriages, or under this act, such person shall use, detain, or have in his possession the numbered plate or plates mentioned in such licence, or shall neglect to deliver the same to the commissioners of stamps or to their proper officer, or if any person shall use or detain or have in his possession any numbered plate or plates without having a licence in force granted to him under any such act as aforesaid, and relating to such plate or plates, or if any person shall use or detain or have in his possession any numbered plate or plates which shall have been recalled by the commissioners of stamps or their proper officer, whether the licence relating thereto shall be in force or not, it shall be lawful for any officer of stamp duties, or for any constable or other peace officer, or for any toll-gate keeper, to seize and take away any such plate or plates wheresoever the same may be found, in order to deliver the same to the said commissioners; and for the purpose of seizing and taking away any such plate or plates, or any forged or counterfeited plate or plates, it shall be lawful for such officer of stamp duties, constable, peace officer, or toll-gate keeper, to stop any stage carriage or other carriage upon which the same may be placed; and any person who shall molest, obstruct, or hinder such officer of stamp duties, constable, peace officer, or toll-gate keeper in seizing or endeavouring to seize or take away any such plate or plates as aforesaid shall forfeit 20*l*."

Sect. 34. "If the number of passengers at any one time conveyed in, upon, or about any licensed stage carriage shall be greater in the whole than the number of passengers which the licence granted in respect of such carriage shall authorize or allow to be conveyed thereby, or if the number of passengers at any one time conveyed in the inside of such stage carriage, or upon or about the outside thereof, shall be greater respectively than the greatest number of inside or outside passengers respectively specified in or upon such licence and allowed thereby, the person to whom such licence shall have been granted shall forfeit 5*l*. for every passenger so conveyed above the number allowed by such licence to be conveyed in the whole, or in the inside, or on or about the outside of such carriage respectively; and the driver of such stage carriage at the time when such offence shall be committed shall also forfeit 5*l*."

Sect. 35. Provided always, "that no child or children in the lap shall be counted as a passenger or passengers under any of the clauses or provisions of this act or of the schedule (A.) hereto annexed; and that no child not in the lap, but under seven years of age, shall be so counted as aforesaid, unless there shall be more than one such child; and if there shall be more than one such child not in the lap, but under seven years of age, then two such children shall be accounted equal to one adult person, and considered as one passenger, and so on in the same proportion."

Sect. 36. "No stage carriage shall be used or employed unless nor until

Sect. 37. "No outside passenger nor any luggage shall be carried on the top or roof of any stage carriage the top or roof of which from the ground shall be more than eight feet nine inches, or the bearing of which on the ground shall be less than four feet six inches from the centre of the track of the right or off wheel to the centre of the track of the left or near wheel; and if any outside passenger or luggage shall be carried on any such carriage in any manner contrary to the directions aforesaid, the driver of such carriage at the time when such offence shall be committed shall forfeit 5*l*."

Certain stage carriages shall not take outside passengers or luggage.

Penalty 5*l*.

The 38, 39, 40, 41, 42 & 44 sections of this act of 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 120, and which imposed restrictions on and regulated the number of outside passengers and the mode of carrying them, are repealed by the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 48.

By the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 48, intituled "An Act to amend an Act of the Second and Third Years of His present Majesty, relating to Stage Carriages in Great Britain; and also to explain and amend an Act of the First and Second Years of His present Majesty, relating to Hackney Carriages used in the Metropolis," [28th August, 1833], reciting, "Whereas an act was passed in the second and third years of the reign of his present majesty, intituled 'An Act to repeal the Duties under the Management of the Commissioners of Stamps on Stage Carriages and on Horses let for Hire in Great Britain, and to grant other Duties in lieu thereof, and also to consolidate and amend the Laws relating thereto,' and it is expedient to alter and amend the said act in the several particulars hereinafter mentioned; it is enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, so much and such part and parts of the said recited act as in any manner regulate or restrict the number of passengers allowed to be carried on the outside of any stage carriage, or regulate or relate to the distribution or placing of or the manner of carrying the outside passengers on any stage carriage, and also so much and such part of the said recited act as requires that a separate division or space shall be allotted for luggage on the top or roof of any stage carriage, shall be and the same is and are hereby repealed: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to repeal or alter any clause of the said recited act by which any penalty is imposed for conveying a greater number of passengers on the outside of any licensed stage carriage than is specified and allowed in and by the licence granted in respect of such carriage."

any licensed stage carriage with four wheels or more, the top or roof of which shall not be more than eight feet and nine inches from the ground, and the bearing of which on the ground shall not be less than four feet six inches from the centre of the track of the right or off wheel to the centre of the track of the left or near wheel, if such carriage shall be licensed to carry any number not more than nine passengers, shall be allowed to carry not more than five of such passengers outside; and if licensed to carry more than nine and not more than twelve passengers, shall be allowed to carry not more than eight of such passengers outside; and if licensed to carry more than twelve and not more than fifteen passengers, shall be allowed to carry not more than eleven of such passengers outside; and if licensed to carry more than fifteen and not more than eighteen passengers, shall be allowed to carry not more than twelve of such passengers outside; and if licensed to carry any greater number than eighteen passengers, shall be allowed to carry not more than two additional passengers outside for every three additional passengers which such carriage shall be so licensed to carry in the whole; provided that in no case a greater number of passengers shall be carried on the outside of any stage carriage than the licence relating thereto shall authorize to be carried on the outside thereof; and if any greater number of outside passengers shall be carried by any stage carriage than as hereinbefore specified and allowed, or if any outside passenger shall be carried by any stage carriage not expressly licensed to carry any outside passenger, the driver (a) of such stage carriage at the time when such offence shall be committed shall forfeit 5*l*."

Sect. 3. "The several numbers of outside passengers by this act allowed to be carried by any such stage carriage as aforesaid shall be reckoned exclusive of the driver and also of the conductor or guard, if there shall be a conductor or guard of such stage carriage; and that no child or children in the lap shall be counted as a passenger or passengers; and that no child not in the lap, but under seven years of age, shall be so counted, unless there shall be more than one such child, and if there shall be more than one such child not in the lap, but under seven years of age, then two of such children shall be accounted equal to one adult person, and considered as one passenger, and so on in the same proportion."

Sect. 4. "No person shall be allowed to sit or be carried upon any luggage [see sect. 117, post, 758], placed on the roof of any stage carriage, and that not more than one passenger or other person shall be allowed to sit or be carried upon the box with the driver of any stage carriage; and that if any person shall sit or be carried upon any luggage placed as aforesaid, or if more than one person besides the driver shall sit or be carried upon the box of any stage carriage, the driver of such stage carriage at the time when any such offence shall be committed shall forfeit 5*l*."

Sect. 5. "All penalties which may be incurred under the provisions of this act may be prosecuted for and recovered by information or complaint before a justice of the peace in the name of any person who will inform or complain in that behalf, by the same ways and means and in the same manner and form as are and is provided for the recovery of any penalty incurred under the said recited act; and all clauses, regulations, and provisions contained in the said recited act, relating to the recovering, levying, or mitigating of the penalties thereby imposed, shall be of full force and effect, and shall be applied and put in execution for the recovering, levying, and mitigating of the penalties by this act imposed, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if such clauses, regulations, and provisions had

By 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 120, s. 43, "no luggage which shall be carried on the top or roof of any stage carriage drawn by four or more horses shall in any case exceed ten feet and nine inches in height from the ground, nor shall any luggage which shall be carried on the top or roof of any stage carriage drawn by two or three horses only in any case exceed ten feet and three inches in height from the ground, measuring to the highest point of any part of such luggage when placed upon the top or roof of any such carriages respectively; and if any such luggage shall in either of the cases aforesaid exceed the height by this act in that behalf limited, the driver of such carriage at the time when such offence shall be committed shall forfeit 5*l*." *Luggage on the top of any stage carriage shall not exceed the height herein specified. Penalty 5*l*.*

Sect. 44. "It shall not be lawful for any person to sit or be carried upon any luggage placed on the roof of any stage carriage, nor upon that part of the roof allotted for luggage; and if any person shall sit or be carried upon any luggage or upon that part of the roof allotted for the same, contrary to the provisions of this act, he shall forfeit 5*l*., and the driver of such carriage at the time when such offence shall be committed shall also forfeit 5*l*." *No person to sit on luggage placed on the roof. Penalty 5*l*.*

Sect. 45. "The proprietor of any stage carriage and the driver thereof shall, when thereunto respectively required by any justice of the peace, or by any constable, or any surveyor of any highway or turnpike road, or by any toll-gate keeper, or any officer of stamp duties, or by any passenger travelling with such carriage, permit and allow such carriage and the luggage thereon to be measured, and the number of passengers in, upon, or about such carriage to be counted; and it shall be lawful for any passenger to require the driver of any stage carriage to stop the same at any toll gate, and to require the toll-gate keeper at such gate to count the number of passengers upon the box, and in, upon, or about such carriage, and to measure and ascertain the height of the luggage thereupon, and to sign a memorandum in writing of the number of such passengers in the inside and on or about the outside of such carriage (distinguishing the number on the box) and of the height of such luggage, and to deliver such memorandum to the person so requiring the number of passengers to be counted or the height of the luggage to be measured; and the toll-gate keeper at every such gate shall provide and keep at such gate a proper measure for measuring the height of any stage carriage and of the luggage thereupon; and if any proprietor of any stage carriage or the driver thereof shall, when thereto respectively required as aforesaid, refuse to permit and allow such carriage and the luggage thereupon to be measured, or the number of inside or outside passengers to be counted, or if such driver shall, on being so required as aforesaid, refuse or neglect to stop such carriage at any toll gate for the pur- *Justices, road surveyors, toll collectors, &c., authorized to cause stage carriages and luggage to be measured and the passengers to be counted. pose aforesaid, such proprietor or such driver so refusing or neglecting as aforesaid shall forfeit 5*l*.; and if any toll-gate keeper shall neglect to provide and keep at any such gate a proper measure for the purposes aforesaid, or shall on being thereunto requested as aforesaid, refuse to count the number of such passengers, or to measure and ascertain the height of such luggage, or to sign a memorandum in writing of the number of such passengers or of the height of such luggage in manner hereinbefore directed, or to deliver such memorandum so signed to the person entitled to require the same, or shall sign or give any memorandum in which any of the particulars aforesaid shall not be truly set forth, every such toll-gate keeper so offending shall forfeit 5*l*.: provided always, that it shall not be lawful for any one passenger to require the driver of any stage carriage to stop the same for any such purpose as aforesaid more than once during any one journey, unless after the counting of such passengers or the measuring of such luggage any additional passenger or passengers shall be taken up, into, or upon such stage carriage, or additional luggage shall be placed on the top or roof thereof during the same journey."

Sect. 46. Provided always, "that none of the regulations in this act contained relating to the plates to be fixed upon any stage carriage, or to any of the particulars to be painted upon any stage carriage, or relating to the placing of outside passengers or the luggage to be carried on the roof of any stage carriage, shall extend to any mail coach employed in the service of the general post office, built or constructed according to the regulations of the postmaster general, and carrying not more than four outside passengers."

Sect. 47. "If the driver of any stage carriage drawn by three or more horses shall at any place where such carriage shall stop quit the box of such carriage, or the horses drawing the same, without delivering the reins into the hands of some fit and proper person, or before some fit and proper person shall be placed and shall stand at the heads of the horses or some of them belonging thereto, and shall have the command thereof; or if any person so placed and standing at the heads of such horses shall leave such horses before some other proper person shall be placed and stand in like manner and have the command of such horses, or before the driver of such stage carriage shall have returned and seated himself upon the box and taken the reins; or if the driver of any stage carriage shall permit any passenger or any person other than himself to drive the horses drawing such carriage; or if the driver of any stage carriage shall quit the box of such carriage without reasonable occasion, or for a longer time than such occasion shall absolutely require; or if the driver of any stage carriage shall suffer any plate or the number on any plate fixed or placed thereon pursuant to this act to be in any manner concealed from public view, or shall suffer any such plate to be inverted, or so fixed or placed that the number thereon shall not be plainly and distinctly legible; or if any person travelling as guard to any stage carriage shall, whilst the horses are harnessed or in the act of being harnessed thereto, and whilst any passenger shall be in, upon, or about such carriage, discharge any fire arms, except for the necessary defence of such carriage or of the passengers or luggage being in or about the same; or if the driver or conductor or guard of any stage carriage shall neglect to take due care of any luggage whatsoever carried or to be carried by such carriage; or if any such driver or conductor or guard shall demand or receive for the fare of any passenger more than the sum which such passenger shall be liable to pay, or more than the money properly chargeable for the carriage of any luggage; or if any such driver or conductor or guard shall, when thereto required, neglect or refuse faithfully to account to his employer for all monies received by him in respect of any passenger or any luggage which shall be carried by such carriage; or if any such driver or conductor or guard shall assault or use abusive or insulting language to any person travelling or about to travel or having travelled as a passenger with or by such carriage, or to any person accompanying or attending upon any such passenger in coming to or going from any such carriage, every such offender in any of the several cases aforesaid shall forfeit 5*l*."

Sect. 48. "If the driver or conductor or guard of any stage carriage, or any other person having the care thereof, or employed in, upon, or about such carriage, shall, through intoxication or negligence, or by wanton and furious driving, or by or through any other misconduct, endanger the safety of any passenger or other person, or shall injure or endanger the property of the owner or proprietor of such stage carriage or of any other person, every such person so offending shall forfeit 5*l*."

As to death occasioned by furious driving, &c., see "Homicide," Vol. III. p. 315, 316.

By 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 120, s. 49, whenever it shall happen that the driver or conductor or guard of any stage carriage shall have committed any offence against this act for the commission whereof any penalty is by this act imposed upon such driver or conductor or guard, and not upon the proprietor of such carriage, and such driver or conductor or guard shall not be known, or being known cannot be found, then the proprietor of such carriage shall be liable to every such penalty as if he had been the driver or conductor or guard of such carriage at the time when such offence was committed; provided always, that if any such proprietor shall make out, to the satisfaction of the justice of the peace before whom any complaint or information shall be heard, by sufficient evidence, not resting on his own testimony, that the offence was committed by such driver or conductor or guard without the privity or knowledge of such proprietor, and that no profit, advantage, or benefit, either directly or indirectly, has accrued or can accrue to such proprietor therefrom, and that he has used his endeavour to find out such driver or conductor or guard, and given all reasonable information in answer to inquiries respecting him, such justice shall discharge the proprietor from such penalty, and shall levy the same upon such driver or conductor or guard when found."

Owners to be liable for penalties in cases where driver or guard is not known or cannot be found.

Sect. 50. "The proprietor or company of proprietors of every railway in Great Britain along which any passengers shall, after the tenth day of October 1832, be conveyed for hire in or upon any carriage drawn or impelled by the power of steam, or otherwise, shall from time to time keep and cause to be entered in a book or books to be kept for that purpose, and which shall at all times be open for the inspection and examination of any authorized officer of stamp duties, a just and true account of the number of passengers which shall be conveyed daily for hire in manner aforesaid along any such railway or any part thereof, and of the number of miles which such passengers shall respectively be so conveyed; and every such proprietor or company shall, within five days next after the first Monday in every calendar month, deliver to the commissioners of stamps, or to such officer as they shall authorize to receive the same, a true copy of the account by this act directed to be kept, so far as the same shall relate to the passengers conveyed as aforesaid, during the preceding four or five weeks (as the case may be), that is to say, from the first Monday in the preceding month up to and including the first Monday of the month in which such account shall be rendered; and to and with every such account there shall be annexed and delivered an affidavit or affirmation (to be taken before any one of his majesty's justices of the peace) of the secretary, chief clerk, or accountant of such proprietor or company, stating that the deponent or affirmant has examined and checked such account with the books of the said proprietor or company, and that to the best of the knowledge, information, and belief of such deponent or affirmant such account doth contain and is a true and faithful account of the several matters and things required by this act; and such proprietor or company shall at the time of delivering every such account pay or cause to be paid to the receiver general of stamp duties, or to the officer authorized by the said commissioners to receive the same for the use of his majesty, the duties chargeable under this act for or in respect of the passengers so conveyed according to such account."

Sect. 51. "The proprietor or company of proprietors of every such railway shall, before any passengers shall be conveyed along the same in manner aforesaid, after the tenth day of October 1832, give security by bond to his majesty, with a condition that such proprietor or company shall from time to time keep and cause to be kept and rendered in the manner directed by this act the accounts by this act required to be kept and rendered by such proprietor and company respectively; and that such proprietor or company shall from time to time, upon every reasonable request of any authorized officer of stamp duties, produce and show to such officer, and permit him to inspect and examine, all and every the books and book of such proprietor or company in which any such account shall be contained or entered; and that such proprietor or company shall well and truly pay or cause to be paid for the use of his majesty, at the times and in manner directed by this act, all and every the duties which shall from time to time become chargeable under this act for or in respect of the passengers which shall be so conveyed as aforesaid along such railway; and that such proprietor or company shall well and truly do and perform and cause to be done and performed all such acts, matters, and things as by this act are required or directed to be done or performed by or on the part or behalf of such proprietor or company; and every such bond shall be taken with sufficient sureties to the satisfaction of the commissioners of stamps, and in such sum as the said commissioners may judge to be the probable amount of the duties which may become payable by such proprietor or company under or by virtue of this act during the period of one quarter of a year; and every such security shall be renewed from time to time whenever and so often as such bond shall be forfeited, or as the parties to the same or any of them shall die, or become bankrupt or insolvent, or reside in parts beyond the seas, and also whenever and so often as the said commissioners shall in their discretion require the same to be renewed; and if any proprietor or company of proprietors of any such railway as aforesaid shall, after the said tenth day of October, convey or permit or suffer to be conveyed in manner aforesaid, along such railway or any part thereof, any passengers for hire, without having first given such security by bond to his majesty in manner hereinbefore directed, or if any such proprietor or company shall refuse or neglect to renew such security, whenever and so often as the same is or shall by or in pursuance of this act be required to be renewed, such proprietor or company shall forfeit 100*l.* for every day during the period for which there shall be any refusal, neglect, or default to give or renew such security as aforesaid."

Sect. 52. Provided always, "that it shall be lawful for the lords commissioners of his majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them, from time to time, where and whenever they shall deem it expedient, to compound and agree with the proprietor or company of proprietors of any such railway as aforesaid for any sum or sums of money less than the amount of the duties which may be or become chargeable under this act, to be paid by such proprietor or company in lieu of the said duties for or in respect of the passengers conveyed or to be conveyed along such railway, during any period of time not exceeding the term of seven years, and from time to time to renew any such composition for any further period, not exceeding the term aforesaid, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon by and between the said lords commissioners and such proprietor or company."

Sect. 53. "And for securing the duties granted by this act for and in respect of horses let for hire, and on licences to let such horses, be it enacted, that the said duties on horses let for hire shall be deemed to attach and be payable upon or in respect of every horse let for hire, or used either as a saddle horse or for drawing any carriage or vehicle conveying any person, and upon or in respect of every horse used for drawing any mourning coach or hearse, 'subject to the exemption immediately hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) provided always, that the said duties shall not be deemed to attach or be payable upon or in respect of any horse used in drawing any public stage carriage duly licensed under the authority of this act, nor upon or in respect of any horse used in drawing any hackney carriage which shall be duly licensed by the commissioners of stamps or their proper officer, where the same shall be used to go no greater distance than ten miles from the general post office in the city of London, provided such hackney car-

Where the defendant, an inn-keeper, contracted with a coach proprietor to furnish him with two additional horses to assist in dragging a stage-coach, carrying the mail, up a hill about three quarters of a mile in length, in the course of each journey, for which he was to receive a guinea per week,—held, that such horses were not subject to the post-horse duty under either of the statutes 25 Geo. III. c. 51, or 44 Geo. III. c. 48 (now repealed), imposing such duty, as the stage-coach duty is to be regulated by the number of passengers such coach is licensed to carry, and not by the horses employed to draw it. (Dowse v. Garrett, 1 Bing. 107; 7 Moore, 441, S. C.) A coach licensed under a local act, to be used as a stage, is not protected by such licence from the post-horse duties, if hired wholly by an individual to perform a journey; and the proprietor is liable to account to the farmer of those duties for one-fourth of the hire, if let by him to carry out and bring back, notwithstanding such hiring may be to go to and return from some place within the distance and on the road to the place specified in his licence, and although he receive no greater hire than his fare would have been, had he proceeded full on the usual journey as a stage. (Fage v. Cokram, 1 Price, 317.)

A composition for saddle-horses under the assessed tax-act, 59 Geo. III. c. 51, was held not to protect the owner of such horses from his liability to pay the duty imposed by the 1 Geo. IV. c. 88, s. 3, where the same horses were let to hire to be used in travelling. (Ramsden v. Dodgkinson, 2 D. & R. 625.)

Mourning coaches were not exempted under the 44 Geo. III. c. 98, by reason of carrying a corpse, if living persons went along in it. (White v. Beasley, 1 B. & Ald. 166.)

A carriage let to hire for less than twenty-eight days (not being let by the mile or stage), was not required to be numbered by the 48 Geo. III. c. 98. (Sergeant v. Smirthwaite, Wightw. 73.)

In Smith v. Moss, 3 M. & Sel. 15, it was considered that, under a deputation from the commissioners of stamps, authorizing H. and S., collectors of the post-horse duties, to grant licences to persons to let post-horses, a licence by H., for S. and self, was good enough.

In Radford v. M'Intosh, 3 T. R. 632, it was held, in an action brought for penalties on the post-horse act by the farmer of the tax, that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to give in evidence his appointment by the lords of the treasury or the commissioners of the stamp duties authorized by them; and that proof that the defendant had accounted with him as farmer of the duties was held sufficient.

riage shall be regularly and constantly used for the purpose of standing and plying for hire in the public streets or roads within the distance of five miles from the said general post office; nor shall the said duties be deemed to attach or be payable upon or in respect of any horse used in drawing any carriage kept or usually employed for the conveyance of fish."

Sect. 54. "In the case of calculating the amount of duty to be paid when the same is expressed in schedule (A.) to this act annexed to be one-fifth part of the sum charged for the letting of any horse for hire, such one-fifth part shall be calculated upon the whole sum charged for and in respect of such horse so let for hire, and of the carriage (if any) used therewith; and that in calculating the amount of such duty no fractional part of any sum of money amounting to a less sum than one penny shall be charged; and that in all cases the inn, house, or other place at which any person shall be licensed to let horses for hire shall be deemed to be the place of letting for hire of every horse by him so let for hire; and that where any horse which shall have been let for hire at any period of time shall be retained and kept beyond the expiration of the time for which the same shall have been let for hire, without a new hiring, such horse shall be deemed, so far as relates to the duties imposed by this act, to have been retained and kept upon a new hiring, similar to that for which such horse was originally let for hire."

Sect. 55. "And be it enacted, that the commissioners of stamps, or any two or more of them, or any collector or other officer of stamp duties duly authorized by the said commissioners for that purpose, shall grant to any person who shall apply for the same a licence to let horses for hire; and all such licences which shall be granted between the 31st day of January and the 16th day of March in any year shall be dated on the 1st day of February in that year, and all such licences which shall be granted at any other time shall be dated on the day on which the same shall be granted; and all such licences respectively shall have effect and continue in force from the day of the date thereof until the 31st day of January next ensuing, both inclusive, and no longer; and no person required by this act to be so licensed shall, unless he shall have obtained a proper licence in that behalf, let any horse for hire to be used in any of the cases aforesaid, upon pain to forfeit for every horse so let for hire as aforesaid the sum of 10*l*.; and every person so licensed shall be deemed a licensed postmaster within the meaning and for all the purposes of this act."

Sect. 56. "If any licensed postmaster shall die, or become bankrupt or insolvent, it shall be lawful for his executor or administrator, assignee or trustee, or for any other person succeeding to or taking possession of his inn, house, or other place, to let horses for hire in manner aforesaid until such person shall procure such licence as hereinbefore directed; and such person shall not be liable to the penalty imposed upon persons letting horses for hire without being licensed in that behalf, provided such licence be taken out within thirty days next after the death, bankruptcy, or insolvency of any such licensed postmaster; and such person shall be subject to the same rules, regulations, and charges, and shall be liable to account for and pay the duties hereby imposed, in like manner as such deceased or bankrupt or insolvent postmaster was subject and liable to."

Sect. 57. "Every collector of the duties on horses let for hire shall from time to time, once in every three months, make out and deliver or transmit to the commissioners of stamps at the head office for stamps in Westminster an account or list, in writing, of all the licences granted by him as such collector to any person to let horses for hire, and such list or account shall specify the christian names and surnames of the persons licensed, their places of residence, the names of the inns (if any), or other places at which they shall be licensed to let horses for hire, and the date of every such licence; and any collector who shall neglect or refuse to deliver or transmit any such account or list in manner aforesaid shall forfeit 100*l*."

Sect. 58. "No licensed postmaster shall by virtue of any such licence be authorized to let any horse for hire at any inn, house, or place not specified in such licence, and that for and in respect of every inn, house, or other place at which any such postmaster shall let any horse for hire a separate and distinct licence shall be taken out by such postmaster under this act; and if any person shall let any horse for hire at any inn, house, or place not named or described in some such licence granted to him, he shall forfeit 20*l*."

Sect. 59. "Every licensed postmaster [see sect. 117, post, 758] shall cause his christian name and surname, together with the words 'Licensed to let Horses for Hire,' to be painted in legible characters of at least two inches in height, and of a proper and proportionate breadth, upon a sign or board either hung out from or fixed upon some conspicuous part of the front of the house, stables, or out-offices at every inn, house, or place at which such postmaster may be so licensed, in order to denote that such person is a letter of horses for hire at such inn, house, or place; and any licensed postmaster who shall let for hire any horse at any inn, house, or place without having such sign or board hung out or fixed as aforesaid shall forfeit 5*l*."

Sect. 60. "Where any licensed postmaster shall keep any carriages to be furnished at the same time with any horse or horses by him let for hire by the mile (except hearses and mourning coaches), such postmaster shall, before any such carriage shall be so furnished or used, cause all such carriages to be numbered with progressive numbers, beginning with number one, and proceeding upwards to the highest number of carriages which such postmaster shall so keep, and shall also paint, in one or more straight line or lines on the outside pannel of each door of every such carriage which shall have a door thereto, and on some conspicuous part outwardly on each side of every such carriage which shall not have a door thereto, the christian name and surname of such postmaster, and the name of the city, town, or place where such carriage shall be kept, in legible characters and figures of a colour different from and opposite to the colour of the ground whereon the same shall be painted, each letter to be at least one inch in height, and each figure to be at least one inch and a half in height, and each of a proportionate breadth; and such postmaster shall continue such letters and figures on every such carriage so long as such carriage shall be kept for the purpose aforesaid, varying the numbers on such carriages from time to time as occasion shall require, so as to make the same correspond with the actual number of such carriages which he shall then keep; and if any licensed postmaster shall neglect or omit to number or paint any such carriage in manner aforesaid, or shall paint or cause to be painted thereon any false or fictitious name or place of residence, or any higher number than the greatest number of such carriages which he shall then keep, or if any licensed postmaster shall keep two or more such carriages with the same number painted thereon, or shall continue any number upon any such carriage after he shall cease to keep any number of such carriages corresponding therewith, he shall forfeit 10*l*."

Sect. 61. Sect. 62. "Every licensed postmaster who shall let any horse for hire shall, by himself or his servants previous to the using of any such horse, deliver to the person hiring such horse, or to the postillion or person to be employed to drive such horse, a ticket properly filled up with respect to all the particulars hereinbefore mentioned which shall be applicable to the hiring of every such horse; and any postmaster who shall neglect or refuse to deliver such ticket according to the directions of this act shall forfeit 10*l*."

Sect. 63. "No person hiring any horse shall be compelled to pay for a greater number of miles for the hire of such horse than shall be expressed upon the ticket by this act directed to be delivered as aforesaid, relating to the hiring of such horse; and any licensed postmaster who shall insert or cause or permit to be inserted in any such ticket the name of any other town or place than the town or place to which or to and from which the horse shall be hired to go or to go and return, or a less number of miles than such horse shall be actually hired to go, shall forfeit 10*l*.; and it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps, if they shall so think fit, after conviction of such offender, to refuse to grant to him any such licence in future."

Sect. 64. "Every person who shall receive from the person letting any horse for hire any ticket relating to the hiring of such horse shall deliver or cause to be delivered every such ticket to the toll-gate keeper at the first toll gate through which such horse shall pass or go; and every person who shall deliver to any toll-gate keeper any such ticket as aforesaid, relating to the hiring of any horse let for hire in any other manner than by the mile, shall ask for and receive from such toll-gate keeper the proper exchange ticket or check ticket containing the several particulars hereinbefore mentioned, which shall be applicable to the hiring of any such horse, and every such exchange ticket or check ticket shall, on demand of the toll-gate keeper, be produced and shown at every toll gate through which such horse shall afterwards pass or go during the journey, or within the time for which such horse shall have been let for hire."

Sect. 65. "The keeper of every toll gate through which any horse let for hire shall first pass shall demand of the person using such horse, or of the postillion or person employed to drive the same, the ticket issued for and in respect of such horse; and every such toll-gate keeper shall deliver to the person using any horse let for hire in any other manner than by the mile, or to the postillion or person employed to drive such horse, an exchange ticket or check ticket properly filled up with respect to the particulars in that behalf hereinbefore mentioned, and shall receive such original ticket, and write his name thereon, and file the same; and it shall be lawful for the keeper of any toll gate to prevent any horse let for hire from passing through any such gate, unless the proper ticket, exchange ticket, or check ticket required by this act, containing and specifying the particulars in that behalf hereinbefore mentioned, which shall be applicable to the hiring of such horse, shall be first delivered or produced and shown to such toll-gate keeper, or the person using such horse shall pay to such toll-gate keeper 1*s*. 9*d*. in respect of every such horse, which sum such toll-gate keeper is hereby authorized to demand and receive for his own use and benefit; and any toll-gate keeper who shall neglect to demand or shall refuse to receive any ticket by this act directed to be delivered to him, or who shall neglect or refuse to write his name thereon, or to file the same when delivered, or who shall neglect or refuse to give any ticket by this act directed to be given by him in exchange, or who shall deliver any exchange ticket or check ticket without having first received the necessary ticket containing the particulars in that behalf hereinbefore mentioned, or who shall make or suffer to be made any alteration whatever in any ticket after the same shall have come to his possession, or who shall deliver any ticket hereinbefore directed to be received and filed by him to any person other than the person duly authorized to receive the same, or who shall permit any person to inspect any ticket by him received and filed as aforesaid other than the person duly authorized to receive the same, or who shall demand or receive, or shall agree to take or accept, any less sum of money than he is by this act authorized to demand and receive and retain to his own use, shall forfeit 10*l*."

Allowances to be made to toll gate keepers for the tickets delivered by them.

Sect. 69. "In and across any public road on which any toll gate shall not be erected sufficient for the purposes of this act it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps to cause gates and bars to be erected for the receipt of the tickets directed to be issued in pursuance of this act, and to place a proper person at every such gate or bar, who shall have power and authority to collect such tickets, and to demand the money from the traveller for not producing and showing any such ticket, in like manner as any toll-gate keeper is by this act authorized to collect and demand the same; and every such person shall be subject to the same penalties for any thing done or omitted contrary to this act as any toll-gate keeper is by this act subject and liable to, and every such gate or bar shall be deemed and taken to be a toll gate for all the purposes of this act."

Commissioners of stamps may erect gates in certain cases for the receipt tickets.

Sect. 71. "Every licensed postmaster shall from time to time, whenever he shall be thereunto requested by any collector or other authorized officer of stamp duties, as well during the continuance of any licence to such postmaster as at or after the expiration thereof, well and faithfully account to such collector or officer respectively for all the tickets which shall have been delivered to such postmaster, in pursuance of this act, under or in consequence of any such licence as aforesaid; and such postmaster shall also, on demand, re-deliver to such collector or officer all such tickets as shall not be satisfactorily accounted for in manner aforesaid, or in default thereof such postmaster shall be liable to pay for every ticket not accounted for as aforesaid after the rate of 1*s*. for every horse specified or expressed by figures or otherwise upon such ticket and in the receipt given by such postmaster for the same; and such rate or sum of 1*s*. for every horse specified or expressed as aforesaid shall be deemed to be the value of every such ticket, and shall be a debt due to his majesty from such postmaster, and shall be recovered accordingly; and if any such postmaster shall neglect or refuse to account to such collector or officer in the manner directed by this act for every or any such ticket as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to pay to such collector or officer the value of every or any such ticket as shall not be satisfactorily accounted for, and as shall not be re-delivered, on demand, to such collector or officer in the manner directed by this act, every such postmaster so offending shall forfeit 10*l*. over and above the value of every such ticket not so accounted for or re-delivered."

Sect. 72. "Any person who, with intent to defraud his majesty or any other person, shall falsely make, forge, or counterfeit, or shall cause or procure to be falsely made, forged, or counterfeited, or shall wilfully aid or assist in the false-making, forging, or counterfeiting of any ticket by this act authorized or directed to be used, or shall utter or publish as true any such false, forged, or counterfeited ticket, shall forfeit 50*l*."

Sect. 73. Sect. 75. "Every licensed postmaster who shall let any horse for hire shall enter or cause to be entered, in such his stamp office weekly account, the several particulars by this act required to be inserted therein, on the day on which any such horse shall be so let for hire or so given up and returned as aforesaid, or on the day next immediately following, or in default thereof he shall forfeit 40*s*."

Sect. 77. "Every licensed postmaster residing within the distance of five miles from the head office for stamps shall attend and deliver his stamp office weekly accounts, and shall pay the duties for which he shall be accountable either to the commissioners of stamps at the said head office, or to some collector of the said duties, at such place and at such time as shall be appointed for that purpose by a notice to be given upon the blank forms of the stamp office weekly accounts, which shall from time to time be delivered to such postmaster for the purpose of making therein the entries required by this act, provided such place be not at a greater distance than two miles from the said head office ; and every licensed postmaster not residing within five miles of the said head office shall attend and deliver his stamp office weekly accounts, and shall pay the duties for which he shall be accountable to the collector of the said duties authorized to receive the same at such place in the market town in which such postmaster shall reside, or (in case he shall not reside in a market town) in the market town nearest to his place of residence, and at such time as shall be appointed for that purpose by a notice to be given in manner aforesaid, under the penalty of 20*l*. for every default in not attending to deliver or in not delivering any such account at the time and in manner aforesaid, and double the amount of the duties due and payable by such postmaster, so far as the same can be ascertained ; and in default of the delivery of any such account, the said duties may be computed by the tickets which such postmaster shall have issued or caused to be issued, under the provisions of this act, by calculating the rate of duty imposed by this act upon the number of horses, and for the number of miles or days, or otherwise, as the case may be, specified or expressed upon such tickets respectively, without regard to the option of such postmaster, in any case, of paying one fifth part of the sum charged for the hire of any of such horses for the duty on the letting thereof."

Sect. 78. "Every licensed postmaster shall, at the respective times of delivering his account and paying the money due thereon, make and subscribe, in the presence of the collector or other officer authorized to receive such account, a declaration of the truth of the account then delivered in the form following :

' I, A. B., do declare, that the stamp office weekly account hereunto annexed doth contain a just and true statement of the number of horses which have been let for hire by me or my servants, or on my account and behalf, from the as aforesaid during the time aforesaid.' 2 & 3 Wil. 4, c. 120.

And if any licensed postmaster shall refuse to make and subscribe such declaration in the manner by this act required, it shall nevertheless be lawful for the collector or other such officer as aforesaid to demand and receive the money due upon such account, and such postmaster shall forfeit 20*l.* for such refusal." Penalty for refusal, 20*l.*

Sect. 79. Provided always, "that it shall not be lawful for any person to inform, sue, or prosecute, either in any court of record or before any justice of the peace, or otherwise, for recovery of the said penalty of 20*l.* and double duty for any default in not attending to deliver or in not delivering any such account as aforesaid, or for recovery of the said penalty of 20*l.* for refusing to make and subscribe any such declaration as aforesaid, without having first obtained the consent in writing of two or more of the commissioners of stamps for that purpose, unless the action, suit, or prosecution for any such penalty as aforesaid shall be carried on by the solicitor of stamps in England or Scotland respectively; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding." Consent of the commissioners of stamps requisite to prosecute for the two last-mentioned penalties.

Sect. 80. "The commissioners of stamps, or the collectors or other officers aforesaid, at the time of their settling the respective accounts of the several licensed postmasters in manner hereinbefore mentioned, shall allow to such postmasters, for their own use and benefit, and shall deduct from the amount payable by them on such their respective accounts, after the rate of threepence in the pound out of the monies by them regularly accounted for and paid pursuant to the directions of this act." Allowance to be made to postmasters out of the monies duly accounted for and paid.

Sect. 81. "Every licensed postmaster who shall wilfully conceal the letting of any horse for hire, or who shall make or render any false or fraudulent account touching or concerning the duties payable by him upon or in respect of horses let for hire, or who shall be guilty of any other fraudulent contrivance, device, or pretence whatsoever, with intent or design to defraud his majesty, or any person, of any of the duties imposed by this act for or in respect of horses let for hire, shall forfeit fifty pounds; and it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps, if they shall so think fit, after judgment obtained against the offender, to refuse to grant any fresh licence to any such offender in future." Penalty on postmasters for wilful frauds.

Sect. 82. "Every person letting any horse for hire shall be chargeable with the payment of the duty by this act imposed with respect of every such letting for hire, whether such person shall receive such duty or not, and every person who shall receive the hire for any horse shall be considered as the person to whom the duties by this act granted shall be paid, and shall be chargeable with the same as if such person were the actual proprietor of such horse, although the same may be the property of some other licensed person; and whenever it shall happen that any licensed postmaster at whose inn or residence any person shall apply to change horses cannot furnish horses to convey such person on his journey, and such person shall proceed on his journey with horses hired at and coming from any other inn or place, such licensed postmaster shall issue to any person demanding the same a fresh ticket, properly filled up, for the next stage of such journey, and shall receive the duty payable in respect thereof, and shall charge himself with such duty in the same manner as if such horses had been hired from such postmaster." Persons letting horses shall be chargeable with the duty thereon.

Sect. 83. "If any person not licensed to let horses for hire shall let any horse for hire, such person shall be chargeable with the duty by this act made payable for and in respect of every horse which shall be so let for hire in the same manner as if he had obtained such licence as aforesaid, and whether such duty shall be received from the person hiring such horse or not; and every such person so letting any horse for hire shall, upon one Postmaster who cannot furnish horses shall give tickets for horses furnished by others, and receive the duty thereon.

Persons not licensed letting horses for hire shall be accountable for the duties.

week's notice in writing for that purpose to him given by any collector of the said duties for the county, district, or place where he shall so let any horse for hire, deliver to such collector a true account in writing, signed by such person, of every such horse which he shall have let for hire and shall not then have already accounted for, and of the manner in which every such horse shall have been let for hire, and of the duty payable in respect thereof, in the same manner as by this act is required to be done by licensed postmasters, and shall also verify such account by oath (to be administered by such collector), and shall thereupon pay to such collector the amount of such duty; and in case of any refusal or neglect so to do, then he shall forfeit twenty pounds for every default in not delivering such account verified as aforesaid, and double the amount of the duty which he shall be then chargeable with: provided always, that where any such notice shall have been given as aforesaid, then upon the delivery of such account in pursuance of such notice, and upon payment of all duty due thereon, and upon taking out such licence as ought to have been taken out previously thereto, the person so delivering such account shall be discharged from any penalty which he may be then liable to in consequence of having let for hire any horse mentioned in such account without having obtained such licence as aforesaid."

Sect. 84. "Every person in any city, town, or place, who shall let for hire or use any horse for drawing any carriage to be used as a hackney carriage to any distance not exceeding five miles from the general post office of any such city, town, or place, shall be subject and liable to the payment of the sums following, in lieu of and as a composition for the duties by this act chargeable upon horses let for hire; (that is to say,) the sum of five shillings per week for or in respect of all or any horses let for hire, or used for drawing every such carriage when drawn by two horses; and the sum of three shillings per week for or in respect of any horse or horses let for hire, or used for drawing any such carriage when drawn by one horse; and such person shall not be required, in respect of such horses so let for hire or used as last aforesaid, to keep the weekly accounts hereby directed to be kept or to deliver the tickets hereby directed to be delivered by persons letting horses for hire: provided always, that if any horse used for drawing any such carriage shall go a greater distance than five miles from any such general post office as aforesaid, the person letting for hire or using any such horse shall be subject to all the rules and regulations of this act in respect of horses let for hire, and shall be chargeable with the duties by this act imposed in respect of horses let for hire: provided also, that the person letting for hire or using any horse for drawing any such carriage as aforesaid, shall take out a licence expressly authorizing him so to do, and shall cause every such carriage to be numbered, and shall cause his christian name and surname, and the name of the city, town, or place, to be painted and inscribed upon the outside pannel of each door, or upon some conspicuous part of such carriage, in like manner as by this act is before directed in respect of carriages kept to be furnished or used with horses let for hire, and under and subject to the like penalties as are by this act imposed upon persons neglecting to take out licences, or neglecting to number or cause to be numbered any carriage kept to be furnished or used as aforesaid, or neglecting to paint or cause to be painted thereon the name of the person letting for hire or using any such horse with such carriage, and the name of the city, town, or place, where such carriage shall be kept; and every person letting or using any horse for hire, for drawing such carriage used as a hackney carriage as aforesaid, shall attend and pay the said weekly duties at such times and places as persons licensed to let horses for hire are required by this act to do, and shall be subject to the like penalty for any neglect or default in attending and paying such duties as aforesaid: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend to exempt from the payment of the general duties by this act imposed in respect of horses let for hire any person letting horses for hire to draw any such carriage, unless such carriage shall be regularly and constantly used for the purpose of plying for hire in the public streets of some city or town as a hackney carriage ; and that in all informations, actions, suits, or other proceedings whatsoever respecting the payment of any duty, or the recovery of any penalty, in respect of any horse used in drawing any such carriage, the proof of such carriage being regularly and constantly used for the purpose aforesaid shall be upon the person letting such horse for hire: and provided also, that nothing herein contained relating to the payment of such composition as aforesaid shall extend to any horse or horses used for drawing any hackney carriage at any place within the distance of five miles from the general post office in the City of London."

Duties on horses let for hire not exceeding 50*l.* recoverable by distress, on complaint made before a justice of the peace.

Sect. 85. "If any person liable under the provisions of this act to account for and pay any duty, not exceeding in amount the sum of 50*l.*, for or in respect of horses let for hire, shall refuse or neglect to account for and pay such duty according to the directions of this act, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace having jurisdiction where such horses shall have been let for hire, and such justice is hereby required, on complaint made to him, to summon the party complained of, and any witnesses on either side, to be and appear before the said justice or before any other justice of the peace at a time and place to be appointed for that purpose; and either on the appearance of the party complained of, or in default thereof, it shall be lawful for such justice, or any other justice present at the time and place appointed for such appearance, to proceed to examine into the matter of fact, and on due proof being made of the sum due and owing for such duty as aforesaid by the voluntary confession of the party, or by the oath of one or more witness or witnesses, to grant a warrant to any constable or other peace officer, or to any collector of the said duties, or any other officer of stamp duties, directing him to distrain every such person by his goods and chattels, and also to seize and take the carriages, horses, harness, and other things by this act made subject and liable to such duty for the amount thereof, and of all the costs, charges, and expenses of obtaining such warrant, and of the proceedings incident or relating thereto; and it shall be lawful for such constable or other peace officer, or collector or officer of stamp duties, and he is hereby required, to make such distress and seizure accordingly, and the distress so to be taken to detain and keep for the space of five days, at the costs and charges of the person distrained upon; and if the amount of such duty, and of all the costs, charges, and expenses aforesaid, shall not be paid within such space of five days, then such constable or other peace officer, or collector or officer of stamp duties, shall cause the goods and chattels, carriages, horses, harness, and other things so seized or taken, to be sold in the manner directed by this act, and shall render the overplus (if any) of the money arising by the sale thereof, after deducting and retaining the amount of such duty, and all the costs, charges, and expenses aforesaid, as well as the charges and expenses of the sale, to the person so distrained upon, or to the owner of the carriages, horses, harness, or other things so seized and taken as aforesaid; and for the purpose of taking such distress it shall be lawful for such constable or other peace officer, and for such collector or officer of stamp duties, in the presence of any constable or other peace officer, where any refusal or resistances shall be made, to break open, in the day-time, any house, building, or place where any such carriages, horses, harness, or other articles and things, or any goods or chattels to be seized or taken under such warrant as aforesaid, shall be; and if no distress can be had or taken whereon to levy such duty, costs, charges, and expenses, or in case an insufficient distress only can be found and shall be taken, then it shall be lawful for the justice by whom such warrant shall be granted to commit the person by or from whom such duty, costs, charges, and expenses, or any part thereof, shall remain due or owing, to the common gaol or house of correction, there to remain until all such duty, and all costs, charges, and expenses, or so much thereof as shall remain, after deducting therefrom the proceeds of the sale of any insufficient distress which may have been taken and sold, shall be fully paid and satisfied."

Sect. 86. "From and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for the lords commissioners of his majesty's treasury, at any time and from time to time, as it shall be thought expedient, either by themselves or by the commissioners of stamps by them authorized for that purpose, to let to farm the several duties by this act granted in respect of horses let for hire to any persons who shall be willing to farm the said duties or any part thereof in separate divisions or districts, according to the regulations and in the manner hereinafter mentioned: provided always, that it shall not be lawful to let to farm the said duties or any part thereof, at any one time, for any longer period or term than three years from the day on which any such letting to farm shall commence and take effect."

Sect. 87. "A notice of one calendar month at least shall be given by the said lords commissioners of the treasury or by the commissioners of stamps, in the London Gazette, of the time and place of letting to farm the said duties or any part thereof, specifying the divisions or districts the duties within which it is intended to let to farm, and also the place or office at which proposals for taking to farm such duties, or any part thereof, shall be delivered."

Sect. 88. "No such proposals shall be proceeded upon unless the same be signed by and in the proper names of the parties proposing to become bidders, and specifying the places of their abode, nor unless such proposals shall have been delivered as aforesaid at least three days previous to the day mentioned in the London Gazette for letting to farm the duties to which such proposals shall relate."

Sect. 89. "The biddings for such duties shall be conducted under such regulations as shall be established for that purpose by the lords commissioners of the treasury, or by the commissioners of stamps duly authorized as aforesaid, and that the person who shall be the highest bidder shall be the farmer or renter of the said duties, or such part thereof as shall be then put up to farm, for such term, not exceeding three years as aforesaid, as may be determined on, and as shall be inserted in the London Gazette; and such person shall execute a contract, to be prepared in pursuance of this act, containing such covenants, provisoes, and conditions as the said lords commissioners, or the commissioners of stamps authorized as aforesaid, shall deem necessary or expedient for securing the payment of the money or yearly rent contracted for, as well as for securing and compelling a due compliance with the terms and regulations of this act; and such person shall also give security by bond to his majesty, with three or more sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said lords commissioners or of the commissioners of stamps, for securing the performance of the several covenants, clauses, and agreements contained in such contract, and also for securing the payment of the said money or yearly rent so contracted for to the receiver-general of stamp duties, at the head office for stamps in Westminster, in equal portions, by eight several payments in the year, on the days to be fixed and appointed, before any such letting to farm as aforesaid."

Sect. 90. "It shall be lawful for the said lords commissioners of the treasury, or the said commissioners of stamps authorized as aforesaid, to appoint the time for making a deposit of a sum of money, and the amount thereof, on account of the rent to be paid by the person who shall be declared the farmer of any of the said duties hereby allowed to be farmed; and in case any such person shall fail to make such deposit at the time appointed, or shall fail to execute a proper contract in writing, and to give satisfactory security for the payment of the rent, and the due performance of such contract, in the manner directed by this act, within the time to be appointed for that purpose, it shall be lawful for the said lords commissioners, or the commissioners of stamps authorized as aforesaid, to declare the bidding and contract of such person to be null and void, and the deposit thereon made (if any) to be forfeited."

Sect 91. "In case any of the said duties to arise in any district shall not be let to farm at the time mentioned in such advertisement for want of a sufficient bidding for such duties, or in case the bidding or contract of any person who shall have been declared the best bidder for or the farmer of any of the said duties shall be declared or shall become null and void, it shall be lawful for the said lords commissioners, or the commissioners of stamps authorized as aforesaid, from time to time, whenever any such event shall happen, to appoint such future day as they shall judge most proper for letting to farm the said duties to arise in such district in the manner and upon the like notice as hereinbefore directed, or to receive proposals for farming such duties, and to let the same to farm by private contract, for any such period of time as aforesaid: provided always, that no contract for letting to farm the said duties shall be made with any licensed postmaster, nor with any person for the use or on behalf of any licensed postmaster, nor so as that any licensed postmaster shall have any interest in or any benefit from any such contract, and any such contract made contrary to this act shall be utterly null and void; and if any contract made in pursuance of this act shall be assigned to any licensed postmaster, or to any other person for the use of any licensed postmaster, or so that he shall have any interest therein or any benefit therefrom, such assignment shall also be utterly null and void."

2 & 3 Wil. 4, c. 120

If the duties be not let at the time fixed, or if the contract for farming the same be vacated, they may be put up again, or be let by private contract.

Duties not to be farmed by any persons licensed to let horses.

Sect. 92. "And in order to prevent disputes concerning the said duties when let to farm in cases where the same may be collected in one district or division and the tickets may be delivered in another district or division, be it enacted, that in such case the duties shall belong and the tickets issued thereupon shall be delivered and accounted for to the person who shall be the farmer of the duties arising within the district or division within which the inn, house, or other place shall be situate at which the postmaster shall be licensed; and every toll-gate keeper at whose gate or bar such ticket shall be delivered shall deliver the same to the farmer of the said duties, arising within such district or division as aforesaid, at such time and in such manner as such tickets are by this act directed to be delivered to the several collectors of the said duties when the same are not let to farm."

Duties shall belong to the district where the tickets are issued.

Sect. 93. "No person contracting to farm the said duties or any part thereof, or appointed a collector thereof, shall, by reason of such contract or appointment, be disqualified to vote at the election of any member to serve in parliament, any law or usage to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Farmers of the duties not to be disqualified.

Sect. 94. "It shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps, from time to time as occasion shall require, to depute and appoint as well the persons who shall become farmers or lessees of the said duties, and their executors, administrators, and assigns, as any other persons approved by the said commissioners, upon the nomination and for the use of such farmers or lessees, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, to be collectors of the duties so farmed arising within the respective districts, with full power to grant the necessary licences to persons within the respective districts for letting horses for hire, and to receive the stamp office weekly accounts relating to the said duties by this act directed to be delivered by licensed postmasters within their respective districts, and to receive the money due thereon, and generally to execute and perform all other the powers, matters, and things touching the collecting, the managing, and enforcing the payment of the said duties within their respective districts, which by this act are authorized to be done by any collector of the said duties; and no deputation or commission appointing any person to be a collector of the said duties on horses let for hire shall be charged or chargeable with any higher stamp duty than 1*l.* 15*s.*: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to revoke the deputation or appointment and authority of any person deputed or appointed a collector of the said duties upon any such nomination as aforesaid whenever the said commissioners shall think fit so to do."

Commissioners of stamps may depute the farmers and other persons on their behalf to be collectors of the said duties.

Sect. 95. "It shall be lawful for such farmers or persons so farming the said duties or any part thereof, with the consent of the commissioners of stamps, to vary the form of keeping the weekly account directed by this act

Farmers may vary the form of keeping the weekly acto be kept by the several licensed postmasters within their respective districts in such manner as such farmers shall judge most convenient for keeping such accounts, and also to add the name or number of their respective districts on the face or back of the tickets to be delivered by them to the several licensed persons in their respective districts."

Sect. 96. "All the powers, provisions, regulations, matters, and things given, prescribed, or appointed by this act with relation to the duties on horses let for hire, or to the persons appointed or to be appointed to collect the same, may be put in force and carried into execution by any person farming the said duties, or any part thereof, in like manner as any collector of the said duties is authorized and empowered by this act to put in force and execute the same; and every person farming the said duties or any part thereof shall be entitled to the same privileges, and to have and use the like remedies for collecting and recovering the duties by this act imposed, as if the duties were sued for by or on the behalf of his majesty, and as if such duties had not been let to farm."

Sect. 97. "It shall not be necessary, upon the trial or hearing of any information, action, suit, or other proceeding to be commenced for the recovery of any of the said duties on horses let for hire which shall be let to farm in pursuance of this act, or for the recovery of any penalty imposed by this act with relation to the said duties, to produce the instrument whereby the commissioners of stamps shall be authorized to let to farm the said duties or any of them, nor to prove the execution of any contract or agreement whereby any of the said duties shall be let to farm, nor to prove the execution of any assignment of any such contract or agreement, nor to prove the signatures of the said commissioners of stamps to any consent to prosecute for any such penalty as aforesaid: provided always, that such contract, agreement, or assignment, and consent to prosecute, shall be produced on the trial or hearing of any such information, action, suit, or proceeding, and it shall be made to appear that the person claiming or acting under such contract, agreement, or assignment had in fact acted as the farmer of the duties therein mentioned or some of them; and in every such case such proof shall be deemed and taken by the court or justice before whom any such trial or hearing shall be had to be good and legal evidence of such person being the farmer of the duties mentioned in such contract, agreement, assignment, or other instrument, unless by other evidence the contrary shall be made to appear; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 98. "If any officer of stamp duties, or other person employed in the execution of this act, in relation to the said duties on horses let for hire, shall wilfully refuse or neglect to do or perform any matter or thing by this act required or directed to be done or performed by such officer or person, whereby any of his majesty's subjects shall sustain any damage, such officer or person shall be liable, in an action to be founded on this statute, to answer to the party aggrieved for all such damages, with full costs of suit."

Sect. 99. "It shall be lawful for any inspector of stamp duties, or any collector of the duties by this act granted in respect of horses let for hire, or for any other person authorized by the commissioners of stamps, on producing and showing (if required so to do) his appointment or authority in writing from time to time, to enter into any toll house or other place at which any toll is or shall be by law payable or any ticket shall be receivable under this act, and in such toll house or other place to remain so long as such inspector, collector, or other person so authorized shall think fit and requisite, for the purpose of examining and checking the stage carriages travelling upon any turnpike or other road, or for the purpose of receiving and examining the tickets relating to horses let for hire; and if any toll-gate keeper, toll collector, or other person shall refuse to permit any such inspector, collector, or other person authorized as aforesaid to enter into or to remain in any toll house or other such place as aforesaid, or shall obstruct or hinder or molest such inspector, collector, or other person authorized as aforesaid in entering into or remaining in such toll house or place for the purposes aforesaid, or if any toll-gate keeper, toll collector, or other person shall in any way hinder, molest, or disturb, or use abusive or insulting language to any such inspector, collector, or other person authorized as aforesaid, either in the discharge of his duty or in the reasonable use of such toll house or other place as aforesaid, every person so offending shall forfeit 20*l*."

Sect. 100. "If any person shall receive any sum of money, or any other consideration or reward of any kind whatsoever, for aiding or assisting in or for conniving at the commission of any offence against this act, he shall forfeit 20*l*."

Sect. 101. "All duties granted or imposed by or incurred under this act may be sued for and recovered by all such ways and means and in such manner and form as are and is or at any time hereafter shall be provided by law for the recovery of any other duties granted or imposed by or incurred under any other act relating to stamp duties, as well as by the particular ways and means provided by this act; and in all actions, bills, plaints, informations, and proceedings to be commenced, prosecuted, entered, or filed in the name of his majesty or of any other person for the recovery of any such duties, or of any debts or penalties which may be incurred or become payable under this act, it shall be lawful for his majesty, or any other person legally entitled to sue or prosecute for the same, to have and recover such duties, debts, and penalties, with full costs of suit and all other reasonable charges and expenses."

Sect. 102. "All pecuniary penalties imposed by or which may be incurred under this act may be sued or prosecuted for in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster for any offence committed in England, Wales, or Berwick-upon-Tweed, and in his majesty's Court of Exchequer in Scotland, for any offence committed in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, wherein no essoign, protection, or privilege, nor more than one imparlance, shall be allowed: provided always, that it shall not be lawful for any person to sue or prosecute for any such penalty in any of the courts aforesaid without having first obtained the consent in writing of two or more of the commissioners of stamps for that purpose, unless the action, suit, or prosecution for such penalty shall be carried on by the solicitor of stamps in England or Scotland respectively; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, if they shall think fit, to order the proceedings to be stayed in any such action, suit, or prosecution on payment of part only of any penalty incurred, with or without costs, or on payment only of the costs incurred or any part thereof, or otherwise, as they shall judge proper and expedient."

Sect. 103. Provided always, "that it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace having jurisdiction where the offence shall be committed, to hear and determine any offence against this act which may subject the offender to any pecuniary penalty not exceeding 20*l*.; and it shall be lawful for any such justice and he is hereby required, upon information given or complaint made before him, to summon the party accused, and also the witnesses on either side, to be and appear before the said justice or before any other justice of the peace at a time and place to be appointed for that purpose; and either on the appearance of the party accused, or in default thereof, it shall be lawful for such justice, or any other justice present at the time and place appointed for such appearance, to proceed to examine into the matter of fact, and upon due proof made thereof by voluntary confession of the party or by oath of one or more witness or witnesses, to give judgment for the penalty, and to award and issue out his warrant for the levying of any penalty so adjudged, together with the costs and expenses of such proceedings, and also the costs and expenses of such warrant, and of levying the same on the goods of the offender, and to cause sale to be made of such goods in case they shall not be redeemed within five days, rendering to the party the overplus, if any; and where goods of such offender cannot be found

Sect. 105. "It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against any of the provisions of this act, to mitigate as he shall see fit any penalty by this act imposed in cases where such justice shall see cause so to do, provided that all reasonable costs and charges expended or incurred in prosecuting for such offence shall be always allowed over and above the sum to which such penalty shall be mitigated, and so as such mitigation do not reduce the penalty to less than one fourth of the penalty incurred, exclusive of such costs and charges; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Justices may mitigate penalties.

Sect. 106. "All pecuniary penalties imposed by or incurred under this act, which shall be sued or prosecuted for and recovered by or in the name of any person other than his majesty's attorney general in England, or his majesty's advocate for Scotland, or the solicitor of stamps, or any other officer of stamp duties in England or Scotland respectively, shall respectively be distributed and divided in manner following; (that is to say,) one moiety thereof to his majesty, and the other moiety thereof, with full costs of suit, to the person who shall inform and sue or prosecute for the same within fourteen days after the offence shall have been committed; and all such pecuniary penalties as aforesaid which shall be sued or prosecuted for and recovered by or in the name of his majesty's said attorney general in England or advocate in Scotland, or by or in the name of such solicitor or officer as aforesaid, or for the recovery of which any information or complaint shall be made, or any action or suit shall be commenced after the expiration of the time aforesaid, shall go and be applied to the use of his majesty: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps, at their discretion, to give all or any part of such penalties or shares of penalties belonging to his majesty as rewards to any person or persons who shall have detected such offences or given information which may have led to the discovery thereof, or to the conviction of the offenders."

Application of penalties.

Sect. 107. "Every justice of the peace before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against this act shall take and receive the penalty or share of the penalty belonging to his majesty levied or paid under or by virtue of such conviction, and every such justice shall pay or cause to be paid all such sums of money which he shall so take or receive as aforesaid, at the next general or quarter sessions of the peace after he shall have so taken or received the same, into the hands of the clerk of the peace or other such officer of the county or place within which such conviction shall have been made, who shall, within ten days after his receipt thereof, and without fee or reward, pay or remit the same for the use of his majesty to the solicitor of stamps, at the stamp office in Westminster or Edinburgh, as the conviction shall happen to be in England or Scotland respectively, any thing in any other act contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and every such justice shall, within one week after every such payment made by him to any clerk of the peace or other such officer, transmit to such solicitor as aforesaid a schedule containing the name of the person so convicted, the nature of the offence, and the amount of the penalty of and in which he shall have been convicted, the date of such conviction, and the sum of Justices shall receive the crown's share of penalties, and pay the same to the clerk of the peace, to be remitted to the Stamp Office.

Sect. 108. "If any proprietor of any stage carriage, or the driver or guard of any stage carriage, shall be summoned before any justice of the peace to answer any information or complaint exhibited or made against him by any person other than an officer of stamp duties, touching or concerning any offence committed or alleged to have been committed by such proprietor, driver, or guard respectively against the provisions of this act, and such information or complaint shall afterwards be withdrawn or quashed or dismissed, or if the defendant shall be acquitted of the offence charged against him, it shall be lawful for such justice to order and award that the informer or person exhibiting or making such information or complaint shall pay to the defendant such costs of making or preparing for his defence, and also such compensation for his loss of time and for the time of his witnesses (if any) in attending such justice touching or concerning such information or complaint, as to such justice shall seem reasonable; and in default of immediate payment of the sum so awarded it shall be lawful for such justice to cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person ordered to pay the same, together with the costs of such distress and sale; and if goods and chattels of such person sufficient to answer the sum so awarded, with such costs as aforesaid, cannot be found, it shall be lawful for such justice to commit such person to the common gaol or house of correction for any time not exceeding one calendar month, unless the sum so awarded, together with all costs and expenses, shall be sooner paid and satisfied."

Sect. 109. "Any summons issued by any justice of the peace requiring any defendant or any witness or other person to appear before such justice, or any other justice, with reference to any information, complaint, or other proceeding for the recovery of any duty or penalty under this act, shall be deemed to be well and sufficiently served in case either the summons or a copy thereof be served personally upon any such person as aforesaid, or be left at his usual or last place of residence, or, in case such person be a proprietor, driver, conductor, or guard of any stage carriage, be left with the book-keeper or person for the time being acting as book-keeper for such stage carriage in any town or place from, into, or through which such carriage shall go or be driven nearest to the place where any such offence shall be committed; and any notice by this act required to be given to the proprietor of any stage carriage or to any other person shall be deemed to be well and sufficiently served in case either such notice, or a copy thereof, be served personally upon such proprietor or other person, or be left at his usual or last place of residence, or (in the case of such proprietor) be left with any book-keeper or person acting as book-keeper at any office belonging to such proprietor."

Sect. 110. "If any constable or other peace officer shall refuse or neglect to serve or execute any summons, warrant, or order granted, issued, or made by any justice of the peace, or by any two of the commissioners of stamps, pursuant to any of the provisions of this act, every such constable or peace officer so offending shall forfeit 10*l*."

Sect. 111. "If any person who shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before any justice of the peace or before any justice at sessions touching the matters alleged in or relating to any information, complaint, appeal, or other proceeding depending before such justice or justices for the recovery of any duty or penalty incurred under this act, shall neglect or refuse to appear before such justice or justices at the time and place to be for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for such neglect or refusal, to be allowed by such justice or justices, or if any person so summoned shall appear, but shall refuse to be examined and give evidence before such justice or justices touching the matters aforesaid, every such person so offending shall forfeit 10*l*."

Sect. 120. "This act may be amended, altered, or repealed by any act or acts to be passed in this present session of parliament."

Act may be altered this session.

By 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 45, intituled "An Act to transfer the Collection and Management of the Duties in Great Britain on Horses let for Hire, and on Licences relating to the same, from the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes to the Commissioners of Excise," [28th July, 1836,] reciting, "Whereas by an act passed in the second and third years of the reign of his present majesty, intituled 'An Act to repeal the Duties under the Management of the Commissioners of Stamps on Stage Carriages and on Horses let for Hire in Great Britain, and to grant other Duties in lieu thereof; and also to consolidate and amend the Laws relating thereto,' certain duties in Great Britain were amongst others, granted for and in respect of every horse let for hire, as in the said act is mentioned, and for every licence relating to the same, which duties were thereby placed under the management of the commissioners of stamps, and were denominated and deemed to be stamp duties: and whereas by an act passed in the fourth and fifth years of his said majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Land and Assessed Taxes, and to consolidate the Boards of Stamps and Taxes,' it was amongst other things enacted, that the several persons appointed as therein mentioned commissioners of stamps for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and commissioners for the affairs of taxes in

From 31st January 1837, the care and management of the duties on horses let for hire, and on licences relating to the same, transferred from the commissioners of stamps and taxes to the commissioners of excise.

Powers, &c., of 2 & 3 Wil. 4, c. 120, to be executed by the commissioners of excise, and powers, &c. of excise acts to be of full force for collecting the duties transferred.

Proviso for collecting duties accrued before 31st January 1837.

Great Britain respectively should be and become one consolidated board of commissioners, and be called 'The Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes,' and that from thenceforth all the several duties, matters, and things which then were collected by or under the care and management of the said commissioners of stamps and of the said commissioners for the affairs of taxes respectively should be collected by and should be under the care and management of the commissioners of stamps and taxes in the same manner as such duties, matters, and things respectively had theretofore been collected by or had been under the care and management of the said commissioners of stamps and of the said commissioners for the affairs of taxes respectively: and whereas it is expedient to transfer the collection and management of the said duties on horses let for hire, and on licences relating to the same, from the said commissioners of stamps and taxes to the commissioners of excise; be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the 31st day of January 1837 the care and management of the rates and duties granted and made payable by the said first-recited act in and throughout Great Britain for and in respect of every horse let for hire, and every licence relating to the same, and mentioned and described in the said schedule (A.) to the said act annexed, shall be and the same are hereby transferred from the commissioners of stamps and taxes to the commissioners of excise in Great Britain for the time being; and the said rates and duties shall thenceforth be denominated and deemed to be duties of excise, and shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid and accounted for by and under the authority, care, and management of the said commissioners of excise."

Sect. 2. "All the powers, provisions, regulations, and directions contained in the said first-recited act shall be executed and enforced by the commissioners of excise and their officers respectively, for securing and collecting the said duties, as fully and effectually as if such powers, provisions, regulations, and directions had been originally given to the said commissioners of excise and their officers respectively, and as if the same were repeated and re-enacted in this act, and that all the powers, provisions, regulations, and directions, forfeitures, pains, and penalties contained in and imposed by the said act, and all the provisions, powers, regulations, and directions, forfeitures, pains, and penalties contained in and imposed by any act or acts in force immediately before the passing of this act, in relation to any of the duties of excise, so far as such last-mentioned provisions, powers, regulations, directions, forfeitures, pains, and penalties shall be applicable to the said duties on horses let for hire, or on licences relating to the same, and so far as the same shall not be inconsistent with the special powers, provisions, regulations, and directions, forfeitures, pains, and penalties contained in the said first-recited act, shall be of full force and effect, and shall be applied and put in execution for securing, collecting, recovering, and paying the said last-mentioned duties, and for preventing, detecting, and punishing all frauds, forgeries, and other offences relating thereto, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if such powers, provisions, regulations, and directions, forfeitures, pains, and penalties were repeated and specially enacted in this act; and wherever in the said first-recited act the head office for stamps, or the solicitor of stamps in England or Scotland respectively, or any officer of stamp duties, is mentioned or designated, the same shall, so far as relates to the duties on horses let for hire and on licences relating to the same, be deemed and taken to mean the chief office of excise in London, the solicitor of excise in England or in Scotland, as the case may be, and any officer of excise respectively; and the account by the said act directed to be kept and to be intituled 'Stamp Office Weekly Account' shall be intituled 'Excise Office Weekly Account.'"

Sect. 3. Provided always, "that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend to prevent the commissioners of stamps and taxes, or any collector or other person appointed by them, or any farmer of the said duties on horses let for hire under any demise or contract which shall be existing on the said 31st day of January 1837, or any assignee of such farmer, from doing or causing to be done, at any time after the said 31st day of January, all or any such acts, matters, and things whatsoever as shall or may be necessary or expedient for raising, levying, collecting, recovering, and paying all or any of the duties on horses let for hire, and on licences to let such horses, and all penalties and forfeitures relating thereto, which shall accrue due or be incurred respectively on or before the said 31st day of January, and all or any sum or sums of money due and payable to his majesty, his heirs or successors, in respect of any of such duties or penalties; but that all such duties, sum and sums of money, and all penalties and forfeitures whatsoever in relation thereto, shall and may be raised, levied, collected, sued for, recovered, and paid by the same ways and means, and in such and the same manner in all respects, as if this act had not been passed."

AS evidence as regards stamps, see Vol. II. p. 74.

Several provisions relative to the penalties of the stamp-acts will be found under the different titles of instruments which are subject to stamp duties.

See titles "Almanacs," "Cards and Dice," "Medicines," "Newspapers," "Pawning," "Plate," "Promissory Notes," "Stage Coaches."

For the management of the stamp duties, the king may appoint commissioners, who shall substitute inferior officers, see 5 & 6 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 7; 9 & 10 Wil. c. 25, s. 48; 44 Geo. III. c. 98, s. 6. Officers for the stamp duties.

By the 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 60, s. 8, the commissioners of stamps and the commissioners for the affairs of taxes are consolidated into one board and are to be called "the commissioners of stamps and taxes."

Sect. 9. All the powers and authorities heretofore vested in the commissioners of stamps, and the commissioners for the affairs of taxes respectively, shall be had and exercised by the said commissioners.

Stat. 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 20, s. 6, consolidates the officers of receiver-general of the stamp duties and of receiver-general of the land and assessed taxes.

Sec. 2. consolidates the offices of accountant and comptroller-general of the stamp duties and of comptroller of accounts of land and assessed taxes. See further, post, title "Taxes."

With respect to duties imposed by the several acts before the 8 Anne, c. 9, the officers, before they shall act, shall take an oath for the due execution of their office, before one or more of the commissioners; and by the said act of 8 Anne, c. 9, s. 42, and subsequent acts, they may take the said oath, with respect to the duties imposed by those acts, before one or more of the commissioners, or a justice of the peace.

It being the intention of the legislature to repeal the present numerous and complicated enactments relative to the revenue of stamps, and to amend and consolidate the same, it would be idle and superfluous to present to the reader an elaborate treatise thereon. We will point out only some of the enactments which are more frequently called into action than others. Intention of legislature to amend stamp laws.

In the first place, however, it should be noticed, that in one of the acts relating to these duties, viz. 10 Anne, c. 19, there is a clause which brings all the rest within the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace, and almost the whole law relating to this title; and is as follows:— 10 Anne, c. 19. Power of justices in relation to stamp duties.

"That it shall and may be lawful to and for any two or more of the justices of the peace for the time being, residing near to the place where any pecuniary forfeitures, not exceeding 20*l.*, upon this or any of the acts of parliament, touching any of the duties under the management or care of the said commissioners for managing her majesty's duties on stamped vellum, parchment, and paper, shall be incurred, or any offence against any of the same acts shall be committed, in anywise relating to the same duties, or any of them, by which any sum of money only may be forfeited, to hear and deter-

"That it shall and may be lawful to and for the said respective justices, where they shall see cause, to mitigate or lessen any such penalties, as they in their discretion shall think fit, the reasonable costs and charges of the officers and informers as well in making the discovery, as in the prosecution of the same, being always allowed over and above such mitigation, and so as such mitigation do not reduce the penalties to less than double the duties over and above the said costs and charges; any thing contained in this act or any other act of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding." Sect. 173.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 82, s. 1, it is enacted, that "whosoever any person shall be convicted before a justice or justices of the peace for any offence to be hereafter committed against any act or acts of parliament now in being, or hereafter to be made, touching or concerning any the duties under the management or care of the said commissioners for managing the duties on stamped vellum, parchment, and paper, by which any pecuniary penalty or sum of money shall be forfeited, the said justice or justices of the peace before whom such person shall be convicted of the said offence, shall levy the said pecuniary penalty or sum of money in such manner as in such act or acts of parliament is contained, and apply the same to such uses and purposes, and in such proportions, as are therein contained and expressly directed, in case the same act or acts of parliament, or any other act or acts of parliament relating thereto, shall expressly direct the application thereof; and in default of such express and sufficient directions in such act or acts of parliament for the application of the said pecuniary penalty, or sum of money so forfeited upon such conviction as aforesaid, then to apply the same in such manner as is hereinafter directed."

Sect. 2. "One moiety or half part of all pecuniary penalties or forfeitures which shall be incurred by any person or persons for any offence hereafter to be committed against any law now in being, or hereafter to be made, touching or concerning any the said duties (except where a different mode of application is or shall be in the said law specially prescribed), shall belong, and be applied to the informer or informers prosecuting for the same within the space of six calendar months after such offence is committed, and the other moiety or half part of the said pecuniary penalties or forfeitures (the necessary charges for the recovery thereof being first deducted) shall be paid to the use of his majesty, his heirs, and successors, in the manner hereinafter directed."

Sect. 3. "Every distribution or division of any pecuniary penalty or forfeiture, directed to be made by this or any other act or acts of parliament touching any of the said duties, upon conviction before a justice or justices of the peace as aforesaid, shall be, and is hereby restricted and confined to the prosecuting for the same within the time hereinbefore limited; and that, in default of such prosecution within the time aforesaid, no informer or informers before a justice or justices of the peace as aforesaid, shall have or be entitled to any part or share of such penalty or forfeiture, but that the whole thereof shall belong to his majesty, his heirs, and successors, and shall be recoverable by any the ways and means in or by any such act or acts of parliament in that behalf directed; anything in this, or any of the said acts, contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 5. "From and after the passing of this act, in all cases where any pecuniary penalty or forfeiture for any offence committed against this, or any act or acts of parliament now or hereafter to be made, touching any the duties under the management or care of the said commissioners for managing the duties on stamped vellum, parchment, and paper, shall be incurred, it shall and may be lawful for the justice or justices of the peace, before whom any person or persons shall be convicted of the said offence, to cause the conviction upon the same offence to be made out in the form or to the effect following, mutatis mutandis, as the case shall happen to be; any thing in any former act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding; and every such conviction shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, without stating the case, or the facts, or evidence, in any more particular manner; that is to say:

Sect. 2. "In every such licence to vend or deal in stamps there shall be truly specified the proper christian name and surname and place of abode of the person to whom the same shall be granted, and a true description of the house or shop or houses or shops in or at which he shall by such licence be authorized to vend or deal in stamps; and such person shall not be thereby authorized or entitled to vend or deal in stamps in or at any other house, shop, or place than such as shall be so specified and described in such licence."

Sect. 3. "No person other than such distributor or sub-distributor of stamps as aforesaid shall vend or deal in stamps in any part of Great Britain without having duly obtained from the commissioners of stamps a licence for that purpose, which shall be subsisting in force and unrevoked at the time of such vending or dealing; and if any person other than such distributor or sub-distributor as aforesaid shall sell or offer for sale any vellum, parchment, or paper, stamped or marked with any stamp or mark, denoting or purporting to denote any stamp duty, or shall exchange any such stamped vellum, parchment, or paper for any other stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, or for any other article or thing, without having duly obtained and having in force such licence as aforesaid, authorizing him in that behalf, or in or at any house, shop, or place not specified and described in any such licence as aforesaid granted to him, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 20*l.*; and if any proceedings shall be had for recovery of such penalty of 20*l.*, and it shall thereupon appear that any stamp or stamps impressed on any such vellum, parchment, or paper which shall have been so sold or exchanged, or offered for sale or exchanged, was or were false, forged, or counterfeit, although the same shall not have been so alleged in the information or pleading, then and in such case the said penalty shall be doubled, and judgment shall be given against the offender for the sum of 40*l.*, and the said special matter shall be stated in such judgment as the cause of such increase of penalty; and if on any such proceeding any issue shall be tried by a jury in which the selling or exchanging, or offering for sale or exchange, of such vellum, parchment, or paper, with any stamp or stamps thereon, shall be in question, such jury shall be required to say whether such stamp or stamps was or were false, forged, or counterfeit, or not: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to exempt any person from the legal consequences of selling, uttering, or having in possession any vellum, parchment, or paper with any false, forged, or counterfeit stamp or stamps thereon, knowing the same to be false, forged, or counterfeit, if such knowledge shall be duly proved in any criminal prosecution or proceeding against such person for any such offence."

Nothing herein to exempt persons from consequences of uttering forged stamps.

Sect. 4. Provided always, "that it shall be lawful for any person employed to prepare, write, or ingross any deed or instrument liable to stamp duty to charge his employer with the amount of the stamp or stamps impressed on the vellum, parchment, or paper upon which such deed or instrument shall be written or ingrossed, without having obtained any such licence as aforesaid to vend or deal in stamps."

As to persons employed to write or ingross instruments liable to stamp duty.

Sect. 5. "Every person who shall be licensed under the authority of this act to deal in stamps shall cause to be painted in Roman capital letters, one inch at the least in height and of a proper and proportionate breadth, on some conspicuous place on the outside of the front of the house or shop in or at which he shall be licensed to deal in stamps, and so that the same shall be at all times plainly and distinctly visible and legible, the christian name and surname of such licensed person at full length, together with the words, 'licensed to sell stamps,' and such person shall continue such names and words so painted as aforesaid during all the time that he shall continue licensed as aforesaid; and if any person licensed as aforesaid shall neglect or omit to cause such names and words to be so painted as aforesaid, or shall neglect or omit to continue the same so painted according to the directions of this act, he shall forfeit 10*l.* for every such offence: provided always, that in the case of several persons licensed as aforesaid in copartnership it shall be sufficient if the christian name and surname of one only of such persons be painted in manner aforesaid."

Sect. 12. "If any person shall knowingly and without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused) have in his possession any false, forged, or counterfeit die, plate, or other instrument, or part of any such die, plate, or instrument, resembling or intended to resemble, either wholly or in part, any die, plate, or other instrument which at any time whatever hath been or shall or may be provided, made, or used, by or under the direction of the commissioners of stamps, for the purpose of expressing or denoting any stamp duty whatever ; or if any person shall knowingly and without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused) have in his possession any vellum, parchment, or paper having thereon the impression of any such false, forged, or counterfeit die, plate, or other instrument, or part of any such die, plate, or other instrument as aforesaid, or having thereon any false, forged, or counterfeit stamp, mark, or impression, resembling, or representing, either wholly or in part, or intended or liable to pass or be mistaken for, the stamp, mark, or impression of any such die, plate, or other instrument which hath been or shall or may be so provided, made, or used as aforesaid, knowing such false, forged, or counterfeit stamp, mark, or impression to be false, forged, or counterfeit ; or if any person shall fraudulently use, join, fix, or place for, with, or upon any vellum, parchment, or paper any stamp, mark, or impression which shall have been cut, torn, or gotten off or removed from any other vellum, parchment, or paper ; or if any person shall fraudulently erase, cut, scrape, discharge, or get out of or from any stamped vellum, parchment, or paper any name, sum, date, or other matter or thing thereon written, printed, or expressed, with intent to use any stamp or mark then impressed, or being upon such vellum, parchment, or paper, or that the same may be used for any deed, instrument, matter, or thing in respect whereof any stamp duty is or shall or may be or become payable ; or if any person shall knowingly use, utter, sell, or expose to sale, or shall knowingly and without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused) have in his possession any stamped vellum, parchment, or paper from or off or out of which any such name, sum, date, or other matter or thing as aforesaid shall have been fraudulently erased, cut, scraped, discharged, or gotten as aforesaid ; then and in every such case every person so offending, and every person knowingly and wilfully aiding, abetting, or assisting any person in committing any such offence, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years nor less than two years."

Sect. 13. "On any information given before any justice of the peace upon the oath of one or more credible person or persons (which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer) that there is just cause to suspect any person of being or having been in any way engaged or concerned in making any false or counterfeit die, plate, or other instrument, or unlawfully marking or impressing any stamp, mark, or impression on any vellum, parchment, or paper with any such die, plate, or instrument ; or in the unlawful possession of any forged or counterfeit die, plate, or instrument, or of any vellum, parchment, or paper with any counterfeit stamp, mark, or impression thereon ; or in unlawfully or fraudulently, or without due authority, marking or impressing any lawful stamp on any vellum, parchment, or paper, or in causing or procuring the same to be so marked or impressed, or in aiding, abetting, or assisting in so marking or impressing the same ; or in the unlawful possession of any vellum, parchment, or paper, or other material, unlawfully or fraudulently or without due authority stamped or marked, contrary to any of the provisions or regulations contained in any act relating to stamp duties; or of being or having been in any way engaged or concerned in the fraudulent erasing, cutting, scraping, discharging, or getting out of or from or off any stamped vellum, parchment, or paper any matter or thing thereon written, printed, or expressed; or in the unlawful possession of any stamped vellum, parchment, or paper from or off or out of which any matter or thing shall have been fraudulently erased, cut, scraped, discharged, or gotten as aforesaid, then and in every or any of the said cases it shall be lawful for such justice by warrant under his hand to cause any and every dwelling-house, room, workshop, outhouse, or other building, yard, garden, or other place belonging to such suspected person, or where any such person shall be suspected of being or of having been in any way engaged or concerned in the commission of any such offence as aforesaid, or of secreting any such die, plate, or instrument, or any such vellum, parchment, or paper, or any of the machinery, implements, or utensils necessary or applicable to the commission of any such offence as aforesaid, to be searched for any such stamped vellum, parchment or paper, and for any such die, plate, or instrument, machinery, implement, or utensil, or other matter or thing as aforesaid; and if any of the said several matters and things shall be found in any place so searched, or in the custody or possession of any person whatsoever not having the same by some lawful authority, it shall be lawful for the person finding any such matters or things to seize the same respectively, and to carry the same forthwith to the justice by whom such warrant shall be granted, or to any other justice of the peace having jurisdiction where the same shall be seized, who shall cause the same to be secured and produced in evidence against any person who shall or may be prosecuted in any court of justice for any of the offences aforesaid; and afterwards the said matters and things so seized, whether produced in evidence or not, shall, by order of the court or judge before whom such offender shall be tried, or by order of some justice of the peace in case there shall be no such trial, be delivered over to the commissioners of stamps, to be defaced or destroyed, or otherwise disposed of, as the said commissioners shall think fit."

Sect. 14. "If any person, whether he shall be licensed to vend or deal in stamps or not, shall hawk or carry about for sale or exchange any stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, or if any person shall utter or offer for sale or exchange, at any house, shop, or place other than the house or shop in which he shall reside or bonâ fide carry on his trade or business, any such stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, every such person shall forfeit the sum of 20*l.*, over and above any penalty to which he may be liable for vending or dealing in stamps without being licensed so to do; and it shall moreover be lawful for any person, without any other warrant than this act, for that purpose to apprehend any person so hawking, carrying about, uttering, or offering for sale or exchange such stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, and to take him or cause him to be taken before any justice of the peace having jurisdiction where the offence shall be committed, who shall hear and determine the matter; and if the offender shall not immediately on his conviction pay the said penalty such justice shall commit him to prison for any period of time not less than one nor more than three calendar months, unless such penalty shall be sooner paid or satisfied; and all stamped vellum, parchment, and paper which shall be found in the possession of such offender shall be forfeited to his majesty, and shall be taken possession of by such justice, and be delivered over to the commissioners of stamps, to be disposed of in any manner as they shall think fit: provided always, that if such offender shall not be apprehended and proceeded against in the manner hereinbefore directed, then the said penalty of 20*l.* shall be recoverable by any other of the ways and means provided for the recovery of penalties incurred under this act."

Sect. 15. "And for the better preventing and detecting of felonies and frauds in relation to stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace having jurisdiction where any stamped vellum, parchment, or paper shall be or be supposed to be concealed or deposited, upon any reasonable suspicion that such stamped vellum, Commissioners may discontinue dies, and provide new ones in lieu thereof.

Sect. 16. "It shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps from time to time, whenever they shall deem it necessary or expedient, to discontinue the use of all or any of the dies heretofore provided or used, or at any time hereafter to be provided or used, for denoting or marking any stamp duty which now is or at any time hereafter shall be by law payable for or in respect of any matter or thing whatsoever, and to cause any new die or dies, with such altered device or devices respectively thereon as the said commissioners shall think fit, to be provided and used in lieu of the die or dies so discontinued."

After a day fixed by notice in the Gazette the new dies to be the only true and lawful dies.

Sect. 17. "Whenever the said commissioners shall determine to discontinue the use of any die or dies, and shall provide any new die or dies to be used in lieu thereof, and the said commissioners shall give public notice thereof by advertisement in the London and Edinburgh Gazettes respectively, then from and after such day or time as shall be fixed and appointed by such advertisement, not being within the space of one calendar month next after the same shall have been published in the said gazettes respectively, the said new die or dies so provided shall be the only true and lawful die or dies for denoting the duty charged or chargeable in any case to which such die or dies is or are respectively applicable; and all deeds and instruments for the marking or stamping of which any such new die or dies shall have been provided, and which after the day so fixed and appointed as aforesaid shall be engrossed, written, or printed upon vellum, parchment, or paper stamped or marked with any other die or dies than the said new die or dies so provided for the same as aforesaid, and also all such deeds and instruments as aforesaid which, having been engrossed, written, or printed upon vellum, parchment, or paper stamped or marked as last aforesaid, shall not have been executed or signed by any party thereto before or upon the said day so fixed and appointed as aforesaid, shall respectively be deemed to be engrossed, written, or printed on vellum, parchment, or paper not duly stamped or marked as required by law: provided always, that in the case of any deed or instrument required to be stamped or marked with such new die or dies as aforesaid which shall be engrossed, written, or printed upon vellum, parchment, or paper stamped or marked otherwise than with such new die or dies, and which after the said day or time so fixed and appointed as aforesaid shall be first executed or signed by any party thereto at any place out of the United Kingdom, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby required, upon proof of the facts to their satisfaction, to cancel and allow the stamp or stamps impressed on such deed or instrument, and to cause such deed or instrument to be stamped or marked with such new die or dies, to the same amount of duty, without payment of any penalty, provided such deed or instrument shall be produced to the said commissioners for the purpose aforesaid within one calendar month next after the same shall arrive in this kingdom."

Sect. 18. Provided always, "that whenever the said commissioners shall discontinue the use of any die or dies, and shall provide any new die or dies to be used in lieu thereof, and shall give public notice thereof by advertisement in the manner directed by this act, it shall be lawful for all persons who shall have in their custody or possession any vellum, parchment, or paper stamped or marked with any die or dies in lieu of which any such new die or dies shall have been provided, and which vellum, parchment, or paper shall, by reason of the providing of such new die or dies, be rendered useless or inapplicable for the purposes for which the same was originally designed, to send the same to the head office for stamps in Westminster or Edinburgh at any time within three calendar months next after the day so fixed and appointed by such advertisement as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or for any officer of stamp duties duly authorized in that behalf, to cause the stamp or stamps upon such vellum, parchment, or paper to be cancelled, and such vellum, parchment, or paper or (if the said commissioners or such officer shall think fit) any other vellum, parchment, or paper to be duly stamped or marked with such new die or dies in lieu of and to an equal amount with the stamp or stamps so cancelled."

Stamps rendered useless by the discontinuance of old dies and the providing of new dies, to be allowed and exchanged.

Sect. 19. "In any case in which the commissioners of stamps are or shall be by this act or any other act relating to stamp duties authorized and directed to cancel stamps spoiled or rendered useless or unfit for the purpose intended, and to make allowance for the same by giving other stamps in lieu thereof, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners if they in their discretion shall think fit, instead of giving stamps, to refund and repay to the party entitled to such allowance the amount thereof in money, deducting therefrom such per-centage as is allowed by law on the purchase of stamps of the same description as those in respect of which such allowance shall be made; and it shall also be lawful for the said commissioners, if they in their discretion shall think fit, to refund and repay to any person possessed of any stamp or stamps which shall not have been spoiled or rendered useless or unfit for the purpose intended, but for which he shall have no immediate use or occasion, the amount or value of such stamp or stamps in money, deducting therefrom such per-centage as aforesaid upon his delivering up such stamp or stamps to the said commissioners to be cancelled, and proving to their satisfaction that the same was or were purchased by him with a bonâ fide intent to use the same, and that he has paid the full amount or value denoted by such stamp or stamps, without any deduction, save and except only the amount of such per-centage as aforesaid, and further, that such stamp or stamps was or were so purchased within the period of three calendar months next preceding, and if the same was or were so purchased after the passing of this act, then that the same was or were so purchased by such person at the head office for stamps in Westminster or Edinburgh, or from some distributor or sub-distributor of stamps duly appointed as

Sect. 22. "And whereas it is expedient for facilitating the execution of the powers vested in the commissioners of stamps that they should be authorized to appoint officers to take affidavits; be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they or any two of them are hereby authorized, to appoint by writing under their hands and seals any officer employed under them to take and receive any affidavit or affirmation which is now by law authorized to be made before the said commissioners, or any one or more of them; and every such officer so appointed as aforesaid is hereby authorized to take and receive any such affidavit upon the oath of the person or persons making the same, and any such affirmation in the case of persons commonly called Quakers; and if any person making any such affidavit or affirmation shall knowingly and wilfully make a false oath or affirmation of or concerning any of the matters to be therein specified and set forth, every person so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be subject and liable to such pains and penalties as by any law now in force persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject and liable to." (See ante, "Oaths," Vol. III.)

Sect. 23. "All pecuniary penalties imposed by or which may be incurred under this act may be recovered, for the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, for any offence committed in England, Wales, or Berwick-upon-Tweed, and in his majesty's court of exchequer in Scotland for any offence committed in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, wherein no essoign, protection, or privilege, nor more than one imparlance, shall be allowed: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps to mitigate or compound any such penalty, or to stay proceedings in any action, suit, or prosecution commenced for the recovery thereof, on such terms as the said commissioners shall judge proper and expedient, and also at their discretion to give all or any part of any sum paid by way of penalty or compromise to the person informing them of the offence in respect of which such sum shall be paid."

Sect. 24. Provided always, "that it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace having jurisdiction where the offence shall be committed to hear and determine any offence against this act which may subject the offender to any pecuniary penalty, and it shall be lawful for any justice, and he is hereby required, upon information given or complaint made before him by the solicitor, or any other officer of his majesty's stamp duties in England or Scotland, to summon the party accused, and also the witnesses on either side, to be and appear before the said justice or before any other justice of the peace at a time and place to be appointed for that purpose, and either on the appearance of the party accused or in default thereof it shall be lawful for such justice, or any other justice present at the time and place appointed for such appearance, to proceed to examine into the matter of fact, and upon due proof made thereof by voluntary confession of the party, or by oath of one or more witness or witnesses, to give judgment for the penalty, and to award and issue out his warrant for the levying of any penalty so adjudged, together with the costs and expenses of such proceedings, and also the costs and expenses of such warrant, and of executing the same on the goods of the offender, and to cause sale to be made of such goods in case they shall not be redeemed within five days, rendering to the party the overplus, if any; and where the goods of such offender cannot be found sufficient to answer the penalty and all such costs and expenses, it shall be lawful for such justice and he is hereby required to commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction, there to remain for any time not less than three calendar months and not exceeding six calendar months, unless such penalty and all such costs and expenses shall be sooner paid and satisfied; and if the person convicted shall find himself aggrieved by the judgment of any such justice, it shall be lawful for such person to appeal against the same to the justices of the peace at the general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county or place within which the offence shall be committed which shall be held next after the expiration of ten days from the day on which such conviction shall have been made, of which appeal notice in writing shall be given to the prosecutor or informer seven clear days previous to the first day of such sessions ; and such justices at such sessions are hereby authorized to examine witnesses upon oath, and finally to hear and determine such appeal ; and in case the judgment of any such justice shall be affirmed, it shall be lawful for the justices at such sessions to award and order the person appealing to pay such costs occasioned by such appeal as to them shall seem meet : provided always, that no person convicted before any such justice shall be entitled or permitted to appeal against such conviction in manner aforesaid, unless within three days next after such conviction made he shall enter into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties before such justice to enter and prosecute such appeal, and to pay the amount of the penalty and costs in which he shall have been convicted, and also to pay such further costs as shall be awarded in case such conviction shall be affirmed on the hearing of such appeal : provided also, that no such proceedings so to be had or taken shall be quashed or vacated for want of form, or shall be removed by certiorari, suspension, advocacy, or reduction, or by any other writ or process, into any superior or other court or jurisdiction ; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Proceedings not to be quashed for want of form, or removed.

Sect. 25. "It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against the provisions of this act which may subject the offender to any pecuniary penalty to mitigate such penalty as he shall see fit ; provided that all reasonable costs and charges expended or incurred in prosecuting for such offence shall be always allowed over and above the sum to which such penalty shall be mitigated, and so as such mitigation do not reduce the penalty to less than one-fourth of the penalty incurred, exclusive of such costs and charges ; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Justices may mitigate penalties.

Sect. 26. "All actions and prosecutions which shall be brought or commenced against any person for any thing done in pursuance or under the authority of this act shall be commenced and prosecuted within three calendar months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and shall be brought and tried in the county or place where the cause of action shall arise, and not elsewhere ; and notice in writing of such action and of the cause thereof shall be given to the defendant one calendar month at least before the commencement of the action ; and the defendant in such action may plead the general issue, and give this act and any other matter or thing in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon ; and if the cause of action shall appear to arise from any matter or thing done in pursuance and by the authority of this act, or if any such action shall be brought after the expiration of such three calendar months, or shall be brought in any other county or place than as aforesaid, or if notice of such action shall not have been given in manner aforesaid, or if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made before such action commenced, or if a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court after such action commenced by or on behalf of the defendant, the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant ; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or if the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or shall discontinue any such action, or if, on demurrer or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall recover his full costs of suit as between attorney and client, and shall have the like remedy for the same as any defendant may have for costs of suit in other cases at law ; and although a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff in any such action, such plaintiff shall not have costs against the defendant, unless the judge before whom the trial shall be had shall at the time of such trial certify in writing his approbation of the action and of the verdict obtained thereupon."

expressions used therein, be it enacted, that wherever in this act, with reference to any person, matter, or thing, any word or words is or are used importing the singular number or the masculine gender only, yet such word or words shall be understood and construed to include several persons as well as one person, females as well as males, bodies politic or corporate as well as individuals, and several matters or things as well as one matter or thing, unless it be otherwise specially provided, or there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction."

Sect. 28. "This act shall commence and take effect on the 11th day of October, 1833."

Documents exempted from stamps.

By the 6 & 7 Wil. III. c. 12, s. 2, any warrant made by, or recognizance taken before any justice or justices of the peace, are declared to be exempted from stamp duties. See also the 44 Geo. III. c. 98, schedule (A).

By the 44 Geo. III. c. 98, s. 19, nothing in that act shall extend to charge with any duty any proceedings with respect to persons admitted to sue or defend in forma pauperis. See also the 5 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 14.

Nor any proceedings of any court-martial, relative to the trial of any common soldier; or any orders, decrees, or proceedings, before any commissioners of sewers, or in the court of stannaries; nor any instruments, matters, or things relating to the purchase or redemption of any land-tax. See also the 42 Geo. III. c. 116, s. 81.

By the 44 Geo. III. c. 98, commissions granted to any officers of volunteer or yeomanry cavalry or volunteer infantry are exempted from stamp duties.

And by the 52 Geo. III. c. 38, s. 199, no commission granted to any officer of the local militia shall be subject to any stamp duty.

The 5 Geo. IV. c. 41, exempts law proceedings from stamp duties. See, post, 797.

Penalty for writing before stamped.

By the 5 & 6 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 11, if any person shall write on any paper or parchment any of the matters or things for which such paper or parchment is by the act charged to pay duty, before it be duly stamped, he shall forfeit 500*l.* (reduced to 5*l.* by 6 & 7 Wil. III. c. 12, s. 7, and by the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 59, 5*l.* more); and an officer offending shall over and above forfeit his office.

And by the 5 & 6 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 11, if any instrument shall be written by any person (not being a known clerk or officer in respect of his office entitled to write the same) on paper or parchment not duly stamped, there shall be paid over and above the duty, the sum of 5*l.* (and by the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 59, 5*l.* more); and the instrument shall not be given in evidence in any court, until both the duty and the said sum shall be paid, and a receipt produced for the same under the hand of some officer appointed to receive the duties, and until the same shall be stamped.

Memorandums or agreements may be stamped within twenty-one days.

The 23 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 5, provides, that no memorandum or agreement not stamped shall be deemed void, if stamped at the head office, or the duty paid and a receipt given thereon for the same by the proper officer receiving such duty, within twenty-one days after such agreement shall have been entered into.

Writing to be near the stamp.

By the 1 Anne, st. 2, c. 22, s. 5, all matters and things shall be written either upon, or as near as conveniently may be, to the stamp; on pain of 10*l.*, with full costs.

The same stamp not to serve twice.

Sect. 2, 3. If any person shall write any thing in respect whereof the stamp duties are payable, on any piece of paper or parchment, whereon there shall have been before any writing in respect whereof any duty was payable, before the same hath been again stamped; or shall erase or scrape out any name, sum, date, or other thing, or fraudulently take off any stamp, with intent to use it in any other thing in respect whereof any duty is payable; he shall forfeit in like manner as for writing on paper unstamped, and also 20*l.*, with full costs. (See also the 6 Geo. I. c. 21, s. 56.)

12 Geo. 3, c. 48.

And by the 12 Geo. III. c. 48, every such person so offending shall be guilty of felony, and transported for a term not exceeding seven years; and if he return before the expiration of his term, he shall be guilty of felony, without benefit of clergy, and may be tried in the county where he was apprehended. And if an offender, being out of prison, shall discover any other offender so as he be convicted, such discoverer shall have a pardon.

By the 5 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 39, stamps spoiled before the writing thereon hath been executed, may, upon oath made thereof before the commissioners, be exchanged at the stamp-office. 5 Geo. 3, c. 46.
Stamps spoiled.

And by the 44 Geo. III. c. 98, s. 17, the commissioners of stamps may make such regulations for preventing fraudulent claims, and for regulating the times and places for cancelling or allowing other stamps, as they shall think proper; and see the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 97, s. 19, ante, 777.

By stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 108, s. 11, powers of the commissioners of stamps to allow and exchange spoiled stamps, are extended to a variety of cases of instruments signed by the parties.

By s. 14, provision is made for the allowance of spoiled stamps on bills of exchange and promissory notes.

Sect. 15, relates to the allowance of stamps as spoiled on certain articles of clerkship to attorneys.

Sect. 16. And where the commissioners are already authorized to allow as spoiled and to exchange any stamps used for instruments not fully written or not signed by any party, they shall not make the allowance unless the stamps shall be brought for that purpose to them at their head office within six calendar months after the same shall have been spoiled, if the same shall belong to persons resident in London or Westminster, or within ten miles thereof respectively, or within twelve calendar months after the same shall have been spoiled, if belonging to persons resident elsewhere.

By the 23 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 14, "all vellum, parchment, and paper upon which any such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, receipt, or other discharge, given for the payment of money, shall be engrossed or written, shall, before the same shall be engrossed or written, be brought to the head office for stamping and marking of vellum, parchment, and paper; and the said commissioners, by themselves or their officers, shall from time to time stamp or mark, as this act directs, any quantities of vellum, parchment, or paper, upon payment of the said duties; and if any such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note; draft or order, receipt or other discharge, given for the payment of money, so hereby directed to be stamped, shall not be stamped or marked, as by this act is directed, or shall be marked or stamped for a lower duty than as aforesaid, no such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft or order, receipt or other discharge, shall be pleaded or given in evidence, in any court, or admitted in any court to be good or available in law or equity." All vellum, paper, &c., to be stamped before engrossed or written upon.

By 31 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 10, "all and every person or persons who shall write or sign, or cause to be written or signed, or who shall accept or pay, or cause to be accepted or paid, any bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft or order, liable to any of the duties by this act imposed upon any piece of vellum, parchment, or paper, without the same being first duly stamped or marked with a proper stamp or mark, in the manner herein prescribed, or upon which there shall not be some stamp or mark resembling the same, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.*, to be recovered as hereinafter is directed." Penalty on persons signing, &c. unstamped bills.

Sect. 19. "No bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft or order, liable to be stamped as directed by this act, shall be pleaded or given in evidence in any court, or admitted in any court to be good, useful, or available in law or equity, unless the same be duly stamped; and that it shall not be lawful for the said commissioners or their officers to stamp or mark any vellum, parchment, or paper with any stamp or mark directed to be used or provided by virtue of this act, at any time after any bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft or order, (or any receipt, discharge, or acquittance, except as herein is otherwise provided), shall be Bill or note not duly stamped, inadmissible in evidence, &c.

By the 35 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 5, "the full and just sum of money for which any receipt, discharge, or acquittance shall be given, and the true date thereof, shall be bonâ fide respectively inserted therein; and that all notes, memorandums, or writings whatever, given to any person or persons, for or upon the payment of money amounting to 40s. (a) or upwards, whereby any sum of money shall be acknowledged to have been paid, settled, received, accounted for, balanced, discharged, released, or in any manner satisfied, or which shall in any manner signify or denote such acknowledgment, as aforesaid, and whether the same shall or shall not be signed by or with the name or names of the person or persons by or on whose behalf the same shall be given, shall be respectively taken and construed to be receipts within the true intent and meaning of this act; and shall be liable to the respective duties imposed thereon, as well by the said recited act as this act, and shall be paid and payable by the person or persons by whom or on whose behalf such receipts, discharges, or acquittances shall be required (except such receipts, discharges, or acquittances as shall be at any time or times given upon the payment of money in respect of any salary or pension, debt, or other sum, payable from his majesty, his heirs and successors; in all which cases the duties shall be paid by the person or persons giving such receipts, discharges, or acquittances); and which rates and duties, in default of payment thereof, according to the regulations of this act, shall and may be charged upon and levied against the person or persons by whom the same are hereby made payable, his, her, or their respective executors, administrators, or assigns."

Sect. 6. "Every receipt, discharge, or acquittance, note, memorandum, or writing whatever, given to any person or persons for or upon the payment of money, which shall contain or express, or in any manner signify or denote, any general acknowledgment of any debt, claim, account, or demand, or all or any debts, claims, accounts, or demands being paid, settled, received, accounted for, balanced, discharged, released, or satisfied, or whereby any sum of money therein mentioned shall be acknowledged to be in full, or in discharge or satisfaction, of all or any such debts, claims, accounts, or demands, or intended so to be, and whether the same shall or shall not be signed by or with the name or names of the person or persons by or on whose behalf the same shall be given, shall be deemed and taken to be a receipt for the sum of 500*l.* and upwards, within the true intent and meaning of this act, and shall be liable to the stamp duty of 2s., by the said recited act and this act imposed thereon; and no such receipt, discharge, or acquittance, note, memorandum, or writing, shall be pleaded or given in evidence in any court, or admitted in any court, to be useful or available in law or equity as an acknowledgment of any debts, claims, accounts, or demands being paid, settled, received, accounted for, balanced, discharged, released, or satisfied, whether generally or otherwise, or for any other or greater sum of money than the sum of money therein expressed, unless the same shall be stamped with the proper stamp to denote the said duty of 2s. hereby imposed; any thing in such receipt, discharge, acquittance, note, memorandum, or writing, expressed notwithstanding."

Sect. 7. "Every note, memorandum, or writing whatever, given to any person or persons for or upon the payment of money, which shall contain or express, or in any manner signify or denote, any acknowledgment of any part of any debt, claim, account, or demand being paid, settled, received, accounted for, balanced, discharged, released, or satisfied, whether the same shall or shall not be signed by or with the name or names of the person or

35 Geo. 3, c. 55.

Sect. 8. "All and every person or persons who shall write or sign, or cause to be written or signed, any receipt, discharge, or acquittance, given for or upon the payment of money liable to any stamp duty charged by the said recited act or this act, upon any piece of vellum, parchment, or paper, without the same being first duly stamped, or marked with a stamp or mark, as herein is directed, or upon which there shall be a stamp or mark of lower denomination or value than is by the said recited act and this act charged in respect thereof, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 10*l.*, in case the sum paid, contained or expressed in such receipt, discharge, or acquittance shall not amount to the sum of 100*l.*, and the sum of 20*l.*, in case such sum shall amount to 100*l.* or upwards." (And see 31 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 17.)

Penalty on persons signing receipts unstamped, &c.

Sect. 9. "All and every person or persons who shall give any receipt, discharge, or acquittance, or any note, memorandum, or writing, acknowledging the payment of money, in which a less sum shall be expressed than the sum actually paid or received, or who shall separate or divide the sum demanded, or actually paid or received, into divers sums, with intent to evade the said duties, or any of them; or shall, with the like intent, write off any part of any debt, claim, or demand, or who shall be guilty of or concerned in any fraudulent contrivance or device whatsoever, with intent or design to defraud his majesty, his heirs or successors, of any of the said duties by the said act or this act imposed, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 50*l.*, to be recovered in manner as hereinafter is directed." (And see 43 Geo. III. c. 126, s. 5, post, 787, by which the payee is to discharge the duty.)

Persons giving receipts for less than actually paid, liable to penalty.

Sect. 10. "All vellum, parchment, and paper, liable to any stamp duty by the said recited act or this act, shall, before any of the matters or things thereby or hereby charged shall be engrossed, printed, or written thereupon, be brought to the head office for stamping or marking vellum, parchment, or paper; and the said commissioners, by themselves, or by their officers employed under them, shall and may from time to time stamp and mark, according to the directions of the said recited act and this act, any quantities or parcels of vellum, parchment, or paper, before any of the matters or things thereby or hereby charged shall be engrossed, printed, or written thereupon, upon payment of the several duties payable for the same by virtue of the said recited act and this act; and no receipt, discharge, acquittance, note, or memorandum, or writing aforesaid, liable to the duties by the said recited act or this act imposed, or any of them, shall be pleaded or given in evidence in any court, or admitted in any court to be good, useful, or available in law or equity, unless the vellum, parchment, or paper on which such receipt, discharge, acquittance, note, memorandum, or writing, as aforesaid, shall be engrossed, printed, written, or made, shall be stamped or marked with a lawful stamp or mark, to denote the rate or duty as by the said recited act or this act is directed, or some higher rate or duty in the said recited act or this act contained; and it shall not be lawful for the said commissioners or their officers to stamp or mark any vellum, parchment, or paper, with any stamp or mark directed to be used or provided by virtue of the said recited act or this act, at any time after any receipt, discharge, or acquittance shall be engrossed, written, or printed thereon, under any pretence whatever, except as herein is otherwise provided; any thing in the said recited act or this act contained, or any law or statute to the contrary thereof notwithstanding." (See the 31 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 19, ante, 781.)

Vellum, &c., to be stamped before written upon.

Prohibits commissioners from stamping any receipt after the same has been made.

Sect. 11. Provided always, "that if any receipt, discharge, or acquittance, given upon the payment of money, and written on vellum, parchment, or paper, not stamped, as by the said recited act and this act is directed, shall be brought to the said commissioners, or their officers employed by them for that purpose, to be stamped according to the directions of the said recited act and of this act, within the space of fourteen days after such receipt, discharge, or acquittance shall be given or shall bear date, the same shall and may be permitted to be stamped on payment of the sum of 5*l.*, over and above the duty payable for the same by virtue of the said recited act and this act; and if any such receipt, discharge, or acquittance shall be brought to be stamped, as aforesaid, after the expiration of such fourteen days, and within one calendar month after such receipt, discharge, or acquittance shall be given, or shall bear date, the same shall and may be permitted to be stamped on payment of the sum of 10*l.*, over and above the duty payable for the same by virtue of the said recited act and this act; and the proper officer or officers are hereby enjoined and required, upon such receipt, discharge, or acquittance being brought to them, within the respective times hereinbefore limited, and upon payment of the duty imposed thereon by the said recited act or this act, and the respective sums aforesaid, but not otherwise, to mark or stamp such receipt, discharge, or acquittance with the proper mark or stamp by the said recited act and this act required for the same."

Persons not bringing indentures, &c., not duly stamped, to be so stamped, to forfeit 20*l.*

No indenture, &c., available unless duly stamped.

Such provisions extended.

By the 37 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 3, "if any attorney, solicitor, clerk, officer, or other person, shall engross, print, or write, or cause to be engrossed, printed, or written, any indenture, lease, bond, or other deed, on vellum, parchment, or paper, not duly stamped according to the directions of this act, and shall neglect to bring the same to be duly stamped in the manner and within the time hereby directed and allowed for stamping the same, every such attorney, solicitor, clerk, officer, or other person, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.*, and no such indenture, lease, bond, or other deed, shall be pleaded or given in evidence, or be good, useful, or available in any manner whatever, unless the same shall be stamped as required by this act."

By the 37 Geo. III. c. 90, s. 9, "all the provisions, rules, and matters, prescribed by an act passed in this session of parliament, for the more effectually securing the stamp duties on indentures, leases, bonds, and other deeds, and not hereby altered, shall be extended, applied, and put in practice for the stamping such indentures, leases, bonds, deeds, agreements, and copies of indentures, leases, bonds, and other deeds, according to the true intent and meaning of this act, as fully and effectually as if the same had been re-enacted in this act; and if any attorney, solicitor, clerk, officer, or other person, shall engross, print, or write, or caused to be engrossed, printed, or written, any agreement, or any copy purporting to be a true copy, or attested to be a true copy of any indenture, lease, or deed, not duly stamped according to the directions of this act, and shall neglect to bring the same to be duly stamped within the time directed and allowed for stamping indentures, leases, bonds, and other deeds, by the said act passed in this session of parliament, every such attorney, solicitor, clerk, officer, or other person, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.*, to be recovered and applied as any penalty imposed by the said act may be recovered and applied; and no such agreement or copy shall be pleaded or given in evidence, or be good, useful, or available, in any manner whatever, unless the same shall be stamped as required by this act."

By the 37 Geo. III. c. 136, reciting, "whereas deeds and other instruments cannot be given in evidence, nor are in any manner available, unless stamped with proper stamps provided for such purpose; and whereas, from the variety of stamps provided for different purposes, mistakes have arisen, and may again arise, in the use of such stamps, for want of knowing the proper denomination or value required in particular cases; and whereas, in many instances, such instruments cannot be stamped after execution, without paying accumulated penalties, under acts passed from time to time for imposing stamp duties;" it is enacted, "that if any vellum, parchment, or paper, whereupon any instrument, matter, or thing (except bills of exchange, promissory notes, or other notes, drafts, or orders), shall have been or shall be engrossed, printed, or written, liable in respect thereof to be stamped with a stamp or stamps of a particular denomination or value, and whereon there is or shall be impressed any stamp or stamps of a different denomination, but of an equal or greater value with the stamp or stamps required at the time of making, signing, or executing the said instrument, matter, or thing, stamp-office, and payment of the legal duty, and 5*l.* penalty, may be stamped with the proper stamp.

Sect. 2. "That, where any skin or piece of vellum or parchment, or sheet or piece of paper, on which any matter or thing (except bills of exchange, promissory notes, or other notes, drafts, or orders,) shall have been engrossed, printed, or written, shall be brought to the said commissioners to be stamped after the same shall have been executed, the same not having been stamped with any stamp, or having been stamped with a stamp of less value than is by law required, and the person or persons producing the same is desirous of having the same duly stamped, but the same cannot, according to the laws in force, be stamped without payment of accumulated penalties, exceeding 10*l.*, besides the duty, that then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, or the major part of them, to direct the proper officer or officers, and such officer or officers is and are hereby required, to stamp the same, on payment of the duty by law payable for such vellum, parchment, or paper, in respect of the instrument, matter, or thing engrossed, printed, or written thereon; and one penalty of 10*l.* only for every such skin or piece of vellum or parchment, or sheet or piece of paper, although the duty payable for the same shall have been imposed by more than one act of Parliament, and notwithstanding the penalties thereupon may have accumulated to a larger sum than the said sum of 10*l.*; and every instrument, matter, or thing engrossed, printed, or written on any vellum, parchment, or paper so stamped, as aforesaid, shall have and be deemed of the like force and validity in the law as if the vellum, parchment, or paper so stamped, had been duly stamped before such instrument, matter, or thing had been engrossed, printed, or written thereon; any former law to the contrary notwithstanding."

Instruments (bills and notes excepted), unstamped, or on stamps of less than the legal value, may be duly stamped, on payment of the duty, and 10*l.* penalty for each skin, &c.

Sect. 3. "Provided always, that in any case where it shall appear to the commissioners of stamp duties, upon oath or affirmation to be made before any one or more of the said commissioners of stamp duties (which oath or affirmation he is hereby authorized to administer), or otherwise to their satisfaction, that any instrument whatever required by law to be engrossed, printed, or written on stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, hath not been engrossed, printed, or written on vellum, parchment, or paper duly stamped, as aforesaid, either by accident or inadvertency, or from urgent necessity or unavoidable circumstance, and without any intention in any party or parties thereto to defraud his majesty of the duties payable thereon, and such instrument shall be brought to the said commissioners to be stamped, as aforesaid, within sixty days after the making or execution thereof, it shall be lawful for such commissioners of stamp duties to remit the penalty payable on stamping such instrument, or any part thereof, as they shall deem expedient; and every person concerned in engrossing, printing, or writing any such instrument, or in making or executing the same, shall be and is hereby freed, discharged, and indemnified from all further penalties and forfeitures, than such penalties or forfeitures, or such parts thereof, as shall not be so remitted by order of the said commissioners of stamp duties."

If instruments not duly stamped, without intention of fraud, be brought to be so stamped within sixty days after execution, commissioners may remit the penalty.

have not been able to supply the different parts of the kingdom with sufficient quantities of vellum, parchment, and paper, stamped with the additional duties granted by an act of the present session of Parliament, before the period appointed for the commencement of the said duties, and several persons have necessarily used instruments without such stamps; be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any person or persons who shall have used, or shall at any time before the 29th day of September, 1797, use any vellum, parchment, or paper, on which such additional duty is imposed, and which shall be duly stamped in the manner required by the laws in force on and immediately before the passing of the said act, to bring or send the same to the said head office at any time before the 1st day of November, in order that the same may be stamped, as aforesaid, on payment of the additional duty granted by the said act; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of stamp duties, or their officers appointed for such purpose, to stamp the same, on payment of the said additional duty only, without any penalty; and all and every person and persons concerned in engrossing, printing, or writing any matter or thing on such vellum, parchment, or paper, as aforesaid, or in using the same in manner aforesaid, shall be, and is, and are hereby indemnified, freed, and discharged from and against all penalties and forfeitures incurred or to be incurred thereby, before the stamping the same in manner aforesaid."

Sect. 5. And whereas, by an act passed, &c. (31 Geo. III. c. 25), "certain stamp duties were imposed on bills of exchange, promissory notes, and others, respectively, and it was thereby enacted that all vellum, parchment, and paper, before any bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, liable to any stamp duty by the said act imposed, should be engrossed, printed, or written thereon, should be brought to the head office for stamping such vellum, parchment, and paper; and that it should not be lawful for the commissioners for managing the duties on stamped vellum, parchment, and paper, or their officers, to stamp any vellum, parchment, or paper, at any time after any bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, should be written thereon, under any pretence whatsoever;" be it enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons who shall be the holder or holders of any bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, made after the passing of this act, and liable to any stamp duty by virtue of the said recited act, which shall be stamped with a stamp of a different denomination than is required by the said act, if the same shall be of equal or superior value to the stamp required, to produce the same, or cause the same to be produced, within the respective times hereinafter mentioned, to the commissioners appointed to manage the said duties, at the head office of stamps in Middlesex, or to such officer or officers as the said commissioners, or the major part of them, shall, by writing under their hands, appoint for such purpose; and it shall and may be lawful for such commissioners to direct the proper officer or officers, and such officer or officers is and are hereby required, upon payment of the duty payable on such vellum, parchment, or paper, by the said recited act, and such penalty as is hereinafter mentioned, over and above the said duty, to mark or stamp such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, with the proper mark or stamp, and to give a receipt for the duty and penalty so paid on the back of such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, so stamped; and every such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, so stamped, shall have and be deemed of the like force and validity in the law as if the same had been duly stamped according to the directions of the said recited act; and all and every person or persons procuring such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, to be stamped, as directed by this act, shall be, and is, and are hereby indemnified, freed, and discharged, from and against all penalties and forfeitures incurred by reason of such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, not having been duly stamped according to the directions of the said act."

Sect. 6. "If any such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, shall be produced to the said commissioners before the same shall be payable, according to the tenor and effect thereof, the same shall be stamped on payment of the said duty, and the penalty of 40s.; but, in case such bill of exchange, promissory note, or other note, draft, or order, shall be payable according to the tenor and effect thereof, before the production thereof to the said commissioners for the purpose before mentioned, then the same shall not be stamped, unless on payment of the duty, and the sum of 10*l.* for the said penalty."

The 43 Geo. III. c. 126, repeals the prior enactments as far as respects the amount of the duties, and imposes new duties, and declares what shall be deemed a receipt in full, and that, if the stamp be improper, the person giving the receipt shall remain liable to pay the proper duty. It is enacted by sect. 5, "that it shall be lawful for any person or persons, or any agent or agents of any person or persons, from whom any sum or sums of money shall be due or payable, or claimed to be due or payable, and who shall have paid such sum or sums of money to provide a piece of paper, vellum, or parchment, duly stamped with the proper duty, and according to the amount of the sum or sums so paid, as aforesaid, or some higher rate of duty in this act contained, and to demand and require of the person or persons entitled to such sum or sums of money, or any agent or agents to whom the same shall have been paid, a receipt, discharge, and acquittance for such sum or sums of money, and also the amount of the duty thereon, as aforesaid; and if any person to whom any sum or sums of money shall have been paid, as aforesaid, shall refuse to give such receipt, discharge, and acquittance, upon demand thereof, or pay the amount thereof, as aforesaid, every such person shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of 10*l.*, to be recovered as any penalty may be recovered under the said recited acts." And see 35 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 8, 9, ante, 783.

Sect. 6. "No receipt, discharge, or acquittance, aforesaid, liable to the duties by this act granted, or any of them, shall be pleaded or given in evidence in any court, or admitted in any court to be good, useful, or available in law or equity, unless the vellum, parchment, or paper on which such receipt, discharge, or acquittance shall be engrossed, printed, written, or made, shall be stamped or marked with a lawful stamp or mark, to denote the rate of duty, as by this act is directed, or some higher rate of duty in this act contained."

By the 43 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 5, after reciting, "that by an act passed in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act to enable the Commissioners of Stamp Duties to stamp Deeds and other Instruments, Bills of Exchange, Promissory and other Notes in the cases therein mentioned, for it is amongst other things enacted, that it shall be lawful, the said commissioners or their officer, upon payment of the duty and a penalty of 5*l.* in the said act mentioned, to stamp any vellum, parchment, or paper, whereupon any instrument, matter, or thing (except bills of exchange, promissory notes, or other notes, drafts, or orders) shall have been, or shall be engrossed, printed, or written, liable in respect thereof, to be stamped with a stamp or stamps of a particular denomination or value, and whereon there is or shall be impressed any stamp or stamps of a different denomination, but of an equal or greater value, in certain cases therein mentioned: and whereas it is expedient to permit the same to be done without payment of the said penalty,' it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners or their officer as aforesaid, from and after the passing of this act, to stamp or cause to be stamped any such vellum, parchment, or paper (except as aforesaid), in any of the cases hereinbefore mentioned, without payment of the said penalty of 5*l.* required by the said recited act; and every instrument, matter, or thing so stamped shall have and be deemed of the like force and validity as if the said penalty of 5*l.* had been paid, pursuant to the direction of the said act."

Sect. 6. Every instrument, matter, or thing, although stamped, or impressed with any stamp of greater value than the stamp required by law, shall be valid and effectual, provided such stamp shall be of the denomina-

By the 44 Geo. III. c. 98, s. 24, "in any case where it shall appear to the commissioners of his majesty's stamp duties, upon oath or affirmation, to be made before any one or more of the said commissioners (which oath or affirmation he or they is or are hereby authorized to administer), or otherwise to their satisfaction, that any instrument, matter, or thing whatsoever, (except bills of exchange, promissory notes, or other notes, drafts, orders, or receipts) required by law to be engrossed, printed, or written on stamped vellum, parchment, or paper, hath been engrossed, printed, or written on vellum, parchment, or paper not duly stamped with a stamp of the value by this act required, either by accident or inadvertency, or from urgent necessity, or unavoidable circumstances, and without any wilful delay or intention in any party or parties thereto to evade the duties by this act imposed, or to defraud his majesty thereof, and such instrument, matter, or thing shall be brought to the said commissioners to be stamped within twelve months after the making or execution thereof, it shall be lawful for such commissioners of his majesty's stamp duties to remit the penalty payable on stamping such instrument, matter, or thing, or any part thereof, as they shall deem expedient, and every person concerned in engrossing, printing, or writing any such instrument, matter, or thing, or in making or executing the same, shall be and he or she is hereby freed, discharged, and indemnified from all further penalties or forfeitures than such penalties or forfeitures, or such parts thereof, as shall not be remitted by order of the said commissioners of his majesty's stamp duties: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to prevent the said commissioners from stamping any receipts allowed to be stamped, after the same shall have been written and signed under such and the like circumstances, restrictions, and regulations as such receipts may now be stamped: provided also, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorized, to make all such payments and allowances as are by any act or acts now in force, in relation to the duties on vellum, parchment, or paper, or any of those heretofore directed to be made, paid, and allowed by the said commissioners, and are not by this act, or the schedule hereto annexed, varied, altered, or expressly repealed; any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

By the 46 Geo. III. c. 43, "there shall be paid throughout Great Britain, unto and for the use of his majesty, his heirs, and successors, for and upon every skin or piece of vellum or parchment, or sheet or piece of paper upon which any valuation or appraisement, or the amount of any valuation or appraisement of any estate, property, or effects, real or personal, or of any interest in possession or reversion, remainder or contingency, in any estate or property real or personal, shall be written or set down in figures, where the amount of such valuation or appraisement shall not exceed 50*l.*, a stamp duty of 2*s.* 6*d.*; and where the same shall exceed 50*l.* and not exceed 100*l.*, a stamp duty of 5*s.*; and where the same shall exceed 100*l.* and not exceed 200*l.*, a stamp duty of 10*s.*; and where the same shall exceed 200*l.* and not exceed 500*l.*, a stamp duty of 15*s.*; and where the same shall exceed 500*l.*, a stamp duty of 20*s.*; and upon every piece of vellum or parchment, or sheet or piece of paper, whereon any licence of any appraiser shall be written or printed, a stamp duty of 6*s.*"

Sect. 2. The said duties shall be under the management of the commissioners of stamps.

Sect. 3. The powers of former acts relating to stamp duties are extended to this act.

Sect. 4. "That every person who shall value or appraise any estate or property, real or personal, or any interest in possession or reversion, remainder or contingency in any estate or property, real or personal, or any goods, merchandize, or effects, of whatsoever kind or description the same may be, for or in expectation of any hire, gain, fee, or reward, or valuable consideration to be therefore paid him, shall be deemed and taken to be an appraiser within the provisions of this act, to all intents and purposes."

Sect. 5. "That no person shall exercise the calling or occupation of an appraiser, or act as such within the intent and meaning of this act, without taking out a licence in manner hereinafter mentioned; and every such licence shall state the true name and place of abode of the person taking out the same, and it shall be lawful for any two or more of his majesty's commissioners appointed for managing the duties arising by stamps on vellum, parchment, and paper, or for any person duly authorized by such commissioners, or the major part of them, to grant such licences, and every such licence issued between the 5th day of July and the 5th day of August in any year shall bear date on the 6th day of July; and every such licence, issued at any other time, shall bear date the day on which the same shall be issued; and every such licence shall continue in force from the day of the date thereof until the 5th day of July then next following."

Sect. 6. "That no person shall appraise or value any estate or property or effects, real or personal, or any interest in possession or reversion, remainder or expectancy, in any estate or property, real or personal, for or in expectation of hire or reward, without being so licensed as aforesaid, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 7. "That all persons who shall be duly licensed according to law to act as auctioneers shall and may act as appraisers, without taking out any other licence in pursuance of this act, any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 8. "That every appraiser shall write or set down in words or figures every valuation or appraisement made by him or any person for him, and the full amount thereof, and within fourteen days after the making thereof deliver the same to his employer, so written or set down upon vellum, parchment, or paper, duly stamped according to the provisions of this act, on pain of forfeiting for any neglect therein, or for delivering any valuation or appraisement, or the amount of any valuation or appraisement, on any vellum, parchment, or paper, not duly stamped as aforesaid, the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 9. "That no person who shall employ any appraiser to make any appraisement or valuation as aforesaid, shall receive, or take or pay, or make any compensation for the making of any such appraisement or valuation as aforesaid, unless the same shall be written or set down in words or figures upon vellum, parchment, or paper duly stamped according to the provisions of this act, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 10. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to require any stamp upon any piece of vellum, parchment, or paper whereon shall be written or set down any valuation or appraisement extending to more than one piece of vellum, parchment, or paper, other than and except the piece upon which the aggregate amount of the value of the articles contained in such valuation or appraisement shall be written or set down."

Sect. 11. "That nothing herein contained shall extend to charge with any stamp duty any vellum, parchment, or paper upon which any valuation or appraisement made in pursuance of any order of any court of admiralty, vice-admiralty, or any court of appeal from any sentence, adjudication, or judgment of such court, shall be written or set down."

Sect. 12. The duties are to be carried to the consolidated fund.

Sect. 13. Separate accounts of duties shall be kept and annually laid before Parliament, and the amount applied to the charge of any loan of this session.

Sect. 23. "If any or either of the parties hereby made liable to the payment of such penalty and quintuple duty, as aforesaid, shall give information to the commissioners of stamps, whereby such penalty or quintuple duty or any part thereof shall be recovered from any other party or parties liable thereto, the party or parties giving the information shall not only be indemnified and discharged of such his, her, or their liability, but shall also be rewarded by the commissioners of stamps out of the penalty or quintuple duty so recovered, to such extent as the said commissioners, or the major part of them, shall think proper, but not exceeding one-half of what shall be so recovered; and where any other person shall give information whereby any such penalty or quintuple duty shall be recovered, he or she shall be rewarded in the like manner."

Sect. 24. "Where the full purchase or consideration money shall not be truly expressed and set forth, in the manner hereby directed, it shall be lawful for the purchaser or purchasers, or any of them, or his, her, or their executors or administrators, to recover back from the seller or sellers, or his, her, or their executors or administrators, so much and such part of the purchase or consideration money as shall not be expressed and set forth as aforesaid, or the whole thereof, if no part of the same shall be so expressed and set forth, either in an action for money had and received for the use of the party or parties suing for the same, or by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, wherein no essoin, protection, wager of law, or more than one imparlance shall be allowed, or by ordinary action or summary complaint in the court of session, or in the sheriff or steward court of the shire or stewarty where the person or persons sued or complained of shall reside in Scotland, as the case may require, together with double costs of suit."

Sect. 25. "If any attorney, solicitor, writer to the signet, or other person who shall be employed in or about the preparing of any such deed, bond, or other instrument in or upon which the full purchase or consideration money is hereby required to be truly expressed and set forth as aforesaid, or who shall be employed for any of the parties thereto, in anywise, about or relating to the transaction therein mentioned, shall knowingly and wilfully insert or set forth, or cause to be inserted or set forth, in or upon any such deed, bond, or other instrument, any other than the full and true purchase or consideration money directly or indirectly paid or secured, or agreed to be paid for the same, or shall in anywise aid or assist in the doing thereof respectively, every such attorney, solicitor, writer to the signet, or other person so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 500*l.*; and every attorney, solicitor, and writer to the signet so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall also be from thenceforth disabled to practise as an attorney, solicitor, or writer to the signet, and any other person being entitled or intrusted to prepare any such deed or other instrument in virtue of any public office or employment, and being guilty of such offence in the execution of his office or employment, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall also forfeit and lose his office or employment, and be from thenceforth incapable of holding the same."

Sect. 26. "No party, attorney, solicitor, writer to the signet, or other person whosoever shall be liable to any penalty, disability, or forfeiture whatsoever by reason of the full purchase or consideration money not being truly expressed and set forth in or upon any such deed, bond, or other instrument as aforesaid, unless the duty or duties actually paid for the same shall be less than would have been payable for the same, in case the full purchase or consideration money had been truly expressed and set forth according to the directions of this act."

No penalty unless the duty paid be less than the duty payable.

Sect. 27. "Where, upon the sale of any estate of inheritance or freehold in any lands or hereditaments in England, the same shall be conveyed by bargain and sale enrolled, and also by lease and release, or feoffment, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of stamps, and they are hereby required, on the production of both conveyances, and on proof to their satisfaction that the full purchase or consideration money is truly expressed and set forth therein, in the manner hereby directed, and on its appearing that the release or feoffment is stamped with the ad valorem duty hereby charged thereon, and that the bargain and sale is stamped with the ordinary duty hereby charged thereon, to cause the deed of bargain and sale to be also stamped with some particular stamp for testifying the payment of the said ad valorem duty on the release or feoffment, and also where upon the sale of any such estate of inheritance or freehold, the same shall be conveyed by lease and release, and also by feoffment, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby required, on the production of both conveyances and on proof to their satisfaction that the full purchase or consideration money is truly expressed and set forth therein in the manner hereby directed, and on its appearing that the release is stamped with the ad valorem duty hereby charged thereon, and that the feoffment is stamped with the ordinary duty hereby charged thereon, to cause the feoffment to be also stamped with some particular stamp for testifying the payment of the said ad valorem duty on the release, and thereupon the bargain and sale in the former case, and the feoffment in the latter case, shall be as available in law, and of the like force and effect in all respects as if the same had been stamped with the ad valorem duty itself, but until the same shall be so stamped as aforesaid, the same shall not be given in evidence or be available in any manner whatsoever."

Where lands are conveyed by bargain and sale enrolled, and also by lease and release, or feoffment, the former shall be specially stamped, to testify payment of the ad valorem duty on the latter.

Sect. 28. "If any officer of any of his majesty's courts at Westminster, or any clerk of the peace, or other person intrusted to enrol deeds of bargain and sale of estates of freehold in England, shall enrol any deed of bargain and sale, made after the 10th day of October, 1808, whereby any freehold lands or hereditaments shall be conveyed to any purchaser or purchasers, or other person or persons, by his, her, or their direction, unless such deed of bargain and sale shall appear to be stamped with the proper ad valorem duty hereby charged on conveyances upon the sale of lands, or other property, according to the amount of the purchase or consideration money therein expressed, or with such particular stamp as aforesaid, for testifying the payment of the said ad valorem duty on a deed of release or feoffment of the same lands or hereditaments, every such officer or clerk of the peace, or other person so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 50*l.*"

Sect. 30. "Where any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments shall be proposed to be surrendered in court, the person or persons proposing to surrender the same shall deliver to the steward of the manor or honour, whereof such lands or hereditaments shall be holden, a note in writing, stating whether the surrender proposed is upon a sale, or not upon a sale, and in the former case specifying the amount of the purchase or consideration money agreed upon for such lands or hereditaments, to the intent that the same may be inserted and set forth in words at length, in or upon the copy of court roll, to be afterwards made out of such surrender, pursuant to the directions of this act, and until such note in writing shall be delivered, the lord or lady, or steward of the manor or honour, shall not accept or take the proposed surrender, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 50*l.*; and where the proposed surrender shall be upon a sale, if the steward shall neglect to insert the said purchase or consideration money, in or upon the copy of court roll to be afterwards made out of such surrender, in words at length, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 50*l.*; and if upon the sale of any such lands or hereditaments, any person or persons shall in the note so to be delivered as aforesaid, state the proposed surrender to be not upon a sale, he, she, or they shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 31. "Where any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments shall be intended to be conveyed to any person or persons (either upon the sale or mortgage thereof or otherwise), by means of a surrender made out of court, or by a deed of bargain and sale, or other deed by commissioners named in a commission of bankrupt, or by executors or others, by virtue of a power given by will or by act of Parliament, the lord or lady, or steward of the manor or honour whereof such lands or hereditaments shall be parcel or be holden, shall not enrol any such surrender or deed, or accept any presentment thereof, or admit any person to be tenant of such lands or hereditaments under or by virtue of the same respectively, unless such deed or surrender, or the memorandum of such surrender, shall be duly stamped with the duty hereby charged thereon respectively, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 50*l.*"

Sect. 32. "If any lord or lady, or steward of any manor or honour, shall accept or take any surrender, or admit any person tenant of any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments out of court, or make any voluntary grant of any such lands or hereditaments out of court, or grant any licence to demise any such lands or hereditaments out of court, without causing the same or some memorandum thereof respectively to be put in writing on vellum, parchment, or paper duly stamped with the proper duty hereby charged thereon respectively, then and in every such case he or she shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 50*l.*"

Sect. 33. "In all cases of surrenders, admittances, and voluntary grants of or to any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments, and in all cases of licences to demise any such lands or hereditaments, which shall be taken, made, or granted in court, the steward of the manor or honour whereof such lands or tenements shall be parcel or be holden, shall make out a copy of court roll of every such surrender, admittance, voluntary grant, and licence to demise, on vellum, parchment, or paper, duly stamped according to the directions of this act, within four calendar months next after the surrender, admittance, voluntary grant, or licence shall be made or granted, and shall deliver the same to the party or parties entitled thereto, or any other person authorized to receive the same, whenever the same shall be called for, after the expiration of such four calendar months, and if the same shall not be called for, then the steward shall deliver the same to the bailiff of the manor or honour, or to the crier of the court, or to some copyhold or customary tenant of the manor or honour for the use of the party or parties entitled thereto, at the next general court to be holden for the said manor or honour, and if any such steward shall neglect to make out and deliver such copy or copies of court roll in the manner and within the time aforesaid, he shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.* for every such surrender, admittance, voluntary grant, and licence to demise, of which he shall neglect to make out and deliver a copy of court roll in the manner and within the time aforesaid; and the stamp duty payable in respect of every such copy of court roll shall be a debt to his majesty, his heirs, and successors, of the steward so neglecting to make out and deliver the same, whether he shall have received the duty or not; and if he shall not have received the duty, the same shall also be a debt to his majesty, his heirs, and successors, of the party or parties entitled to such copy of court roll; and the said steward shall also be bound to make out and deliver such copy of court roll to the party or parties entitled thereto, whenever afterwards the same shall be demanded, without being paid any fees for the same; and if any fees shall have been previously paid to him for the same, such fees shall be deemed to have been paid without consideration, and the party or parties who paid such fees, his, her, or their executors or administrators shall be entitled to recover back the same in an action for money had and received to his, her, or their use, with full costs of suit."

Stamp duty a debt to the king.

Fees.

Sect. 34. "That it shall be lawful for the steward of any manor or honour, previously to the acceptance of any surrender or the granting or making of any admittance, voluntary grant, or licence, to demise in court from and after the 10th day of October, 1808, to demand and insist on the payment of his lawful fees for the same, and for the copy of court roll to be made out thereof, together with the stamp duty payable on such copy of court roll; and in case of nonpayment of such fees and stamp duty, it shall be lawful for the lord or lady, or steward of the manor, to refuse to accept the surrender, or to grant the admittance or licence, or to make the voluntary grant which shall be proposed or have been contracted for, until such fees and stamp duties shall be paid."

Stewards of manors may insist on payment of fees and the stamp duty before accepting surrenders.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 184, several pre-existing duties are repealed.

55 Geo. 3. c. 184.

By sect. 2, the duties specified in schedule annexed are to be levied.

By sect. 3, the duties are to be under the management of commissioners of stamps, who are to provide stamps, &c.

By sect. 4, old stamps may be used to denote new duties; and two or more stamps to denote one duty, till single stamp provided. Stamps bearing the name of any instrument, not to be used for any other.

By sect. 5, paper, &c., stamped with former duties may be used for instruments charged with new duties of same amount, except stamps bearing the name of the instrument.

By sect. 6, stamped paper, &c., rendered useless by this act, may be exchanged, or have additional stamps.

Sect. 7. "That if any person shall forge or counterfeit, or cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, any stamp or die, or any part of any stamp or die, which shall have been provided, made, or used, in pursuance of this act, or in pursuance of any former act or acts, relating to any stamp duty or duties, or shall forge, counterfeit, or resemble, or cause or procure to be forged, counterfeited, or resembled, the impression, or any part of the impression of any such stamp or die as aforesaid, upon any vellum, parchment, or paper, or shall stamp or mark, or cause or procure to be stamped or marked, any vellum, parchment, or paper, with any such forged or counterfeited stamp or die, or part of any stamp or die, as aforesaid, with intent to defraud his majesty, his heirs, or successors, of any of the duties hereby granted, or any part thereof; or if any person shall utter or sell, or expose to sale, any vellum, parchment, or paper, having thereupon the impression of any such forged or counterfeited stamp or die, or part of any stamp or die, or any such forged, counterfeited, or resembled impression, or part of impression, as aforesaid, knowing the same respectively to be forged, counterfeited or resembled; or if any person shall privately and secretly use any stamp or die which shall have been so provided, made, or used as aforesaid, with intent to defraud his majesty, his heirs, or successors, of any of the said duties or any part thereof; or if any person shall fraudulently cut, tear, or get off, or cause or procure to be cut, torn, or got off, the impression of any stamp or die which shall have been provided, made, or used in pursuance of this or any former act, for expressing or denoting any duty or duties under the care and management of the commissioners of stamps, or any part of such duty or duties, from any vellum, parchment, or paper whatsoever, with intent to use the same for or upon any other vellum, parchment, or paper, or any instrument or writing charged or chargeable with any of the duties hereby granted; then and in every such case every person so offending, and every person knowingly and wilfully aiding, abetting, or assisting any person or persons in committing any such offence as aforesaid, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon without benefit of clergy (a).” But now, by the 1 Wil. IV. c. 66, the punishment of death for this offence is abolished, and the offender is to be transported or imprisoned. See “Forgery,” Vol. II.

By sect. 8, the powers and provisions of former acts are to extend to this act.

By sect. 9, the provisions of former acts respecting agreements are to be applied only to those charged with 1*l*.

By sect. 10, instruments having wrong stamps, but of sufficient value, to be valid. Exception, where the stamp on face of it appropriated to a different description of instrument.

By sect. 11, a penalty of 50*l*. is imposed for making, accepting, or paying bills of exchange, &c., not duly stamped.

By sect. 12, a penalty of 100*l*. is imposed for post-dating bills of exchange, &c.

By sect. 13, a penalty of 100*l*. is imposed for issuing unstamped drafts on bankers, without specifying the place where issued, or if post-dated. For receiving such drafts 20*l*.; and on bankers for paying them, 100*l*., &c.

By sect. 14, promissory notes to bearer on demand, not exceeding 100*l*., may be re-issued by the original makers, without further duty.

By sect. 15, such notes are not liable to further duty, though re-issued by certain persons not strictly the original makers.

By sect. 16, notes re-issuable under the 48 or 53 Geo. III. to continue re-issuable till end of three years from the date. Penalty on frauds, 50*l*.

By sect. 18, a penalty of 50*l*. is imposed on issuing notes in future with printed dates.

By sect. 19, notes re-issuable for a limited period are to be cancelled on payment afterwards; and notes not re-issuable are to be cancelled immediately on payment. A penalty of 50*l*. is imposed for re-issuing notes, &c., contrary to law, and for not cancelling them; and for taking notes, &c., re-issued contrary to law, a 20*l*. penalty is imposed.

By sect. 29, promissory notes made out of Great Britain are not to be negotiable, unless stamped, under a penalty, on circulating such notes, &c., of 20*l*. for each.

Sect. 37. “If any person shall take possession of, and in any manner administer, any part of the personal estate and effects of any person deceased, without obtaining probate of the will or letters of administration of the estate and effects of the deceased, within six calendar months after his or her decease, or within two calendar months after the termination of any suit or dispute respecting the will or the right to letters of administration, if

Sect. 38. "No ecclesiastical court or person shall grant probate of the will or letters of administration of the estate and effects of any person deceased, without first requiring and receiving from the person or persons applying for the probate or letters of administration, or from some other competent person or persons, an affidavit, or solemn affirmation in the case of Quakers, that the estate and effects of the deceased, for or in respect of which the probate or letters of administration is or are to be granted, exclusive of what the deceased shall have been possessed of or entitled to as a trustee for any other person or persons, and not beneficially, but including the leasehold estates for years of the deceased, whether absolute or determinable on lives, if any, and without deducting any thing on account of the debts due and owing from the deceased, are under the value of a certain sum to be therein specified, to the best of the deponent's or affirmant's knowledge, information, and belief, in order that the proper and full stamp duty may be paid on such probate or letters of administration; which affidavit or affirmation shall be made before the surrogate or other person, who shall administer the usual oath for the due administration of the estate and effects of the deceased."

Ecclesiastical courts not to grant probates or letters of administration without affidavit of the value of effects.

Sect. 39. "Every such affidavit or affirmation shall be exempt from stamp duty, and shall be transmitted to the said commissioners of stamps, together with the copy of the will, or extract, or account of the letters of administration to which it shall relate, by the registrar or other officer of the court, whose duty it shall be to transmit copies of wills, and extracts or accounts of letters of administration, to the said commissioners, for the better collection of the duties on legacies and successions to personal estate upon intestacy; and if any registrar, or other officer whose duty it shall be, shall neglect to transmit such affidavit or affirmation to the said commissioners of stamps as hereby directed, every person so offending shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*"

Affidavits to be free of stamp duty, and to be transmitted to commissioners of stamps.

Sect. 40. "Where any person, on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration, shall have estimated the estate and effects of the deceased to be of greater value than the same shall have afterwards proved to be, and shall in consequence have paid too high a stamp duty thereon, if such person shall produce the probate or letters of administration to the said commissioners of stamps within six calendar months after the true value of the estate and effects shall have been ascertained, and it shall be discovered that too high a duty was first paid on the probate or letters of administration, and shall deliver to them a particular inventory and account, and valuation of the estate and effects of the deceased, verified by an affidavit, or solemn affirmation in the case of Quakers; and if it should thereupon satisfactorily appear to the said commissioners that a greater stamp duty was paid on the probate or letters of administration than the law required, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to cancel and expunge the stamp on the probate or letters of administration, and to substitute another stamp for denoting the duty which ought to have been paid thereon, and to make an allowance for the difference between them, as in the cases of spoiled stamps, or if the difference be considerable, to repay the same in money, at the discretion of the said commissioners."

Provision for the case of too high a stamp duty being paid on probates, &c.

Sect. 41. "Where any person, on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration, shall have estimated the estate and effects of the deceased to be of less value than the same shall have afterwards proved to be, and shall in consequence have paid too little stamp duty thereon, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of stamps, on delivery to them of an affidavit or solemn affirmation of the value of the estate and effects of the deceased, to cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped, on payment of the full duty which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value, and of the further sum or penalty payable by law for stamping deeds after the execution thereof, without any deduction or allowance of the stamp duty originally paid on such probate or letters of administration : provided always, that if the application shall be made within six calendar months after the true value of the estate and effects shall be ascertained, and it shall be discovered that too little duty was at first paid on the probate or letters of administration, and if it shall appear by affidavit or solemn affirmation, to the satisfaction of the said commissioners, that such duty was paid in consequence of any mistake or misapprehension, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate and effects belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud, or to delay the payment of the full and proper duty, then it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to remit the before-mentioned penalty, and to cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped, on payment only of the sum which shall be wanting to make up the duty which ought to have been first paid thereon."

Sect. 42. " Provided always, that in cases of letters of administration, on which too little stamp duty shall have been paid at first, the said commissioners of stamps shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in the manner aforesaid, until the administrator shall have given such security to the ecclesiastical court or ordinary, by whom the letters of administration shall have been granted, as ought by law to have been given on the granting thereof, in case the full value of the estate and effects of the deceased had been then ascertained ; and also that the said commissioners of stamps shall yearly or oftener transmit an account of the probates and letters of administration, upon which the stamps shall have been rectified, in pursuance of this act, to the several ecclesiastical courts by which the same shall have been granted, together with the value of the estate and effects of the deceased, upon which such rectification shall have proceeded."

Sect. 43. " Where too little duty shall have been paid on any probate or letters of administration, in consequence of any mistake or misapprehension, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate and effects belonged to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters of administration shall not, within six calendar months after the passing of this act (11th July, 1815), or after the discovery of the mistake or misapprehension, or of any estate or effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said commissioners of stamps, and pay what shall be wanting to make up the duty which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters of administration, he or she shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*, and also a further sum at and after the rate of 10*l.* per centum on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper duty."

Sect. 44. " From and after the expiration of three calendar months from the passing of this act (11th July, 1815), it shall not be lawful for any ecclesiastical court or person to call in and revoke or to accept the surrender of any probate or letters of administration, on the ground only of too high or too low a stamp duty having been paid thereon, as heretofore hath been practised ; and if any ecclesiastical court or person shall so do, the commissioners of stamps shall not make any allowance whatever for the stamp duty on the probate or letters of administration which shall be so annulled."

By sect. 45, the commissioners of stamps may give credit for the duty on probates and letters of administration in certain cases.

By sect. 46, the commissioners may extend the credit, if necessary.

By sect. 47, the probate or letters of administration stamped on credit are to be deposited with the commissioners.

By sect. 48, the duty for which credit shall be given is to be a debt to the crown.

By sect. 49, provision is made for the case of letters of administration, de bonis non, taken out before payment of the duty, for which credit shall be given.

By sect. 50, directions are made concerning affidavits by executors, &c., residing out of England, relating to trust property.

By sect. 51, a return of the duty on probates, &c., is to be made in respect of debts, if claimed in three years. 55 Geo. 3, c. 184.

By sect. 52, affidavits relating to stamp duties, if no express provision to the contrary, are to be made before commissioners, &c. See the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 97, s. 22, ante, 778.

Sect. 53. "All and every person and persons before whom any affidavit or solemn affirmation is or shall be required or directed to be made by this or any former or future act of Parliament relating to any stamp duties, shall be and they are hereby authorized to take the same, and administer the proper oath or affirmation for that purpose; and if any person making any such affidavit or affirmation shall knowingly and wilfully make a false oath or affirmation of or concerning any of the matters to be therein specified and set forth, every person so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be subject and liable to such pains and penalties as by any law now in force persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject and liable to." See, ante, "Perjury." Penalty for perjury.

The 55 Geo. III. c. 184, then gives a schedule, pointing out the various duties to be paid on instruments. See the same, post, p. 800.

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 55, stamp duties on deeds relating to property in Ireland or in Great Britain respectively are to be charged with the duties chargeable on the property in those places wherever the deed is executed, and though it contain a general covenant to pay, &c.

Sect. 2 provides as to charging stamp duty on bonds and covenants for payment of money, and contains proviso as to description of residence of obligor, &c., in such bond or covenant.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 41, it is enacted, that from the 10th day of October, 1824, duties mentioned in the schedule annexed thereto shall cease, as also duties on bonds on commissioners of bankrupt, on bonds on replevy of goods, and also on copy of wills or power of attorney deposited in any ecclesiastical court (a). 5 Geo. 4, c. 41. Law proceedings.

Sect. 3. "And whereas it is expedient to make provision for the better protecting the duties payable to his majesty, his heirs and successors, upon stamped vellum, parchment, and paper;" it is enacted, "that in any suit, prosecution, or proceeding to be brought against any person or persons, or body politic or corporate, for the taking or retaining, or for the losing, damaging, or destroying of any vellum, parchment, or paper upon which any stamp or stamped mark or marks denoting any duty or duties imposed by law hath been impressed or put, or for any other cause of action or proceeding relating to the same respectively, such suit, prosecution, or proceeding shall and may be commenced, instituted, and proceeded in in the name of his majesty, his heirs and successors, or in the name of the attorney or solicitor general in England or Ireland, or of the advocate or solicitor general in Scotland, respectively for the time being, for and on behalf of his said majesty, his heirs and successors; and that, in all such suits, prosecutions, or proceedings, the property in all such vellum, parchment, or paper so stamped, marked, and impressed, as aforesaid, shall be described to be, and shall be deemed and taken to be in his majesty, his heirs and successors; and that the value of the same respectively shall be deemed and taken to be the amount of the value of the vellum, parchment, and paper, and of the stamp duty or stamp duties denoted by the stamp or stamps, mark or marks so impressed and put upon the same respectively; and further, that in every prosecution for embezzling or stealing such vellum, parchment, or paper, so stamped, marked, and impressed as aforesaid, or for any other offence for or relating to the same respectively, it shall be sufficient, in the indictment or information, to state and describe the property in the same to be in his of vessels to cease.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 41, s. 1, all stamp duties now payable in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, upon or in respect of any bill of sale or any conveyance, assignment, or other deed or instrument whatever, for the sale, transfer, or other disposition, either absolutely or by way of mortgage or otherwise, of any ship or vessel, or any part, interest, share, or property of or in any ship or vessel, shall wholly cease, determine, and no longer be paid or payable, any thing in any act or acts of Parliament contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

By sect. 2, stamp duties on bonds given under direction of commissioners of customs or excise, and on debentures or certificates for receiving drawbacks or bounties, are to cease. Duties to be paid on bonds, and on debentures or certificates. Exceptions thereto are introduced.

By sect. 3 the duties are to be under commissioners of stamps.

Agent unduly including in same bond goods of different persons.

Sect. 4. "That if any agent, or any other person who shall be required by any act of Parliament, or by the direction of the commissioners of customs or excise, or any of their officers, to give or enter into any bond for or in respect of any duties of customs or excise, or for preventing frauds or evasions thereof, or for any matter or thing relating thereto, shall include in one and the same bond any goods or things bonâ fide belonging to more persons than one, not being copartners, or joint tenants, or tenants in common, every such agent or other person shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 50*l*."

By sect. 5 the powers of former acts relating to stamps are to extend to this act.

9 Geo. 4, c. 13.

9 Geo. 4, c. 23.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 13, regulates the duties on insurances against fire.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 23, is an act to enable bankers in England to issue certain unstamped promissory notes and bills of exchange, upon payment of a composition in lieu of the stamp duties thereon.

9 Geo. 4, c. 27.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 27, from the 5th day of July, 1828, the allowances granted by the 44 Geo. III. c. 93, on the purchase of stamps for receipts, are repealed, and a new allowance is to be made in lieu thereof.

By sect. 2 the commissioners are to issue stamps for receipts without any charge for paper.

By sect. 3 the commissioners are authorized to grant the allowance on stamping special forms of receipts.

Penalty on vendors of receipt-stamps charging for the paper, 10*l*.

Sect. 4. "And whereas it is highly improper that any vendor of stamps for receipts should, upon the sale thereof, make any charge for the paper upon which such stamps are impressed, seeing that such paper is by this act directed to be supplied gratis by the commissioners of stamps;" it is enacted, "that if any person or persons, upon the sale of any stamp or stamps for a receipt or receipts, shall make any charge to the purchaser of such stamp or stamps for the paper whereon the same shall be impressed, or shall, under any colour or pretence whatever, demand or receive a greater price or sum than the amount of the stamp duty denoted by such stamp or stamps, every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 10*l*., to be sued for and recovered, levied and applied, in such and the same manner as any penalties under any other act or acts relating to stamp duties may be sued for, recovered, levied, and applied."

Not to prevent any charge for books of receipt-stamps, or for vellum or parch-

Sect. 5. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent any person or persons from making any charge for any bound book containing stamps for receipts, or for any folio sheet of paper containing not more than one stamp, or for any skin or piece of vellum or parchment whereon any such stamp or stamps may be impressed, nor to inflict any penalty or penalties by reason of the making of any such charge as aforesaid."

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 49, is an act to amend the laws in force relating to the stamp duties on sea insurances, on articles of clerkship, on certificates of writers to the signet, and of conveyancers and others, on licences to dealers in gold and silver plate, and pawnbrokers, on drafts on bankers, and on licences for stage-coaches in Great Britain; and on receipts in Ireland.

9 Geo. 4, c. 49.

By sect. 16, so much of 50 Geo. III. c. 48, as directs the names of proprietors of stage-coaches to be painted on the doors thereof, is repealed; but nothing therein contained is to repeal or alter any part of 25 Geo. III. c. 51, as to names of licensed persons being painted on the doors of coaches, &c.

Sect. 17 repeals so much of 7 Geo. IV. c. 33, as permits informations to be laid by any persons as to stage-coaches. (See, ante, "Stage Coaches.")

Sect. 18. "From and after the passing of this act, in all cases where any information shall have been laid or shall be laid before any justice or justices of the peace in Great Britain, by any person other than the solicitor of stamps in England or Scotland, or some officer of the stamp duties, for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture made or incurred by virtue of any act or acts relating to any duties under the management of the commissioners of stamps, it shall be lawful for the person or persons against whom such information shall have been or shall be laid to apply to the justice or justices of the peace before whom the information shall have been laid, or to the justices of the peace at the general quarter sessions to which any appeal shall have been or shall be duly made from any conviction obtained or made on any such information, or laid by any person other than as aforesaid, to quash such information or conviction upon payment by the defendant of such costs and charges as to such justice or justices shall seem reasonable; and it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, if they shall think fit so to do, and such justice or justices are hereby authorized and empowered, upon such application, to quash such information or conviction accordingly."

Justices may quash informations laid by any other person than an officer of stamps, on payment of costs.

Sect. 19. Penalties of 20*l.* and 50*l.* under 55 Geo. III. c. 100, as to receipts in Ireland, reduced to 10*l.*

Sect. 20. "And that, from and after the expiration of ten days next after the passing of this act, so much of the last recited act as declares that any clerk or person in the employment of another, who shall commit certain offences in the said act mentioned relating to receipts, shall, upon being convicted thereof, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by fine and imprisonment, and other corporal punishment, shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and, from and after the expiration of ten days next after the passing of this act, any clerk or other person in the employment of another, who shall have committed or shall commit any such offence, shall, upon conviction for any such offence, forfeit the sum of 10*l.*, and no more, in addition to the penalty to which the employer or employers of such person is or are by the said last-mentioned act or by this act subject and liable in respect of such offence."

So much of 55 Geo. 3, c. 100, as declared certain offences by clerks as to receipts to be misdemeanors, repealed.

Sect. 22. "In every case in which any suit, proceeding, or prosecution shall have been commenced with relation to any such offences under the said last-recited act, and in which judgment or a conviction shall not have been obtained before the passing of this act, such suit, proceeding, or prosecution, shall not be abated or affected in consequence of the provisions of this act, and it shall not be necessary to recommence such suit, proceeding, or prosecution; but in case a judgment or conviction shall be obtained therein, the same shall be given only for the amount of the penalty or penalties by this act imposed, in lieu of the penalty or punishment of the said recited act."

Stat. 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 23, s. 1, repeals stamp duties on sea insurances in certain cases; and sect. 2 grants a new schedule for same.

Sect. 5 exempts insurances on agricultural produce and implements of husbandry.

By sect. 6 separate accounts of insurances on agricultural produce, &c., are to be rendered quarterly to the commissioners of stamps.

Stat. 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 60, repeals the stamp duty on insurances on lives not exceeding 100*l.*, and reduced duties are granted in lieu thereof.

The following is the Schedule to which the 55 Geo. III. c. 184, refers. (a)

PART THE FIRST.

Containing the duties on admissions to offices, &c.; on instruments of conveyance, contract, obligation, and security for money; on deeds in general; and on other instruments, matters, and things not falling under either of the following heads.

PART THE SECOND.

Containing the duties on law proceedings, or proceedings in the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts, and in the several courts of law and equity at Westminster, and other courts in Great Britain, and in the offices belonging thereto, and before the Lord High Chancellor, or the Lord Keeper, or Commissioners for the Custody of the Great Seal, in matters of bankruptcy and lunacy. [But this is repealed by 5 Geo. IV. c. 41, ante, p. 797, as to all the items, except those not here omitted.]

PART THE THIRD.

Containing the duties on probates of wills and letters of administration; on confirmations of testaments, testamentary and dative; on inventories to be exhibited in the commissary courts of Scotland; on legacies out of real or personal, heritable, or moveable estate; and on successions to personal or moveable estates upon intestacy.

PART THE FIRST.

General Directions respecting Bonds.

Where any such bond as aforesaid, together with any schedule, receipt, or other matter put or indorsed thereon, or annexed thereto, shall contain 2160 words or upwards, there shall be charged for every entire quantity of 1080 words contained therein, over and above the first 1080 words, a further progressive duty of 1 5 0

And where any such bond as aforesaid shall be given as a security for the payment of a sum of money, and also of a share in any of the stocks or funds before mentioned, on an annuity, or both, or for the payment of an annuity, and also of a share in any of the said stocks or funds, the proper ad valorem duty shall be charged in respect of each.

And where any such bond as aforesaid shall be given as a security for the payment or transfer to different persons of separate and distinct sums of money, or annuities or shares in any of the stocks or funds before mentioned, the proper ad valorem duty shall be charged in respect of each separate and distinct sum of money, or annuity or share in any of the said stocks or funds therein specified and secured, and not upon the aggregate amount thereof.

And where any bond in England shall be given as a security for the performance of any covenant or agreement for the payment or transfer of any sum of money, or annuity, or any share in any of the stocks or funds before mentioned, such bond shall be charged with the same duty as if the same had been immediately given for the payment or transfer of such money, or annuity, or share of the said stocks or funds.

And where in England any bond for the payment or transfer, or for the performance of any covenant for the payment or transfer of any sum of money or annuity, or any share in any of the stocks or funds before mentioned, shall be contained in one and the same deed or writing, with any other matter or thing, in this schedule specifically charged with any duty (except any declaration of trust of the money, annuity, stock, or fund secured), such deed or writing shall be charged with the same duties as such bond and other matter or thing would have been charged with, if contained in separate deeds.

But where, in England, a bond for the performance of covenants or agreements (other than for the payment or transfer of any sum of money, or annuity, or any share in any of the said stocks or funds), shall be contained in the same deed or writing, with any other matter or thing, the same shall not be charged separately, but the whole shall be considered as one deed, and be charged accordingly, under its proper denomination.

Exemptions from the preceding and all other Stamp Duties.

Bonds of the Royal Exchange and London Assurance Corporations, exempted from stamp duty by the act of the sixth year of the reign of king George the First, under which they were incorporated.

But if there shall be both a feoffment and a bargain and sale enrolled, then the said further duty shall not attach on either.

Note.—The purchase or consideration money is to be truly expressed and set forth in words at length, in or upon every such principal or only deed or instrument of conveyance.

And where any lands or other property, of different tenures or holdings, or held under different titles, contracted to be sold at one entire price for the whole, shall be conveyed to the purchaser in separate parts or parcels, by different deeds or instruments, the purchase or consideration money shall be divided and apportioned in such manner as the parties shall think fit, so that a distinct price or consideration for each separate part or parcel may be set forth in or upon the principal or only deed or instrument of conveyance relating thereto; which shall be charged with the said ad valorem duty in respect of the price or consideration money therein set forth.

And where any lands or other property, contracted to be purchased by two or more persons jointly, or by any person for himself and others, or wholly for others, at one entire price for the whole, shall be conveyed in parts or parcels, by separate deeds or instruments, to the persons for whom the same shall be purchased, for distinct parts or shares of the purchase money; the principal or only deed or instrument of conveyance, of each separate part or parcel, shall be charged with the said ad valorem duty, in respect of the sum of money therein specified as the consideration for the same.

But if separate parts or parcels of such lands or other property shall be conveyed to, or to the use of, or in trust for different persons, in and by one and the same deed or instrument, then such deed or instrument shall be charged with the said ad valorem duty, in respect of the aggregate amount of the purchase or consideration moneys therein mentioned to be paid or agreed to be paid, for the lands or property thereby conveyed.

And where any person, having contracted for the purchase of any lands or other property, but not having obtained a conveyance thereof, shall contract to sell to any other person, and the same shall in consequence be conveyed immediately to the sub-purchaser, the principal or only deed or instrument of conveyance shall be charged with the said ad valorem duty, in respect of the purchase or consideration money therein mentioned to be paid, or agreed to be paid, by the sub-purchaser.

And where any person, having contracted for the purchase of any lands or other property, but not having obtained a conveyance thereof, shall contract to sell the whole or any part or parts thereof, to any other person or persons, and the same shall in consequence be conveyed, by the original seller, to different persons, in parts or parcels; the principal or only deed or instrument of conveyance, of each part or parcel thereof, shall be charged with the said ad valorem duty, in respect only of the purchase or consideration money which shall be therein mentioned to be paid or agreed to be paid for the same, by the person or persons to whom or to whose use or in trust for whom the conveyance shall be made, without regard to the amount of the original purchase-money.

And in all cases of such sub-sales as aforesaid, the sub-purchasers, and the persons immediately selling to them, shall be deemed and taken to be the purchasers and sellers, within the intent and meaning of the provisions and regulations of the aforesaid act of the 48th year of his majesty's reign, relating to the ad valorem duties on conveyances on the sale of property thereby imposed, and which are to be observed and enforced with regard to the said ad valorem duties hereby granted.

But where any sub-purchaser shall take an actual conveyance of the interest of the person immediately selling to him, which shall be chargeable with the said ad valorem duty in respect of the purchase or consideration money paid or agreed to be paid by him, and shall be duly stamped accordingly; any deed or instrument of conveyance to be afterwards made to him, of the property in question, by the original seller, shall be exempted from the said ad valorem duty, and be charged only with the ordinary duty on deeds or instruments of the same kind not upon a sale.

And where any lands or other property, separately contracted to be purchased of different persons, at separate and distinct prices, shall be conveyed to the purchaser, or as he shall direct, in and by one and the same deed or instrument; such deed or instrument shall be charged with the said ad valorem duty, in respect of the aggregate amount of the purchase or consideration moneys therein mentioned to be paid or agreed to be paid for the same.

And where any lands, or other property, shall be sold and conveyed, in consideration, wholly or in part, of any sum of money charged thereon by way of mortgage, wadset, or otherwise, and then due and owing to the purchaser, or shall be sold and conveyed, subject to any mortgage, wadset, bond, or other debt, or to any gross or entire sum of money, to be afterwards paid by the purchaser, such sum of money or debt shall be deemed the purchase or consideration money, or part of the purchase or consideration money, as the case may be, in respect whereof the said ad valorem duty is to be paid.

And to prevent doubts respecting what shall be deemed the principal deed or instrument of conveyance, in certain cases, it is hereby declared:

That where any lands or hereditaments, in England, shall be conveyed by bargain and sale enrolled, and also by lease and release, or feoffment, with or without any such letter or letters of attorney therein contained as aforesaid, the release or feoffment shall be deemed the principal deed; and the bargain and sale shall be charged only with the duty hereby imposed on deeds in general. (See Deed.) But the same shall not be enrolled or be available, unless also stamped for testifying the payment of the ad valorem duty on the release or feoffment.

And where any lands or hereditaments shall be conveyed by lease and release, and also by feoffment, with or without any such letter or letters of attorney therein contained as aforesaid, the release shall be deemed the principal deed; and the feoffment shall be charged only with the duty hereby imposed on deeds in general. (See Deed.) But the same shall not be available, unless also stamped for testifying the payment of the ad valorem duty on the release.

And where any copyhold or customary estate shall be conveyed, by a deed of bargain and sale, by the commissioners named in a commission of bankrupt, or by executors or others, by virtue of a power given by will, or by act of Parliament, or otherwise, where a surrender shall not be necessary, the deed of bargain and sale shall be deemed a principal instrument.

And in other cases of copyhold or customary estates, the surrender or voluntary grant, or the memorandum thereof respectively, if made out of court, or the copy of court roll of the surrender or voluntary grant, if made in court, shall be deemed the principal instrument.

And copies of court roll, made after the 31st day of August, 1815, of surrenders and voluntary grants made in court before or upon that day, and subsequent to the 10th day of October, 1808, shall be charged with the said ad valorem duties. But copies of court roll, of surrenders and voluntary grants made before or upon the 10th day of October, 1808, shall not be liable thereto.

And grants, and copies of court roll of grants, of copyhold or customary estates for a life or lives, are to be charged, as well as those for any greater interest.

55 Geo. 3, c. 184.

And where in Scotland there shall be a disposition or assignation, executed by the seller, and any other instrument or instruments, writing or writings, to complete the title, the disposition or assignation shall be deemed the principal instrument.

And where, upon the sale of any annuity or other right, not before in existence, the same shall not be created by actual grant or conveyance, but shall only be secured by bond, warrant of attorney, covenant, contract, or otherwise; the bond or other instrument, by which the same shall be secured, or some one of such instruments, if there be more than one, shall be deemed and taken to be liable to the same duty, as an actual grant or conveyance.

And in the case of leases or tacks, where a yearly rent of 20*l.* or upwards shall be reserved, as part of the consideration for the same, there shall be charged a further duty; for which see title Lease.

And where the principal or only deed or instrument of conveyance, together with any schedule, receipt, or other matter, put or indorsed thereon, or annexed thereto, shall contain 2160 words or upwards, then for every entire quantity of 1080 words contained therein, over and above the first 1080 words, a further progressive duty of

And where there shall be several deeds, instruments, or writings, for completing the title to the property sold, such of them as are not liable to the said ad valorem duty shall be charged with the duty to which the same may be liable, under any general or particular description of such deeds, instruments, or writings contained in this schedule.

And where, in any case not hereby expressly provided for, of several deeds, instruments, or writings, a doubt shall arise which is the principal, it shall be lawful for the parties to determine for themselves which shall be so deemed, and to pay the said ad valorem duty thereon accordingly; and, if necessary, the other deeds, instruments, or writings, on which the doubt shall have arisen, shall be stamped with the particular stamp for denoting or testifying the payment of the ad valorem duty; upon all the deeds or instruments being produced, and appearing to be duly stamped in other respects.

And where there shall be duplicates of any deed or instrument, chargeable with the said ad valorem duty exceeding 2*l.*, one of them only shall be charged therewith, and the other or others shall be charged with the ordinary duty on deeds or instruments of the same kind not upon a sale; and on the whole being produced, duly stamped as hereby required, the latter shall also be stamped with a particular stamp for denoting or testifying the payment of the said ad valorem duty.

And where any deed or instrument, operating as a conveyance on the sale of any property, shall operate also as a conveyance of any other than the property sold by way of settlement, or for any other purpose, or shall also contain any other matter or thing besides what shall be incident to the sale and conveyance of the property sold, or relate to the title thereto; every such deed or instrument shall be charged, in addition to the duty to which it shall be liable as a conveyance on the sale of property, and to any progressive duty to which it may also be liable, with such further stamp duty as any separate deed, containing the other matter, would have been chargeable with, exclusive of the progressive duty.

And in all other cases, such transfer or assignment, disposition or assignation, shall be charged with

The same duty or duties as an original mortgage, wadset, or other security.

And where any such transfer or assignment, disposition or assignation, hereby charged with a duty of 1*l.* 15*s.*, together with any schedule, receipt, or other matter put or indorsed thereon, or annexed thereto, shall contain 2160 words or upwards, then for every entire quantity of 1080 words contained therein, over and above the first 1080 words, a further and progressive duty of

Provided always, that where several distinct deeds or instruments falling within the description of any of the instruments hereby charged with the said ad valorem duty on mortgages and wadsets, shall be made at the same time for securing the payment or transfer of one and the same sum of money; or one and the same share of any of the stocks or funds before mentioned; the said ad valorem duty, if exceeding 2*l.*, shall be charged only on one of such deeds or instruments; and all the rest shall be charged with the duty to which the same may be liable, under any more general description of such deeds or instruments contained in this schedule; and if required for the sake of evidence, all the rest of such deeds or instruments shall be also stamped with some particular stamp, for denoting or testifying the payment of the said ad valorem duty, on all the said deeds or instruments being produced, duly stamped with the duties hereby charged thereon.

And where any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments shall be mortgaged, by means of a conditional surrender or grant, the said ad valorem duty shall be charged on the surrender or grant, or the memorandum thereof, if made out of court; or on the copy of court roll of the surrender or grant, if made in court. And copies of court roll, made after the 31st day of August, 1815, of surrenders and grants made in court, before or upon that day, and subsequent to the 10th day of October, 1808, shall be charged with the said ad valorem duties. But copies of court roll, of surrenders, and grants, made before or upon the 10th day of October, 1808, shall not be liable thereto.

And where any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments shall be mortgaged or charged, together with other property, for securing one and the same sum of money, or one and the same share of any of the stocks or funds before mentioned; the said ad valorem duty shall be charged on the deed or instrument relating to the other property.

And where there shall be duplicates of any deed or instrument, chargeable with the said ad valorem duty on mortgages and wadsets, exceeding 2*l.*, one of them only shall be charged therewith, and the other or others shall be charged with the duty to which the same may be liable, under any more general description in this schedule; and on the whole being produced, duly stamped as hereby required, the latter shall also be stamped with a particular stamp for denoting or testifying the payment of the said ad valorem duty.

Exemptions from the said ad valorem duty on mortgages, &c., but not from any other duty to which the same may be liable.

Any deed or other instrument made in pursuance of and conformably to any agreement, contract, or bond, charged with, and which shall actually have paid the said ad valorem duty, or the ad valorem duty on mortgages, granted by the act of the forty-eighth year of his majesty's reign before mentioned.

Any deed or other instrument made for the further assurance only of any estate or property, already mortgaged, pledged, or charged as a security, by any deed or instrument, which shall have paid the said ad valorem duty hereby charged, or the ad valorem duty on mortgages or heritable bonds, imposed by the act of the forty-fourth or the act of the forty-eighth year of his majesty's reign before mentioned.

Any deed or other instrument, made as an additional or further security for any sum or sums of money, or any share or shares of any of the stocks or funds before mentioned, already secured by any deed or instrument, which shall have paid the said ad valorem duty hereby charged, or the ad valorem duty on mortgages or heritable bonds, charged by the said act of the forty-fourth, or the said act of the forty-eighth year of his majesty's reign, to be exempt from the said ad valorem duty hereby charged, so far as regards each sum or sums of money, or such share or shares of any of the said stocks or funds before secured, in case such additional or further security shall be made by the same person or persons who made the original security; but if any further sum of money or stock shall be added to the principal money or stock already secured, or shall be thereby secured to any other person, the said ad valorem duty shall be charged in respect of such further sum of money or stock.

And if necessary, for the sake of evidence, the deeds and instruments hereby exempted from the said ad valorem duty shall be stamped with a particular stamp, for denoting or testifying the payment of the ad valorem duty, upon all the deeds and instruments relating to the particular transaction being produced, and appearing to be duly stamped with the duties to which they were liable.

For general exemptions from the preceding and all other stamp duties, see the end of this part of the schedule.

MORTGAGE, wadset, &c., with a conveyance of the equity or right of redemption or reversion, or other matter in the same deed, viz.

Where any deed or writing shall operate as a mortgage or other instrument hereby charged with the ad valorem duty on mortgages, and also as a conveyance of the equity or right of redemption or reversion of any lands, estate, or property therein comprised, to or in trust for, or according to the direction of a purchaser, such deed or writing shall be charged not only with the said ad valorem duty on mortgages, but also with the ad valorem duty hereinbefore charged on a conveyance upon the sale of any property; but where the equity or right of redemption or reversion shall be thereby conveyed or limited in any other manner, such deed or writing shall be charged only as a mortgage;

And in all other cases where a mortgage or other instrument hereby charged with the ad valorem duty on mortgages shall be contained in one and the same deed or writing with any other matter or thing (except what shall be incident to such mortgage or other instrument), such deed or writing shall be charged with the same duties (except the progressive duty), as such mortgage or other instrument and such other matter or thing would have been separately charged with if contained in separate deeds or writings.

And where any such deed or writing, as is mentioned in the two preceding clauses, together with any shedule, receipt, or other matter, put or indorsed thereon, or annexed thereto, shall contain 2160 words or upwards, then for every entire quantity of 1080 words contained therein, over and above the first 1080 words, a further progressive duty of - - - (a)

Statutes.

IT is said by the elegant and able writer of the Commentaries, Vol. I. p. 57, Preliminary observations.
that the municipal law of England, or the rule of civil conduct prescribed to the inhabitants of this kingdom, may, with sufficient propriety, be divided into two kinds: viz. the lex non scripta, the unwritten or common law, and the lex scripta, the written or statute law.

COMMON LAW.]—The lex non scripta, or unwritten law, includes not only Common law.
general customs, or the common law, properly so called, but also the particular customs of certain parts of the kingdom, and likewise those particular laws that are by custom observed only in certain courts and jurisdictions. It is not to be supposed, however, that this lex non scripta, or common law, is not

Preliminary Observations.

Three kinds of.

(1.) Common law or general customs.

(2.) Particular customs.

evidenced by written documents ; for a considerable portion of it is so. (See 1 Bla. Com. 57, 58.)

This unwritten or common law is distinguishable into three kinds : 1. General Customs, which are the universal rule of the whole kingdom, and form the common law, in its stricter and more usual signification. 2. Particular Customs, which, for the most part, affect only the inhabitants of particular districts. 3. Certain particular Laws, which by custom are adopted and used by some particular courts of petty, general, and exclusive jurisdiction. (1 Bla. Com. 67.)

1st. As to General Customs, or the Common Law, properly so called.]—This is that law by which proceedings and determinations in the king's ordinary courts of justice are guided and directed. Amongst other things, Blackstone observes, that this, for the most part, settles the solemnities and obligations of contracts ; the rules of expounding wills, deeds, and acts of Parliament ; the respective remedies of civil injuries ; the several species of temporal offences, with the manner and degree of punishment ; and an infinite number of minuter particulars, which diffuse themselves as extensively as the ordinary distribution of common justice requires. Thus, for example, amongst other things, that there shall be four superior courts of record—the Chancery, the King's Bench, the Common Pleas, and the Exchequer ; that a deed is of no validity unless sealed and delivered ; that breaking the peace is an offence, and punishable by fine and imprisonment, &c.

These customs and maxims are to be known, and their validity is to be determined, by the judges in the several courts of justice. They are the repositories of the law—the living oracles who must decide in all cases of doubt, and who are bound by an oath to decide according to the law of the land. (1 Bla. Com. 69.)

The common law is as absolute as parliamentary law, and must be as rigidly observed.

2d. As to Particular Customs, or Laws which affect only the Inhabitants of Particular Districts.]—These are the remains of that multitude of local customs, out of which the common law, as it now stands, was collected at first by king Alfred, and afterwards by king Edgar and Edward the Confessor ; each district mutually sacrificing some of its own special usages, in order that the whole kingdom might enjoy the benefit of one uniform and universal system of laws. But, for reasons that have been now long forgotten, particular counties, cities, towns, manors, and lordships, were very early indulged with the privilege of abiding by their own customs, in contradistinction to the rest of the nation at large ; which privilege is confirmed to them by several acts of Parliament. (Mag. Cart. 9 Hen. III. c. 9 ; 1 Edw. III. st. 2, c. 9 ; 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 1 ; 2 Hen. IV. c. 1 ; 1 Bla. Com. 74.)

Such is the custom of gavelkind in Kent, and some other parts of the kingdom. Such is the custom that prevails in divers ancient boroughs, and therefore called borough-English, that the youngest son shall inherit the estate, in preference to all his elder brothers, &c. Such, also, are the special and particular customs of manors, of which every one has more or less, and which bind all the copyhold and customary tenants that hold of the said manors. Such, likewise, is the custom of holding divers inferior courts, with power of trying causes, in cities and trading towns, the right of holding which, when no royal grant can be shown, depends entirely upon immemorial and established usage. Such, lastly, are many particular customs within the city of London, with regard to trade, apprentices, widows, orphans, and a variety of other matters. All these are contrary to the general law of the land, and are good only by special usage ; though the customs of London are also confirmed by act of Parliament. (City of London's case, 8 Rep. 126 ; R. v. Bagshaw, Cro. Car. 347.)

To this head may most properly be referred a particular system of customs used only among one set of the king's subjects, called the custom of merchants, or lex mercatoria ; which, however different from the general rules of the common law, is yet ingrafted into it, and made a part of it, Winch.

24 ; being allowed, for the benefit of trade, to be of the utmost validity in all commercial transactions : for it is a maxim of law, that "cuiuslibet in sua arte credendum est." (See Vallezo v. Wheeler, Lofft. 631 ; Edin v. East India Company, 1 W. Bla. 299 ; 2 Burr. 1216.)

The rules relating to particular customs regard either the proof of their existence, their legality when proved, or their usual method of allowance.

If the custom be not a good custom, it ought to be no longer used : "malus usus abolendus est" is an established maxim of the law. To make a particular custom good, the following are necessary requisites : What requisite to a good custom.

1. That it have been used so long, that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. So that, if any one can show the beginning of it, it is no good custom. Beyond memory.

For which reason, no custom can prevail against an express act of Parliament ; since the statute itself is a proof of a time when such a custom did not exist. (Co. Lit. 114.) A custom that every pound of butter sold in a certain market should weigh eighteen ounces, is bad, because it is directly contrary to the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 26 ; which directs that every pound throughout the kingdom shall contain sixteen ounces. (Noble v. Durell, see 3 T. R. 271.) (a) In which case, it seemed to be the opinion of the judges, that a custom to sell lumps of butter, containing eighteen or any other stated number of ounces, might be good and valid. The inconvenience arises from that which is every where called a pound being different in amount of weight in different parts of the kingdom, by which fraud and deception may be readily practised. Therefore, where a contract is made to sell specified goods by quantities of weight or measure, this must mean statute weight or measure. (See Hockin v. Cooke, 4 T. R. 314 ; Master, &c., of St. Cross, v. Lord Howard de Walden, 6 T. R. 338 ; Moller v. Living, 4 Taun. 102 ; Law v. Hodson, 11 East, 300.)

Where a parish contained within itself a borough not co-extensive with it, and the mayor of the borough, on a return to a mandamus for allowing a poor rate made by the churchwardens and overseers of the whole parish, stated a custom which had existed since the 43 Eliz. c. 2, of appointing separate churchwardens and overseers, and of making separate rates for the borough, and for those parts of the parish which lay without the borough ; it was holden that such custom was invalid, and the return was quashed accordingly. (R. v. Gordon, 1 B. & Ald. 524.)

The memory of man is taken in law to run to the beginning of the reign of Richard I. ; consequently, if it can be shown that the custom commenced at any time since, or did not exist before, that period, it is invalid. But a regular usage for twenty years, unexplained and uncontradicted, is sufficient to warrant a jury in finding an immemorial custom. (R. v. Joliffe, 2 B. & C. 54, 3 D. & R. 240, S. C. ; Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 214 ; 2 Saund. 175, a. d. ; Peake's Evid. 336.) What is time immemorial.

The recent statute of 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 71, shortens the time of Prescription in certain cases. Prescription act, 2 & 3 Wil. 4, c. 71.

By sect. 1, claims to the right of common and other profits, aprendre, are not to be defeated after thirty years' enjoyment, by showing the commencement ; and after sixty years' enjoyment, the right is to be deemed absolute, unless had by consent or agreement.

By sec. 2, in claims of right of way or other easement, the periods are to be twenty years and forty years.

By sec. 3, a claim to the use of light enjoyed for twenty years shall be indefeasible, unless shown to have been by consent.

By sec. 4, the before-mentioned periods are to be deemed those next before suits for the claims to which such periods relate.

By sec. 5, in actions on the case, the claimant may allege his right generally as at present. In pleas of trespass and other pleadings, where the party used to allege his claim from time immemorial, the period mentioned in this statute may be alleged, and the exceptions or other matters may be replied specially.

(a) Query whether a custom to demise by parol an incorporeal hereditament (for instance, a right of common) can be supported at law. (Lathbury v. Arnold, 1 Bingh. 219 ; 8 Moore, 72, S. C. ; and see R. v. Lane, 1 D. & Ry. 76 ; 5 B. & Ald. 488, S. C.)

Preliminary

Sec. 6, restrains the presumption to be allowed in support of claims thereinbefore provided for.

Sec. 7, contains a proviso as to infants and others.

Sec. 8, contains a proviso as to certain time being included in computing the term of forty years, appointed by the act.

Must have been uninterrupted.

2. It must have been continued. Any interruption would cause a temporary ceasing: the revival gives it a new beginning, which will be within time of memory, and thereupon the custom will be void. But this must be understood with regard to an interruption of the right; for an interruption of the possession only, for ten or twenty years, will not destroy the custom. (Co. Lit. 114.) As, if the inhabitants of a parish have a customary right of watering their cattle at a certain pool, the custom is not destroyed though they do not use it for ten years; it only becomes more difficult to prove: but if the right be any how discontinued for a day, the custom is quite at an end.

Immemorial acquiescence necessary.

3. It must have been peaceable, and acquiesced in; not subject to contention and dispute. (Id.) For, as customs owe their original to common consent, their being immemorially disputed, either at law or otherwise, is a proof that such consent was wanting. (1 Bla. Com. 77.)

Must not be unreasonable.

4. Customs must be reasonable, Lit. s. 212, or, rather, taken negatively, they must not be unreasonable. Which is not always, as Sir Edward Coke says, 1 Inst. 62, to be understood of every unlearned man's reason, but of artificial and legal reason, warranted by authority of law. Upon which account, a custom may be good, though the particular reason of it cannot be assigned; for it sufficeth if no good legal reason can be assigned against it. Thus, a custom in a parish that no man shall put his beasts into the common till the 3rd of October would be good; and yet it would be hard to show the reason why that day in particular is fixed upon, rather than the day before or after. But a custom that no cattle shall be put in till the lord of the manor has first put in his, is unreasonable, and therefore bad: for, peradventure, the lord will never put in his, and then the tenants will lose all their profits. (Co. Copyhold, s. 33.)

A custom that tenants, whether by parol or deed, shall have the away going crop after the expiration of their terms, is good. (Wylesworth v. Dallison, 1 Doug. 201; and see 1 Bligh, 287.)

So is a custom that a tenant may leave his away going crop in the barn, &c., after he has quitted the premises. (Beavan v. Delahay, 1 H. Bla. 5; Lewis v. Harris, Id. 7 n.)

A custom "that all the inhabitants of a manor shall grind all their corn, grain, and malt, which by them or any of them shall be used or spent on the ground within a manor, at a certain mill," is good. (Cort v. Birkbeck, 1 Dougl. 218.)

A custom "that all the tenants, resiants, and inhabitants, within a manor, should grind at the lord's mill all their corn and grain, as well growing within the manor as brought from other places, and spent or consumed in a ground state in their respective houses, within the manor," may be a good custom; but it does not extend to restrain the inhabitants who do not grow corn or grain, or who have no corn and grain of their own, from buying or using in such houses ground corn or flour, though it may not have been ground or grown within the manor, but produced from corn ground at other mills. (Richardson v. Walker, 4 D. & R. 498; 2 B. & C. 827, S. C.)

And where by the custom of a manor, all the tenants, resiants, and inhabitants, within the manor, were bound to grind all their corn, grain, and malt, as well growing within the manor, as brought from other places, and which after the grinding thereof should be spent or consumed in a ground state in their houses, at two ancient mills belonging to the lord, or one of them at their own option, and the lord having pulled down one of the mills so as to deprive the tenants of their option, it was held that the custom was suspended. (Richardson v. Capes, 4 D. & R. 512; 2 B. & C. 841.)

In an action upon the case upon a custom for not grinding at plaintiff's mills, plaintiff may declare generally upon a custom for a certain toll without specifying the particular toll, or the consideration for it, or that it is a reasonable toll, and a continuance of uniform payment and acquiescence is evidence of its reasonableness, and the court shall judge, under all the circumstances, what is reasonable. (Gard v. Callard, 6 M. & Sel. 69.)

A custom by which the town crier has an exclusive privilege of ringing a bell at all sales by auction within the town, is good. (Jones v. Waters, 1 Crom. M. & R. 713; 1 Gale Rep. 5.)

A custom is void which is unreasonable, uncertain, savours too much of arbitrary power, and tends to make a lord of a manor a judge in his own cause. (Wilkes v. Broadbent, 1 Wils. 63.)

A custom to take profits in alieno suo is bad. (Blewitt v. Tregonning, 1 H. & W. 431); but a custom to an easement in alieno suo may be good. (Fitch v. Rawlings, 2 H. Bla. 393; Pain v. Patrick, 3 Mod. 293.)

It is no objection to a custom that it is not conformable to the common law of the land. (Horton v. Beckman, 6 T. R. 760, 764; and see Hardy v. Holliday, 4 T. R. 718, n.) But the usage of a particular place cannot vary the general law. (R. v. Saltern, Cald. 444.)

5. Customs ought to be certain. A custom, that lands shall descend to the most worthy of the owner's blood, is void; for how shall this worth be determined? But a custom to descend to the next male of the blood, exclusive of females, is certain, and therefore good. (Roll. Abr. 565.) Or uncertain.

A custom to pay 2d. an acre in lieu of tithes, is good; but to pay sometimes 2d. and sometimes 3d., as the occupier of the land pleases, is bad for its uncertainty. Yet a custom to pay a year's improved value for a fine on a copyhold estate, is good; though the value is a thing uncertain: for the value may at any time be ascertained; and the maxim of law is, id certum est quod certum reddi potest, Id.

A custom, that poor housekeepers shall carry away rotten wood in a chase is bad, being too vague and uncertain. (Selby v. Robinson, 2 T. R. 758.)

So is a custom for the inhabitants of a parish to take from a private close which adjoins the sea, sand drifted there, for manure. (Blewitt v. Tregonning, 1 H. & W. 431.)

A right to glean in the harvest cannot be claimed at common law; neither have the poor of a parish legally settled as such any such right within the parish. (Steel v. Houghton, 1 Hen. Bla. 51, 52. See, ante, "Gleaning," Vol. II.)

So is a custom for every inhabitant of an ancient messuage within a parish to take a profit a prendre in the land of an individual bad. But such a right may be enjoyed by prescription or grant. (Grinstead v. Marlowe, 4 T. R. 717, 718; Fitch v. Rawlings, 2 Hen. Bla. 393; Weekly v. Wildman, 1 Ld. Raym. 407; 1 Saun. 341, n. 3; 346, n. (3).)

A custom to take sand drifted by the sea is bad. (Blewitt v. Tregonning, 5 Nev. & M. 234, 308; 1 Harr. & W. 431.)

A custom for all the inhabitants of a parish to play "at all kinds of lawful games, sports, and pastimes in the close of A. at all seasonable times of the year, at their free will and pleasure," is good; but a similar custom "for all persons for the time being, being in the said parish," is bad. (Fitch v. Rawlings, 2 H. Bla. 393.)

A custom may be to do a thing several ways, if not inconsistent. (Anon. Lofft, 398.)

6. Customs, though established by consent, must be (when established) compulsory; and not left to the option of every man, whether he will use them or no. Therefore, a custom, that all the inhabitants shall be rated toward the maintenance of a bridge, will be good; but a custom, that every man is to contribute thereto at his own pleasure, is idle and absurd, and indeed no custom at all. Must be compulsory.

Preliminary Observations.

And consistent with each other. *

Must be construed strictly.

7. Lastly, customs must be consistent with each other: one custom cannot be set up in opposition to another; for, if both are really customs, then both are of equal antiquity, and both established by mutual consent: which to say of contradictory customs is absurd. Therefore, if one man prescribes that by custom he has a right to have windows looking into another's garden, the other cannot claim a right by custom to stop up or obstruct those windows; for these two contradictory customs cannot both be good, nor both stand together. He ought rather to deny the existence of the former custom. (Aldred's Case, 9 Rep. 58; 1 Bla. Com. 78.)

Next, as to the allowance of special customs. Customs in derogation of the common law must be construed strictly. Thus, by the custom of gavel-kind, an infant of fifteen years may, by one species of conveyance (called a deed of feoffment), convey away his lands in fee simple, or for ever. Yet this custom does not empower him to use any other conveyance, or even to lease them for seven years; for the custom must be strictly pursued. (Co. Cop. s. 33.) And, moreover, all special customs must submit to the king's prerogative. Therefore, if the king purchases lands of the nature of gavel-kind, where all the sons inherit equally; yet, upon the king's demise, his eldest son shall succeed to those lands alone. (Co. Lit. 15; 1 Bla. Com. 78.)

And thus much for the second part of the leges non scriptæ, or those particular customs which affect particular persons or districts only.

(3.) Peculiar laws used in particular courts, are the civil and canon laws.

3. As to those peculiar laws which by custom are adopted and used only in certain peculiar courts and jurisdictions, they are to be understood as the civil and canon laws. (See 1 Bla. Com. 79.)

Statute law.

[STATUTE LAW.]—We will now proceed as to the statute law, or, in other words, the leges scriptæ; which consist of statutes, acts, or edicts made by the king's majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal and commons in Parliament assembled. (1 Bla. Com. 78(a); Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 3.)

Statutes not in the name of the whole legislature.

Many ancient statutes are penned in the form of charters, ordinances, commands, or prohibitions from the king, without mentioning the concurrence of either lords or commons; yet, inasmuch as they have always been acquiesced in as unquestionably authentic, this establishes and confirms their authority, and the defect is salved by such universal reception. (Hawkins's Preface to Statutes.)

As regards the making of these statutes, see 1 Bla. Com. Parliament; Com. Dig. Parliament; Bac. Ab. Statutes. We will now proceed to inquire into

(a) The oldest statute now extant, and printed in our statute books, is the famous Magna Charta, as confirmed in Parliament, 9 Hen. III.; though, doubtless, there were many acts before that time.

I. The different Kinds of Statutes.

PUBLIC OR PRIVATE STATUTES.]—Statutes are either general or special, public or private. Either public, general, or private.

A general or public act is an universal rule, that regards the whole community; and of this the courts of law are bound to take notice judicially and ex officio; without the statute being particularly pleaded, or formally set forth by the party who claims an advantage under it. (1 Bla. Com. 85.) Public acts, what.

Special or private acts are rather exceptions than rules, being those which only operate upon particular persons and private concerns: such as the Romans entitled senatus-decreta, in contradistinction to the senatus consulta, which regarded the whole community; and of these (which are not promulgated with the same notoriety as the former) the judges are not bound to take notice, unless they be formally shown and pleaded. Private acts, what.

Statutes may also be local, or referring to the interests of a particular place or district: such as road and inclosure acts, canal acts, or acts for town regulation. All such acts contain a clause by which they shall be deemed public acts. As to such clause see post, 856, and "Evidence," Vol. II., p. 43. Local.

To show the distinction between public and private acts, it should be observed, that the 13 Eliz. c. 10, to prevent spiritual persons from making leases for longer terms than twenty-one years, or three lives, is a public act; it being a rule prescribed to the whole body of spiritual persons in the nation: but an act to enable the Bishop of Chester to make a lease to A. B. for sixty years is an exception to this rule; it concerns only the parties and the bishop's successors; and is therefore a private act. (1 Bla. Com. 86.) Instances.

All acts which concern the king or queen, or the prince, are general and public acts. (8 Co. 28 a.; the Prince's Case, 4 Rep. 13, 77 a.)

So, a statute which concerns the whole spirituality, will be a general and public act: as the 21 Hen. VIII. c. 13. (Holland's Case, 4 Rep. 76 a; Brownl. 208.)

So, a statute which concerns all officers in general, as the 21 Wil. I. c. 26, that no sheriff or other minister take reward, &c. (Holland's Case, 4 Rep. 76 a.)

So, a statute which concerns trade in general. (Holland's Case, 4 Rep. 76 b.; Lutw. 1410; Kirk v. Nowill, 1 T. R. 125.)

So, a statute by which penalties are given to the king, as the 2 P. & M. c. 11, relating to woollen weavers, &c. (Skin. 429.)

So, a statute which concerns all the lords generally, as the stat. Marl. 3. Holland's Case, 4 Rep. 76 b.

So, if it concerns all persons generally, though it be but a special or particular thing: as, a statute which concerns appeals or assizes, or other particular action. (Id.)

A statute which concerns only a particular species or thing, or person, will be a private act, of which the judges will not take notice without pleading it: as, the 18 Eliz. c. 6, touching the colleges only in the universities. (Eton and Winchester, 4 Rep. 76 a.)

In a private act of parliament, the legislature only lends its aid to the agreement of the parties, in order to render it effectual when any public reason stands in the way. (By Ld. Mansfield, C. J., R. v. Toms, Dougl. 406.)

It is a rule, that private acts of parliament, introduced only for the settlement of particular estates, ought to be considered only as common conveyances, and directed by the same rules of law. (By Ld. Hardwicke, C. J., Hornby v. Houlditch, 1 T. R. 93, n. a.; Lucy v. Levington, 1 Vent. 176; and see Eton College v. Bishop of Winchester, Lofft, 401.)

So, a statute which relates to a particular place or town, will be a private law, though it concerns all persons: as, if it relates to such a manor, town, &c. (4 Rep. b.; Skin. 350.)

1. The different Kinds of Statutes.

So, if it relates to a particular trade. (Holland's case, 4 Rep. 76; Kirk v. Nowell, 1 T. R. 125.)

Or to divers particular towns. (Holland's case, 4 Rep. 76 b.)

Or to one or divers particular counties. (Id.)

So, in a general act there may be a private clause; as in the 3 Jac. c. 5, the clause which gives the benefices of recusants in such particular counties to the university, is a private law. (Case of the Chancellor of the University of Oxford, 10 Rep. 57 b.)

A canal act is not rendered a public act by containing provisions empowering the company to regulate and take tonnage rates and tolls from persons using the canal. (Brett v. Beales, 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 425.)

A private act of parliament containing a clause, "that it shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of without being specially pleaded, may be proved in the same manner as public acts, (and as to which see "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 43,) though it may not have the effect of a public act." (Beaumont v. Mountain, 10 Bingh. 404; Woodward v. Cotton, 1 Crom. M. and Ros. 44; 4 Tyrwhitt, 689, S. C.; Brett v. Beales, N. & M. 421; 3 B. & P. 565; 8 T. R. 468.)

tutes, what.

DECLARATORY OR REMEDIAL STATUTES.]—Statutes also are either declaratory of the common law, or remedial of some defects therein.

Declaratory, where the old custom of the kingdom is almost fallen into disuse, or become disputable; in which case the parliament has thought proper, in perpetuum rei testimonium, and for avoiding all doubts and difficulties, to declare what the common law is and ever hath been. Thus, the statute of treasons, 25 Edw. III. c. 2, doth not make any new species of treasons, but only, for the benefit of the subject, declares and enumerates those several kinds of offence which were before treason at the common law. (1 Bla. Com. 86.)

So, the 46 Geo. III. c. 37, declares that a witness cannot by law refuse to answer a question relevant to the matter in issue, the answering which has no tendency to accuse himself or expose him to penalty or forfeiture, though his answer may subject him to a civil action. This statute does not profess to introduce a new law, but only declares what is the existing law, in consequence of the contrariety of opinions delivered by the judges. (See "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 107.)

The word declare in the act expounds what was the common law before. (Twynne's case, 3 Rep.)

tutes, what.

Remedial statutes are those which are made to supply such defects, and abridge such superfluities, in the common law, as arise either from the general imperfection of all human laws, from change of time and circumstances, from the mistakes and unadvised determinations of unlearned (or even learned) judges, or from any other cause whatsoever.

Enlarging and
tutes, what.

And this being done, either by enlarging the common law where it was too narrow and circumscribed, or by restraining it where it was too lax and luxuriant, hath occasioned another subordinate division of remedial acts of parliament into enlarging and restraining statutes. Instance the case of treason, in clipping the current coin of the kingdom, which was an offence not sufficiently guarded against by the common law; therefore it was thought expedient, by the 5 Eliz. c. 11, to make it high treason, which it was not at the common law: so that this was an enlarging statute. At common law, also, spiritual corporations might lease out their estates for any term of years, till prevented by the 13 Eliz. before mentioned: this was, therefore, a restraining statute.

In legal language a remedial statute has a further signification, viz. a statute giving a party a mode of remedy for a wrong where he had none or a different one before: e. g. the statutes of hue and cry: (now repealed by, but most of the enactments re-enacted by, the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31.) These statutes neither enlarged nor abridged the common law, and therefore neither supplied its defects or restrained its excesses; but, as the common law itself originally provided for an exigency, so did the statute. Of such a description, namely, remedial, is the giving the owner a right to recover the stolen thing of the person who may have purchased it, provided such owner shall have proceeded to conviction. So, also, the statutes against gaming, which give the loser a right to recover the money lost. (1 Bla. Com. by Lee, p. 87, n. (34.)

A penal statute may also be a remedial law. (Sir W. Wynne v. Middleton, 1 Wils. 126.)

ws rem edial.

And a statute may be penal in one part and remedial in another part. (Dougl. 702.)

Where a statute gives accumulated damages to the party grieved it is not penal. (Woodgate v. Knatchbull, 2 T. R. 154.)

The statute 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1, is, it seems, a remedial law (Wilkinson v. Colley, 5 Burr. 2694,) though this was denied by Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. in Lloyd v. Rosbee, 2 Camp. 454.

The 11 Geo. II. c. 19, is a remedial and not a penal act. (Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 304.)

The 24 Geo. II. c. 44, is not a penal act. (Joy v. Orchard, 2 B. & P. 39.)

A statute for suppression of wrong, or for public good, shall be construed like a remedial act, though it be penal against the offenders. (Pl. Com. 82 a, 17 a.)

It is questionable whether the 21 Geo. III. c. 37, prohibiting the exportation of British machinery, is remedial or penal. (Att. Gen. v. Jefferys, McCl. 270; 13 Price, 545.)

PENAL STATUTES.]—Penal statutes are made on various occasions to punish and deter offenders. (As to the construction of them, see post, 868.)

Penal statutes.

Where a thing is prohibited under a penalty, if the penalty, or part of it, be not given to him who will sue for the same, it goes and belongs to the king. (Rast. Entr. 433; 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 26, s. 17.) The king cannot grant to any person any penalty or forfeiture, &c., due by any statute, before judgment thereupon had. Stat. 21 Jac. I. c. 3. Though after plea pleaded, justices of assize, &c., having power to hear and determine offences done against any penal statute, may compound the penalties with the defendant, by virtue of the king's warrant or privy seal. (See "Compounding," Vol. I.)

Where penalties are ordained by penal acts of parliament to be recovered in any court of record, this is to be understood only of the courts at Westminster, and not of the courts of record of inferior jurisdictions. (See Jenk. Cent. 228.)

Where an offence, created or made penal by statute, is in its nature single, one single penalty only can be recovered, though several join in committing it; but if the offence is in its nature several, each offender is separately liable to the penalty. (R. v. Clark, Cowp. 610.)

As, the stat. of Glou. 5, which gives treble damages, &c. in waste, against tenant for years, extends by equity to a tenant for half a year. (Pl. Com. 178.)

The stat. Wil. II., which gives debt against a gaoler for an escape of one committed for arrearages of an account, extends to an escape of any committed in execution for debt. (Pl. Com. 178 a, 35 a.)

So the stat. of Glou. 5, which gives remedy for waste against a lessee, extends to a devisee for life or years. (Pl. Com. 10 a.)

The stat. 1 Edw. II., de frangentibus prisonam, says, that a felon who breaks prison shall be guilty of felony; but it shall not be so if the prison was on fire. (Pl. Com. 13.)

II. What Statutes are Void.

Acts of Parliament derogatory from the power of subsequent parliaments bind not. So, the 11 Hen. VII. c. 1, which directs that no person, for assisting a king de facto, shall be attainted of treason by act of Parliament, or

Acts derogatory to the power of subsequent parliaments bind not.

3. Time when Statute begins, &c.

Statutes, enacting impossibilities, are invalid. So, where absurdities follow.

otherwise, is held to be good only as to common prosecutions for high treason; but will not restrain or clog any parliamentary attainder. (4 Inst. 43.) Because the legislature, being in truth the sovereign power, is always of equal, always of absolute, authority: it acknowledges no superior upon earth, which the prior legislature must have been, if its ordinances could bind a subsequent parliament. And upon the same principle, Cicero, in his letters to Atticus, treats with a proper contempt these restraining clauses, which endeavour to tie up the hands of succeeding legislatures. "When you repeal the law itself," says he, "you, at the same time, repeal the prohibitory clause, which guards against such repeal." (1 Bla. Com. 90.)

Acts of Parliament that are impossible to be performed are of no validity; and, if there arise out of them collaterally any absurd consequences, manifestly contradictory to common reason, they are, with regard to those collateral consequences, void. I lay down the rule with these restrictions; though I know it is generally laid down more largely, that acts of Parliament contrary to reason are void. But if the parliament will positively enact a thing to be done which is unreasonable, I know of no power in the ordinary forms of the constitution that is vested with authority to control it; and the examples usually alleged in support of this sense of the rule do none of them prove that, where the main object of a statute is unreasonable, the judges are at liberty to reject it; for that were to set the judicial power above that of the legislature, which would be subversive of all government. But where some collateral matter arises out of the general words, and happens to be unreasonable, there the judges are in decency to conclude that this consequence was not foreseen by the parliament, and therefore they are at liberty to expound the statute by equity, and only quoad hoc disregard it. Thus, if an act of Parliament gives a man power to try all causes that arise within his manor of Dale, yet, if a cause should arise in which he himself is a party, the act is construed not to extend to that, because it is unreasonable that any man should determine his own quarrel. (Bonham's Case, 8 Rep. 118.) But, if we could conceive it possible for the parliament to enact, that he should try as well his own causes as those of other persons, there is no court that has power to defeat the intent of the legislature, when couched in such evident and express words as leave no doubt whether it was the intent of the legislature or no. (Id.)

If an act of Parliament is clearly and unequivocally expressed, with all deference to the learned commentator, I conceive it is neither void in its direct nor collateral consequences, however absurd and unreasonable they may appear. If the expression will admit of doubt, it will not then be presumed that the construction can be agreeable to the intention of the legislature, the consequences of which are unreasonable; but, where the signification of a statute is manifest, no authority less than that of parliament can restrain its operation. (Id. Note by Christian.)

Statute against law of God void.

A statute cannot make it lawful for A. to commit adultery with the wife of B., for the law of God forbids it; but it may dissolve her marriage with B. and so enable her to marry A. (City of London v. Wood, 12 Mod., 688.)

When good in part, though bad in rest.

Where a clause void by statute law is mixed up with good matter, entirely independent of it, the good part stands, the rest is void. (Horn v. Synge, 15 East, 440.)

Statutes void by improper framing of.

But if the part which is good depends upon that which is bad, the whole instrument is void. (Biddell v. Leeder, 1 B. & C. 327; 2 D. & R. 449, S. C.)

See as to what statutes are void by reason of defective parties to the framing of, and improper framing of. See Bac. Ab. Statutes. (A)

III. Time when Statute begins to take Effect, and how long it continues in Force.

Time of taking effect.

Time when it begins to take effect.] If an act of Parliament had been brought in at the close of a session, and passed on the last day, which made an innocent act criminal, or even a capital crime, and if no day was fixed for the commencement of its operation, it had the same efficacy as if it had been passed on the first day of the session; and all who during a long session had been doing an act which at that time was legal and inoffensive, were liable to suffer the punishment prescribed by the statute. (4 Inst. 25; Latless v. Holmes, 4 T. R. 660; and see Rumsey v. Tuffnell, 2 Bing. 257; 9 Moore, 425.) This was both flatly absurd and unjust; but it was the clear law of England, and could only be abrogated by the united authority of the king, lords, and commons in Parliament assembled; who, by the 33 Geo. III. c. 13, enacted, that when the operation of an act of Parliament is not directed to commence from any time specified within it, the clerk of the Parliaments shall indorse upon it the day upon which it receives the royal assent, and that day shall be the date of its commencement.

An act made to correct an error by omission in a former statute of the same session, relates back to the time when the first act passed, and must be taken together as if they were one and the same act. (Att. Gen. v. Pougett, 2 Price, 381.)

It is in general true that no statute is to have a retrospect beyond the time of its commencement; for the rule and law of Parliament is, that "Nova constitutio formam debet imponere non præteritis." (Bac. Ab. Statutes; (C) and see 1 Bla. Com. 46; Couch v. Jeffries, Burr. 2460; Wilkinson v. Meyer, Lord Raym. 1350; Fowler v. Chatterton, 6 Bingh. 258; Kirkhaugh v. Herbert, Id. 265.)

But a statute may have a retrospect to a time antecedent to that of its commencement. (Bac. Ab. Statutes, C.)

In construing a statute made after the entering into a contract, the sense of the words ought not to be strained, so as to avoid the contract to the benefit whereof some person was entitled at the time the statute was made. (Wilkinson v. Meyer, Lord Raym. 1352.)

Where by an act a duty is imposed, with a retrospective date depending on a fact which has taken place, and which is provided for by the alternative expressions "shall be," or "shall have been found," it seems that the duty attaches from such respective date. (Hume v. Haig, in error, 8 Bro. P. C. 196.)

Ignorance of law will not excuse a crime (see 4 Bla. Com. 27); but ignorance of a law which is of very recent enactment will in some cases afford good reason for a pardon. Thus, where the prisoner was indicted for maliciously shooting a person, and the offence was committed within a few weeks after the passing of the 39 Geo. III. c. 37, and before notice of it could have reached the place where the offence was committed, the judges thought that, as he could not have known of the act, he ought to have a pardon. (R. v. Bailey, R. & R. C. C. 1.)

Ignorance of statute, how far an excuse for a crime.

How long a statute continues in force.] Some statutes are temporary, others are perpetual.

How long a statute continues in force.

A temporary statute continues in force, unless it be sooner repealed, until the time for which it is made expires: a perpetual one until it is repealed. (Bac. Ab. Statutes, D.)

A temporary statute is sometimes made to continue in force after it has ceased to operate substantially, for the purpose of supporting prosecutions against those who have violated it during the term specified for its continuance. (Id.)

Every statute for the continuance of which no time is limited, is perpetual, although it be not expressly declared so. (Id.)

If an act be to have continuance for three years, and from thence to the end of the next session of Parliament, it shall continue to the end of a session which begins after the three years, though a session within three years continues several months or years after the three years. (1 Vent. 22.)

By the 48 Geo. III. c. 106, where any bill shall be introduced into any session of Parliament, for the continuance of any act which would expire in such session, and such act shall have expired before the bill for continuing the same shall have received the royal assent, such continuing act shall be deemed to have effect from the date of the expiration of the act intended to be continued, except it shall be otherwise provided in such continuing act. But nothing herein contained shall extend to affect any person with any punishment, penalty, or forfeiture, by reason of anything done or omitted to be done contrary to the provisions of the act continued, between the expiration of the same and the date at which the act continuing the same shall receive the royal assent. (As to the repeal of a statute, and its effects, see post, 872.)

IV. When the King shall be bound by a Statute.

When the king is bound by.

If an act speaks of the king indefiniti, being named in his politic capacity, it extends to all his successors. (12 Rep. 110; the case of Soldiers, 6 Rep. 27 a.)

So, to a queen, if the crown descends to a female. (12 Co. 110.)

But, generally, the king shall not be restrained of a liberty or a right which he had before, by the general words of an act of Parliament, if the king be not named in the act. (Pl. Com. 240; Rex v. Cook, 3 T. R. 521; Case of Magdalen College, 11 Rep. 66; see R. v. Wright, 1 Ad. & Ell. 437; 3 Nev. & M. 892.)

Yet, if a statute be intended to give a remedy against a wrong, the king, though not named, shall be bound by it: as by the 32 Hen. VIII. c. 28, to prevent a discontinuance by the husband of the lands of his wife during coverture. (2 Inst. 681.)

So, in all statutes made against wrong, to prevent fraud, or the decay of religion, the king is bound. (Case of the Ecclesiastical Persons, 5 Rep. 14 b.)

And therefore the king shall be bound by the statute Wil. II. c. 1, de donis. (Case of the Ecclesiastical Persons, 5 Rep. 14 b.)

So, by the statute Wil. II. c. 5, against tortious usurpations. (Id.)

So, by the statute of 31 Eliz. c. 6, against simony. (Co. Lit. 120 a.)

So, the king, though not named, is bound by acts for the advancement of religion, or of learning, or providing for the poor, as the act 10 Car., for uniting livings in Ireland. (R. v. Archbishop of Armagh; Str. 516.)

Clauses which limit in any way the right of the crown must be considered as repealed by subsequent statutes, unless expressly re-enacted. (Att.-Gen. v. Newman, 1 Price, 438.)

A statute made for the benefit of the king shall be construed most beneficially for him: as the 17 Edw. II., de Præen Regis, which says, that the king shall have the ward of his tenant seised in fee, extends to his tenant seised in tail. (Pl. Com. 11 a.)

When a statute creates a penalty, and says that one moiety shall be given to the use of the king, and the other to a common informer, the king may sue for the whole, unless a common informer has commenced a qui-tam suit for the penalty. (R. v. Hymen, 7 T. R. 536.)

V. Things incidental to a Statute, and necessarily implied.

Where statute gives a right, the common law gives remedy.

Wherever an act of Parliament gives a right, the common law gives a remedy. (Ashby v. White, Salk. 20, 21; Ashby v. White, 6 Mod. 54)

And whenever a provision of a statute is general, everything which is necessary to make such provision effectual is supplied by the common law. (1 Inst. 235, 2 ed. 222.)

Whenever a power is given by a statute, everything necessary to the making of it effectual is given by implication: for the maxim is, Quando lex aliquid concedit, concedere videtur et id per quod devenitur ad illum. (12 Rep. 130; 2 Inst. 306.)

If an offence be made felony by a statute, such statute does by necessary consequence subject the offender to the like attainder and forfeiture, and does require the like construction, as to those who shall be accounted accessories before or after the fact, and to all other intents and purposes, as a felony at the common law does. (1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 4; 3 Inst. 47, 49, 50.)

Misprision of felony is as well incidental to a felony created by a statute as to one at the common law. (1 H. H. P. C. 652.)

In all cases where justices may take examinations, or other accusation or proof, though the statute doth not expressly set down that it shall be upon oath, yet it shall be intended that it shall be upon oath. (Dalt. c. 115.)

Generally it is holden, that where a statute appoints a thing to be done by one or more justices without giving any appeal to the sessions, there the justices in sessions may do that thing; but where an appeal is given to the sessions, the justices in sessions cannot proceed originally therein, because that method would take away the power of appealing. (See "Sessions," ante, p. 611.)

Where a statute gives power to the justices to require any person to do a thing, as to take the oaths, the law implicitly gives them power to issue their precept to have the body before them: for when the law granteth any thing to any one, that also is granted without which the thing itself cannot be; and it is against the office of the justices, and the authority given them by the law, that they shall go and seek the parties. (12 Rep. 130, 131.)

Where a statute gives power to the justices of the peace to hear and determine an offence in a summary way, it is necessarily implied and supposed, as a part of natural justice, that the party be first cited, and have opportunity to be heard and answer for himself. (1 Haw. c. 64, s. 60; R. v. Benn, 6 Term, Rep. 198, Painter v. Liverpool Gas Company, 3 Ad. & Ellis, 433.)

Where an act of Parliament gives power to two justices finally to hear and determine an offence, it is necessarily supposed, that they shall be both together, or, which is the same thing in other words, that they shall hold a special sessions for that purpose. And the like is, when they are to do any other judicial act, as to make an order of bastardy, or adjudge the settlement of a poor person. For it is unknown to the laws of England, that two persons shall act as judges in the same cause, when at the same time one of them is in one part of the country and the other in another. (See "Justices," Vol. III. p. 561.)

Where a statute appoints a conviction to be on the oath of one witness, this ought not to be by the single oath of the informer; for if the same person shall be allowed to be both prosecutor and witness, it would induce profligate persons to commit perjury for the sake of the reward. (R. v. Stone, 2 Ld. Raym. 1545; 1 Sess. Cas. 378, S. C.; see "Conviction," Vol. I. p. 864; Vol. II. p. 90.)

Where a statute directeth that a person shall be convicted of an offence upon the oath of one or more witnesses, and saith nothing of the confession of the party, yet if the offender shall before the justice confess the offence, he may be convicted upon such confession: for confession is stronger evidence than the oath of witnesses. (Dalt. 109, 162; R. v. Gage, 1 Str. 546; see "Conviction," Vol. I. p. 880.)

Where an act of Parliament gives power to the justices of the peace to take order in any matter according to their discretions, this shall be understood according to the rules of reason, law, and justice, and not by private opinion. (5 Rep. 100; see 8 Howell's St. Tri. 55 (notis); and "Justices," Vol. III. p. 560.)

In all cases where the kingdom of England, or that part of Great Britain called England, hath been or shall be mentioned in any act of Parliament, the same shall be deemed to comprehend the dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed. 20 Geo. II. c. 42, s. 3.

Where a statute gives discretionary power of mitigating penalties, it is a general rule that there the legislature must be taken to have intended to place the matter under the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace. (Per Abbott, C. J., Reeve v. Poole, 4 B. & C. 156; R. v. Rawlinson, 6 D. & R. 26.)

It may be laid down as an invariable rule, that the law favours liberty: Twelve months.

5. Things incidental to a Statute, &c.

In what case sessions may execute the power given to two justices.

Power to convene the parties.

Necessity of summoning the party.

so that, in the construction of a penal statute, where the interpretation is dubious, that sense must be pursued (all other things being equal) which is more beneficial to the subject, or the party suffering. Thus, where an act directs that the justices shall commit an offender to prison for twelve months, the justices may not alter the words, and commit him for a year; for, in this respect, twelve months and one year are not the same: but the months must be computed at twenty-eight days to the month, and not as calendar months, unless it be so expressed in the act. (See, post, "Time.")

In all cases wherein, by any act of Parliament, an oath shall be allowed or required, the solemn affirmation of Quakers shall be allowed instead of such an oath, although no particular or express provision be made for that purpose in the said act. 22 Geo. II. c. 46, s. 3. By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 32 (ante, "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 104,) a Quaker or Moravian required to give evidence in a criminal case may, instead of an oath, take the affirmation or declaration therein prescribed.

To say that a person shall forfeit generally, or that he shall forfeit to the king, is all one; for the king shall have every forfeiture not otherwise limited. (Foster's Case, 11 Rep. 60.) Except where a forfeiture is given in lieu of property and interest; for there it shall go to the party injured. (1 Roll. Rep. 90.) For, wheresoever a statute giveth a forfeiture or penalty against him which wrongfully detaineth or dispossesseth another of his duty or interest, in that case, he that hath the wrong shall have the forfeiture or penalty, and shall have an action for the same upon the statute, and the king shall not have the forfeiture in that case. (1 Inst. 159.)

Where a statute saith, that such a person shall pay fine and ransom to the king, in legal understanding such fine and ransom are all one: for, if they were divers, then should the party pay two sums, one for the fine and another for the ransom, which was never done. (1 Inst. 127.)

Acts of Parliament that speak of fines or ransoms at the king's pleasure, are always to be understood of the king in his courts by his justices. (1 Hale, 375.)

It is said, that wheresoever a justice of the peace is empowered, by any statute, to bind a person over, or to cause him to do a certain thing, and such person, being in his presence, shall refuse to be bound or to do such thing, the justice may commit him to the gaol, to remain there till he shall comply. (2 Haw. c. 16, s. 2; see "Commitment," Vol. I. p. 781; "Justices," Vol. III. p. 564.)

When a statute appoints imprisonment, but limits no time when, it shall be immediately. (Bonham's Case, 8 Rep. 119.)

When a statute appoints imprisonment, but limits no time how long, the prisoner in such case must remain at the discretion of the court. (Dalt. 410.)

Where any offender shall, by a justice of the peace, be committed to the house of correction for an offence cognizable before him out of sessions, and the time and manner of punishment is not by law expressly limited, he may commit him to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour until the next general or quarter sessions, or until discharged by due course of law. 17 Geo. II. c. 5, s. 32.

Wherever a statute makes any offence felony, it incidently gives it all the properties of felony at common law. (1 Haw. c. 38, s. 18.)

Therefore, an act of Parliament that makes an offence felony, doth consequently introduce the punishment of concealing,—that is, misprision of felony; and every offence made felony by act of Parliament includeth misprision. (1 Hale, 708.)

An act making a new felony extendeth not to infants under fourteen years of age; but if they be of that age it binds them. (1 Hale, 706; see "Infants," Vol. III.)

Not only those crimes which are made felonies by the express words of any statute, but also those which are decreed to have or undergo judgment of life and member, do become felonies thereby, whether the word felony were mentioned or not. (1 Haw. c. 40, s. 1.)

But an offence shall never be made felony by the construction of any doubtful and ambiguous words of a statute; and, therefore, if it be only prohibited under pain of forfeiting body and goods, or of being at the king's will for body, lands, and goods, it shall amount unto no more than a high misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment or the like. (Id. s. 2.)

5. Things incidental to a Statute, &c.
Body and goods.

Saving of dower in a statute making an offence felony, is superfluous; for, by the 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, s. 17, dower is not lost by the felony of the husband.

Forfeiture of dower.

Where any complaint shall be made before a justice, and a warrant or summons shall issue in consequence thereof, the justice, upon hearing and determining the matter, may award costs to either party: but if the conviction be upon a penal statute, and the penalty amounts to 5*l.* or upwards, the costs shall be deducted out of the penalty. (18 Geo. III. c. 19; see "Costs," Vol. I.; "Conviction," p. 896.) Acts giving costs should in general be construed strictly. See, post, 869.

Costs.

Upon an indictment or other criminal prosecution, no damages can be given to the party grieved; but it is every day's practice in the Court of King's Bench to induce defendants to make satisfaction to the prosecutors, by intimating an inclination on that account to mitigate the fine due to the king. (2 Haw. c. 25, s. 3; see further, "Justices," Vol. III. p. 565.)

Damages.

Where a statute gives treble damages, the justices are not to assess the damages, and then treble them; but the jury ought to find the damages, and then the justices are to treble them. (Bumpstead's Case, Cro. Car. 449. "Justices," Vol. III. p. 565.)

Treble damages.

In all cases where a justice is required by an act of parliament to issue a warrant of distress for the levying of any penalty inflicted, or any sum of money directed to be paid by such act, it shall be lawful for such justice granting the warrant, therein to order and direct the goods distrained to be sold within a certain time to be limited in such warrant, so as such time be not less than four days, nor more than eight days, unless such penalty or sum of money, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the distress, be sooner repaid. And the officer making such distress may deduct the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress; and the overplus, if any, shall be returned to the owner on demand. Except only in cases of distress for Quakers' tithes and church-rates. (27 Geo. II. c. 20; see "Distress under Justices' Warrant," Vol. I.)

Distress and sale.

An act inflicting a penalty for a second offence must always be understood, after conviction and judgment for the first offence; and the second offence must be committed after the first conviction, and judgment thereupon given; for it doth not appear to be an offence, until judgment by proceeding of law be given against the offender. (2 Inst. 468.)

Second offence.

And the indictment for a second offence must recite the record of the first conviction; and, upon the evidence, the record of the first conviction must be proved: but the matter of the first conviction shall never be re-examined, but must stand for granted. (1 Hale, 686.)

A private act which provides for the expense of maintaining a jury does not extend to a dinner given to them at a tavern after they had delivered their verdict. (Forster v. Taylor, 3 Camp. 49.)

Expense of jury.

As to how far the forms prescribed by a statute must be followed, see, fully, "Conviction," Vol. I. p. 897.

Forms given by statute.

If a particular form of a notice or order be prescribed by a private act of Parliament, it must be fully set out and precisely pursued; and an allegation that due notice was given is not sufficient. (R. v. Croker, Cowp. 30.)

And a defective notice, under a private act of Parliament, is not cured by the appearance of the party. (Id.)

As to the construction of clauses limiting the time for bringing actions, &c., for prosecutions, &c., under the act, or for acts done under it, see, post, "Time," "Conviction," Vol. I.; "Justices," Vol. III. p. 592.

offence committed; if limited to the king and prosecutor, then within one year; and if it is not sued for in that one year, then the king may sue for the same within two years after the expiration of that one year, and not otherwise. (31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5.) That is to say, unless where it is otherwise specially directed by subsequent statutes. (See "Information," Vol. III. p. 458, 459.)

Wherever a statute imposes terms and prescribes a thing to be done within a certain time, the lapse of a day is fatal, even in a penal case, because no inferior court can admit of any terms but such as directly and precisely satisfy the law. (Farrell v. Tomlinson, 5 Bro. P. C. 438; Bonham's Case, 8 Rep. 119.)

Act indemnifying persons acting under it.

It has uniformly been held, that where a party bonâ fide believes or supposes he is acting in pursuance of an act of Parliament, he is within the protection of its clauses. (Beechey v. Sides, 9 B. & C. 809; 4 M. & R. 634; and see the various decisions collected under the title "Justices," Vol. III. p. 587.)

Where an act gives certain privileges to officers who may be sued for things done in pursuance thereof, and a subsequent act imposes new obligations, the privileges given by the former act do not attach upon things done in pursuance of the latter. (Bazing v. Skelton, 5 T. R. 16.)

VI. Construction of Statutes.

Construction of statutes.

We have already, in the preceding section, while treating of some of those things which are incidental to a statute, and necessarily implied, noticed some rules for the construction of the same.

Nothing ought to be considered so necessary to the due administration of the office of justices of the peace as a thorough acquaintance with the mode of construing statutes, since by far the greater portion of his jurisdiction depends upon them.

Abridgments should never, in any instance, be relied on in the construction of a statute. The statute itself should be consulted. For, according to Lord Coke, the best exposition of all acts of Parliament are the acts of Parliament themselves: "optima statuti interpretatrix est (omnibus particulis ejusdem inspectis) ipsum statutum;" and "injustum est nisi tota lege inspecta, una aliqua ejus particula proposita judicare vel respondere." (a)

The following are the most prominent rules and principles by which statutes are to be construed.

Construction must be according to words and intent of act.

All acts of Parliament, as well private as general, shall be taken by a reasonable construction to be collected out of the words of the acts themselves, according to the true intent and meaning of the makers of the act. (Ld. Mountjoy's Case, 5th Reports; Case of the Chancellor of the University of Oxford, 10 Rep. 57, b.; Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 10.) Therefore, if a corporation be misnamed, if it appear that it was intended, it is sufficient. (Case of the Chancellor of the University of Oxford, 10 Rep. 57, b.; Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 10.)

The rule for the construction of a statute, as given by Bac. Abr. Statutes (I.) 6, (from Plowd. 467), is to suppose the law-maker present, and to be asked what he intended, and then to give such an answer as he, being an upright and reasonable man, might have been expected to give.

When the ordinary sense to be regarded or not.

Provisions in acts of Parliament, according to the ordinary sense of the words, unless such construction would lead to some unreasonable result, or be inconsistent with or contrary to the declared or implied intention of the framer of the law, in which case the grammatical sense of the words may be extended or modified; instances of which are to be found in Eyston v. Studd, Plowd. 463; Bac. Ab. Statutes (I.), per curiam, in R. v. Pease, 4 B. & Ad. 40.

(a) For these reasons, it is thought expedient, in this edition of the work, in most instances to give the very words of the statutes.

When the provision of a statute is general, it is subject to the control and order of the common law, and it should be construed accordingly, for statutes are not presumed to make any alteration in the common law, further or otherwise than the act expressly declares; therefore, in all general matters, the law presumes the act did not intend to make any alteration, for if the Parliament had that design, they would have expressed it in the act. (Harbert's Case, 3 Rep. 116; also, R. v. Bishop of London, 1 Shaw, 455; Hard. 62; Arthur v. Boxenham, 11 Mod. 150.)

6. Construction of Statutes.

Construction to be according to common law.

If in the same act of Parliament there be one clause which applies to a particular case, and another which is conceived in general terms, the former shall not restrain the signification of the latter. (Per Buller, J., Andree v. Fletcher, 2 T. R. 164.)

But where a general intention is expressed, and the act expresses also a particular intention incompatible with the general intention, the particular intention is to be considered in the nature of an exception. (Per Best, C. J., Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 180; 2 Moor. & P. 415; R. v. Bishop of Armagh, 8 Mod. 8; and see Bac. Ab. Statutes (I).)

Where the words of a statute are doubtful, general usage may be called in to explain them; for jus et norma loquendi, is governed by usage; but, where they are clear, the usage of a particular place cannot control them. (R. v. Hogg, 1 T. R. 728; Vaughan, 169; Bac. Ab. Statutes (I). The usage of any particular place alone cannot do so. (Id. Cald. 266, S. C.)

Usage to explain.

In construing acts of Parliament, the court must take into consideration not only the language of the preamble, or of any particular clause, but of the whole act; and if in some of the enacting clauses expressions are found of more extensive import than in others, the court will give effect to those more extensive expressions, if, upon view of the whole act, it appears to have been the intention of the legislature that they should have effect. (Doe v. Brandling, 7 B. & C. 643; 1 M. & R. 600, S. C.; Lincoln College Case, 3 Rep. 58.)

Whole act to be considered.

No strained construction should be placed upon a statute: it should be construed like a will. (Butler and Baker's Case, 3 Rep. 25.)

Should be construed like a will.

Too much stress ought not to be laid on the literal meaning of a statute. Wherever it admits of two constructions, the spirit of it, and intent of the legislature, ought to be regarded in the construction thereof. Thus, the 13 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 34, provides, amongst other exemptions from toll, "or for any horses or carriages which shall only cross any turnpike road, and shall not pass above one hundred yards thereon." A question arose, whether a carriage, which did not cross the road, but quitted it again on the same side on which it entered, was not liable to toll, although it did not pass the one hundred yards. The court held that it was not liable, observing, that the statute meant to exempt carriages making a very slight use of the road. (Major v. Oxenham, 5 Taunt. 340; ante, Vol. III. p. 248; see R. v. Morris, 1 B. & Ad. 441.)

Statute not always to be construed literally.

Doubtful words should be construed with reference to the object and intentions of the act. (See Jardine v. Lewis, 9 B. & C. 548; R. v. Hall, 1 B. & C. 123; 2 D. & R. 241; and see per cur., R. v. Pease, 4 B. & Ad. 40.)

Doubtful words to be construed with reference to object of act.

It has more than once been observed by the court, that the language of acts of Parliament is not to be examined with a critical eye, but according to its plain and obvious meaning. If we can find expressions in a statute capable of an intelligible explanation, it is our duty to give effect to them, according to the obvious intention of the legislature, and not according to a critical and literal interpretation. (Per Abbott, C. J., R. v. Bellamy, 2 D. & R. 727; 1 B. & C. 500, S. C.)

Where the legislature, in a very modern act of Parliament, have used words of a plain and definite import, it is very dangerous to put upon them a construction, the effect of which will be to hold that the legislature did not mean that which they have expressed. (Per Bayley, J., R. v. Stoke Damerel, 7 B. & C. 563; 1 M. & R. 458, S. C.)

One part of a statute must be so construed by another, that the whole may (if possible) stand: ut res magis valeat, quam pereat. But a saving, totally

construed as if possible to stand.

6. Construction of Statutes.

A saving, totally repugnant, void.

repugnant to the body of the act, is void. If, therefore, an act of Parliament vests land in the king and his heirs, saving the right of all persons whatsoever; or vests the land of A. in the king, saving the right of A.; in either of these cases the saving is totally repugnant to the body of the statute, and (if good) would render the statute of no effect or operation; and, therefore, the saving is void, and the land vests absolutely in the king. (The Case of Alton Woods, 1 Rep. 47; 1 Bla. Com. 81.)

Saving clause.

A saving clause will only save that which is in esse at the time of the saving. (Case of Alton Woods, 1 Rep. 40, b.)

An act ought not to be construed so as to work an injustice. (Sir J. Nedham's Case, 8 Rep. 136, a; Towler v. Chatterton, 6 Bing. 259; 3 M. & P. 619.)

Not to be construed against reason.

No statute shall be construed in such a manner as to be inconvenient and against reason. (Hughes v. Hughes, Carth. 136; 1 Inst. 97.)

By the 12 Car. II. c. 17, all persons presented to benefices in the late times, who should conform as in the statute was directed, were to be confirmed therein, notwithstanding any act or thing whatsoever: yet it was holden, that the statute did not extend to the confirming of a person, who had been simoniacally promoted. (Crawley v. Phillips, Sid. 232.)

Title of act.

The title of a statute is no part of the law. (R. v. Williams, 1 W. Bla. 95.)

But it may, it seems, be referred to in construing the statute. (See Free v. Burgoyne, 5 B. & Cres. 400; 2 Bligh, Rep. 78, N. S.; R. v. Pierce, 3 M. & Sel. 62; Mayor of Leicester v. Burgess, 5 B. & Adol. 250; 2 Nev. & M. 131; sed vide Bac. Ab. Statutes (I.); Hard. 324; Lord Raym. 77.)

The preamble to be considered.

The preamble is deemed true, and is a good means for collecting the intent, and may always assist in the solution of doubts. (Crespigny v. Witternoon, 4 T. R. 793; 1 Inst. 11; Bac. Ab. Statutes (I).) But the preamble shall not restrain the operation of the enacting part of a statute which is expressed in clear and unambiguous words: as, where the preamble reciteth only a particular inconvenience, this shall not hinder a subsequent enacting clause from being understood in that more general sense which the words would otherwise and of themselves import, so as to take in other inconveniences of the like kind, although not specified in the preamble. (R. v. Athos, 8 Mod. 144; 1 P. Wms. 320; Lofft, 782; Patterson v. Bankes, Cowp. 543; Perkins v. Sewell, 1 Bla. Rep. 659; Wright v. Nuttall, 10 B. & C. 492. See the rule laid down in 7 B. & C. 643, ante, 865.)

The enacting words of a statute may be carried beyond the mischief recited in the preamble, if such, upon a fair exposition of the statute, appear to have been the intention, and the words are sufficiently large. (R. v. Pierce, 3 M. & Sel. 62; and see Halton v. Cove, 1 B. & Adolph. 538.)

Statutes in pari materia.

All statutes in pari materia are to be construed as one law; Earl of Ailesbury v. Pattison, 1 Dougl. 30; Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 53; R. v. Inhabitants of Gwenop, 3 T. R. 135; and should be construed together, (2 Lofft, 398; R. v. Conservators of River Tone, 1 B. & Adolph. 561; 4 M. & Sel. 210; Bac. Ab. Statutes (I).)

As if one statute prohibit the doing of a thing, and another statute afterwards be made whereby a forfeiture is inflicted upon the person doing that thing, both are to be considered as one statute. (Stradling v. Morgan, Plowd. 206.)

If it can be gathered from a subsequent statute in pari materia what meaning the legislature attached to the words of a former statute, this will amount to a legislative declaration of its meaning, and will govern the construction of the first statute. (Morris v. Mellin, 6 Barn. & C. 454; 9 D. & R. 503; and see 7 Barn. & C. 99.)

Private statutes.

The construction of private acts of Parliament is to be governed by the principles of common law, and applied to the subject in a manner analogous to the rules of interpretation in a private deed or conveyance. (Eton College v. Winchester, Bishop, Lofft, 401.)

They ought not to have a liberal construction put on them. (Threadneedle v. Lynam, 2 Mod. 57; Bac. Ab. Statutes (I).)

A statute made pro bono publico, shall be construed in such manner that it may as far as possible attain the end proposed. (Pierce v. Hopper, 1 Str. 253, 258.)

The New River water act was holden, although only the City of London be therein mentioned, to extend to places adjacent; because all statutes made for the conveniency of the public ought to have a liberal construction. (New River Company v. Graves, 2 Vern. 431; and see R. v. Pease, 1 Nev. & M. 690; 4 B. & Adol. 37.)

6. Construction of Statutes.

Statutes for public good to be construed liberally.

There are three points to be considered in the construction of all remedial statutes (a); the old law, the mischief, and the remedy: that is, how the common law stood at the making of the act; what the mischief was, for which the common law did not provide; and what remedy the Parliament hath provided to cure this mischief. And it is the business of the judges so to construe the act as to suppress the mischief and advance the remedy, consistently with the fair construction of the act. (Heydon's case, 3 Rep. 7; Co. Lit. 11, 42; 1 Bla. Com. 81; Johnes v. Johnes, 3 Dow, 15; Atcheson v. Everitt, Cowp. 391, S. P.; Stainford v. Sinclair, 9 Moore, 379; 2 Bing. 193, S. C.)

Remedial statutes to be construed liberally.

So, in all cases within the same mischief, the case shall be construed within the intent though it be not within the letter of the statute. (Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 13.) As the statute Marlb. 29, which gives remedy to the successor, ad bonæ ecclesiæ repetenda, extends to trespass for cutting down trees. (2 Inst. 152.)

All cases within the same mischief.

The 2 Geo. II. c. 22, continued by the 29 Geo. II. c. 28, expired 1st June, 1759; the 32 Geo. II. c. 28, commenced 15th June, 1759; so there was a chasm of fourteen days. The court declared they would construe equitably, and that Trinity Term, 1759, ought to be considered as the term in which such prisoners (as had been precluded by the expiration of the former act from completing their discharge under it) were charged in execution, and therefore they had Michaelmas term for the first term next after their being charged in execution. (2 B. M. 901.)

But a casus omissus can in no case be supplied by a court of law; for that would be to make laws. (Per Buller, J., Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 52.)

Casus omissus.

A case out of the mischief intended to be remedied by a statute shall be construed to be out of the purview, though it be within the words of the statute. (2 Inst. 386.)

A case out of mischief provided against.

Statutes against frauds are to be liberally and beneficially expounded. This may seem a contradiction to the rule, that penal statutes should be construed strictly; most statutes against frauds being in their consequences penal. But this difference is here to be taken: where the statute acts upon the offender, and inflicts a penalty, as the pillory or a fine, it is then to be taken strictly, but when the statute acts upon the offence, by setting aside the fraudulent transaction, here it is to be construed liberally. Upon this footing the statute of 13 Eliz. c. 5, which avoids all gifts of goods, &c. made to defraud creditors and others, was held to extend by the general words to a gift made to defraud the queen of a forfeiture. (Twynne's case, 3 Rep. 81.)

Statutes against frauds construed liberally.

And it has been held that the same words in a statute will bear different interpretations, according to the nature of the suit or prosecution instituted upon them. As, by the 9 Anne, c. 14, the statute against gaming, if any person shall lose at any time or sitting 10*l.*, and shall pay it to the winner, he may recover it back within three months; and if the loser does not, within that time, any other person may sue for it, and treble the value besides. So, where an action was brought to recover back fourteen guineas, which had been won and paid after a continuance at play, except an interruption during dinner, the court held the statute was remedial, as far as it prevented the effects of gaming, without inflicting a penalty, and therefore, in this action, they considered it one time or sitting; but they said, if an action had been brought by a common informer for the penalty, they would have construed Penal statutes construed strictly.

it strictly in favour of the defendant, and would have held that the money had been lost at two sittings. (Bones v. Booth, 2 Bla. Rep. 1226.)

Penal Statutes (a) must be construed strictly. Thus, the 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, having enacted that those who are convicted of stealing horses should not have the benefit of clergy, the judges conceived that this should not extend to him that should steal but one horse (b), and therefore procured a new act for that purpose in the following year, 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 33. (Bac. Elem. c. 12.) And by the 14 Geo. II. c. 6, stealing sheep or other cattle was made felony, without benefit of clergy. But these general words, "or other cattle," being looked upon as much too loose to create a capital offence, the act was held to extend to nothing but mere sheep. And therefore, in the next sessions, it was found necessary to make another statute, 15 Geo. II. c. 34, extending the former to bulls, cows, oxen, steers, bullocks, heifers, calves, and lambs, by name. And see now the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29. It has since been decided, that where statutes use the plural number, a single instance will be comprehended. The 2 Geo. II. c. 25, enacts, that it shall be felony to steal any bank-notes, and it has been determined that the offence is complete by stealing one bank-note. (Hassel's case, Leach's Cr. L.)

The statute against maintenance shall be construed strictly. (Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 20, 86 b.)

The statute de malefactoribus in parvis was held not to extend to those in forests. (Id.)

So, the general words of a penal statute shall be restrained for the benefit of him against whom the penalty is inflicted.

As the stat. Wil. II. 11, that the body of an accountant shall be committed by the auditors to gaol, without saying at what time; but he cannot be committed by them, if it be not immediately upon the account. (Pl. Com. 17 a.)

So, where the 12 Geo. II. c. 34, s. 2, directs that the sheriff should proclaim the order in council against offenders under that act, in two market towns, near the place where such offence was committed, the word near shall be taken to mean a reasonable vicinity, though not equivalent to next. (R. v. Harvey, 1 Wils. 164; 1 Bl. 20, S. C.)

But the exposition of a penal statute ought to be such, that the statute be not eluded. (2 Rol. 127; Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 28; and see Bac. Ab. Statutes (J).)

See further ante, 857.

Every statute which introduces a capital punishment must be construed strictly. (R. v. Harvey, 1 Wils. 164.)

Statutes under which parties are made exempt from duties imposed by general acts should be construed strictly. (Perchard v. Heywood, 8 T. R. 468.)

A statute imposing a charge on the public must be construed strictly. And where a special authority is delegated, by statute, to particular persons to take away a man's property and estate against his will, there it must be strictly pursued, and must appear to be so upon the face of the proceedings. (R. v. Croke, Cowp. 26.) And such an act must be construed strongly against the parties to whom that authority is given, and in favour of private

(b) Lord Hale thinks that the scruple of the judges did not merely depend upon the words being in the plural number, because no doubt had ever occurred respecting former statutes in the plural number; as, for instance, it was enacted by the 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, that no person convicted of burning any dwelling-houses should be admitted to clergy. But the reason of the difficulty in the case was, because the statute of 37 Hen. VIII. c. 8, was expressly penned in the singular number, If any man do steal any horse, mare, or filly; and then this statute, thus varying the number, and at the same time expressly repealing all other exclusions of clergy introduced since the beginning of Hen. VIII., it raised a doubt whether it were not intended by the legislature to restore clergy where only one horse was stolen. (2 H. P. C. 365.)

property. (Scales v. Pickering, 4 Bingham. 448; 1 Moor. & P. 195; and see 6. Construction of Statutes. Dudley Canal Company v. Grazebrook, 1 B. & Adol. 59.)

An enlarged construction must not be put thereon. (Lofft, 438; Hull Dock Company v. La March, 8 B. & Cres. 52; 2 Man. & R. 107; Stowbridge Can. Comp., 2 B. & Adol. 792; Fraser v. Swansea Can. Comp., 3 Nev. & M. 391; 1 Ad. & Ell. 354.)

By an act reciting that a railway between certain points would be of great public utility, and would materially assist the agricultural interest and the general traffic of the country, power was given to a company to make such railway according to a plan deposited with the clerk of the peace, from which they were not to deviate more than 100 yards. By a subsequent act the company, or persons authorized by them, were empowered to use locomotive engines upon the railway. The railway was made parallel and adjacent to an ancient highway, and in some places came within five yards of it. It did not appear whether or not the line could have been made in those instances to pass at a greater distance. The locomotive engines on the railway frightened the horses of persons using the highway as a carriage road. On indictment against the company for a nuisance, it was held, that this interference with the rights of the public must be taken to have been contemplated and sanctioned by the legislature, since the words of the statute authorizing the use of the engines were unqualified, and the public benefit derived from the railway (whether it would have excused the alleged nuisance at common law or not) showed at least that there was nothing unreasonable in a clause of an act of Parliament giving such unqualified authority. (R. v. Pease, 1 Nev. & M. 690; 4 B. & Adolph. 30.)

An act of Parliament, authorizing persons to repair and cleanse a navigable river, does not authorize them to make a passage to a new wharf on the river. (Poathwicke v. Mason, 2 Chit. 658; see R. v. Morris, 1 B. & Adol. 441.)

If an act of Parliament gives to the lord of a manor the conusance of all pleas within his manor, he shall not have conusance where he himself is party; iniquum est aliquam suæ rei esse judicem. (Bonham's case, 8 Coke, 118, a.)

Affirmative words in a statute do not take away a former custom. (Co. Against customs. Litt. 115, a; Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 24.) The statute 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Wil. IV. c. 64, for permitting the general sale of beer by retail in England, does not supersede the custom of a borough, that no person shall carry on the trade of an alehouse-keeper therein who is not a burgess. (Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgesses of the borough of Leicester v. Burgess, 2 Nev. & M. 131; 5 B. & Adol. 246; and see Simson v. Moss, 2 B. & Adol. 543.)

Statutes restrictive of the common law should receive a restrictive construction. (Ash v. Abdy, 3 Swanst. 664.) Against common law rights.

It has been holden that a statute discharging insolvent debtors ought to be construed strictly, because it gives away the property of some subject. Giving away property of subject— Et per Holt, C. J., "Let a statute be ever so charitable, if it give away the property of a subject, it ought to be construed strictly." (Calladay v. Pilkington, 12 Mod. 513.) as the insolvent act.

A statute shall never have an equitable construction in order to overthrow an estate. (Wroth v. the Countess of Sussex, 3 Leon. 133.)

All statutes that give costs are to be taken strictly. (Cone v. Bowles, 1 Statutes giving costs. Salk. 205; R. v. Glastonby, C. T. Hardw. 357; and see R. v. York (Justices of), 3 Nev. & M. 685; 1 Ad. & Ell.; Bac. Ab. Statutes (I.)).

A statute creating a new jurisdiction ought to be construed strictly. Creating new jurisdiction. (Reeve v. Hopper, Stra. 258, 260; 10 Rep. 73.)

It has therefore been holden, that the 6 Geo. I. c. 21, which gives the commissioners of excise a jurisdiction to condemn in a summary way certain goods therein mentioned, ought to be construed strictly; because it breaks in upon the ancient jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer. (Warwick v. White, Bunb. 106.)

Regularly, where an act of Parliament giveth a power or interest to one person certain, by this express designation of one, all others are excluded. Special power to one person only to be pursued. (11 Rep. 59, 64.)

Where persons, as justices, commissioners, &c., have special authority by Special authority.

When words of permission obligatory, as the words, "shall and may be," &c.

statute, they have none but what is under such statute, all other acts being void. (R. v. Lindale, 1 Burr. 445.)

If it be doubtful whether a statute declaring an act, instrument, or contract, void, makes it voidable only, another clause in the same statute, imposing a penalty on such act, instrument, or contract, is a clear test that it is, ipso facto, void. (Gye v. Felton, 4 Taun. 876.)

Where a statute points out the manner in which a canal company shall convey lands, and enacts that "every such conveyance shall be valid," it does not cure any defect in the title of lands so conveyed. (Ward v. Scott, 3 Campb. 284.)

Where an act of Parliament alters the service, tenure, or interest in the land in prejudice of the lord or tenant, there the general words of such act will not extend to copyholds; but if an act is made for the public good, and no prejudice accrues to the lord or tenant, there copyholds are within the purview of it. (Heyden's case, 3 Rep. 7.)

If, under an act of Parliament, the property in goods, chattels, furniture, clothing, and debts, is vested in certain directors of the poor, yet the property in money and securities for money is not vested in them by those words. (R. v. Beacall, and R. v. Willings, 1 C. & P. 454.)

Statutes conferring privileges on the members of the universities mean only the members of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, unless otherwise expressed. (Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 49.)

If a statute says, that anything for the public benefit may be done, it shall be sometimes construed that it must be done: as the 23 Hen. VI. c. 10, says, the sheriff, &c. may bail, he shall be bound to bail. (R. v. Barlow, Salk. 609; Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 22.)

By the statute 17 Geo. II. c. 38, "it shall and may be lawful" for the justices to commit an outgoing churchwarden or overseer who neglects or refuses to account. This renders it discretionary only in the justices to commit. (R. v. Justices of Norfolk, 1 Nev. & M. 67; 4 B. & Adol. 238.)

The 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, enacts, that the overseers may make a rate to reimburse the constables: this is construed they shall; for they are compellable so to do. (R. v. Barlow, 2 Salk. 609.)

So in the stat. 8 & 9 Wil. III. c. 11, s. 8, the words "may assign," and "may suggest" breaches, are held compulsory on the plaintiff to proceed according to the statute. (5 T. R. 636; 2 Wils. 577.)

The words "shall and may" are only imperative where the clause in a statute is for the public benefit. (R. v. Flockwold Inclosure (Commissioners), 2 Chit. 251; R. v. The Steward of Havering Atte-Bower, 5 B. & Ald. 691; 2 D. & R. 176, n.)

But if from the whole act it appears the legislature did not intend the words shall and may as imperative, they cannot be so construed—as where an act directed it should and might be lawful for trustees to do an act if it should be deemed proper, &c., it was held the enactment was merely directory. (De Beauvoir v. Welch, 7 B. & C. 226; 1 M. & R. 81, S. C.; ante, Vol. III., p. 214.)

In R. v. the Bailiffs of Eye, 4 B. & Ald. 271, the words "it shall be lawful" came under consideration as occurring in one of their bye-laws; on which Abbott, C. J., observed, "the words are, 'that it shall be lawful for the bailiffs, &c. to admit.'" Those words clearly give to the bailiffs a discretionary power to admit the persons who have the qualifications therein mentioned, but they by no means make it imperative on them so to do. (See, also, Allen v. Waldgrave, 2 Moore, 625; 8 Taun. 566, S. C.)

A clause in an act of Parliament fixing the time of electing a parish officer, &c., is in general construed as directory only. (See R. v. Mayor of Norwich, 1 B. & Adol. 310; R. v. Sparrow, 2 Stra. 1123; R. v. Denbighshire, 4 East, 142.)

And it has often been held where an act orders anything to be performed by a public body, and merely points out the specific time when it is to be done, that such act is not imperative, but directory, and may be complied with in a reasonable time after the period prescribed. (See per Littledale, J., in Smith v. Jones, 1 B. & Adol. 334.)

An act of the 51 Geo. III. for making the Bridgewater and Taunton canal, after reciting that the making of that canal would be very prejudicial to the tolls authorized to be levied and collected from the Tone navigation, authorized and required the company of proprietors of the canal, within three calendar months, to contract and agree with the conservators of the river Tone navigation and other persons, proprietors of shares, or parts of shares, or otherwise interested therein, for the absolute purchase of their several and respective estates, rights, and interests in and to the same, and also to contract and agree with the overseers of the poor for the time being of the town of Taunton, and the several parishes of Taunton, St. Mary Magdalen, and Taunton St. James, for the absolute purchase of the respective estates, rights and interests of the said town and parishes, under and by virtue of the said therein recited act.—The 51 Geo. III. was repealed by the 5 Geo. IV.—Held by Bayley and Littledale, Justices, that the words, within three calendar months, applied to both branches of the clause, and that the canal company therefore were bound to have contracted within that period with the overseers of the poor of the parishes of Taunton; and not having done so, they could not afterwards compel them to sell their interest; and by Parke, J., that whether the right to purchase that interest was limited to three months or not; at all events, it was gone when the 51 Geo. III. was repealed. (Conservators of River Tone v. Ash, 10 B. & Cres. 349.)

The stat. 9 Anne, c. 20, s. 4, giving power to private persons to exhibit quo warranto informations for the usurping of offices, relates only to offices in cities, towns, corporate boroughs, and “places,” such places being places ejusdem generis with those previously named. (R. v. Wallis, 5 T. R. 375; and see as to construing words ejusdem generis, Sandiman v. Breach, 7 B. & Cres. 96; 9 D. & R. 796; ante, “Lord’s Day,” Vol. III. p. 753; Lowther v. Radnor (Earl), 8 East, 113; ante, “Servants,” p. 537; Hare v. Horton, 5 B. & Adol. 715; 2 Nev. & M. 428.)

A statute which treats of things or persons of an inferior rank, cannot by any general words be extended to those of a superior. So, a statute treating of “deans, prebendaries, parsons, vicars, and others having spiritual promotion,” is held not to extend to bishops, though they have spiritual promotion, deans being the highest persons named, and bishops being of a still higher order. (Canterbury’s Case, 2 Rep. 46; Hard. 442.) This construction must be presumed to be most conformable to the intention of the legislature.

Where a statute mentions inferior conveyances, the subsequent words, “by any other means,” cannot be intended of an act of Parliament, which is the highest manner of conveyance that can be; and, therefore, the makers of the act would have put that in the beginning, and not in the end, after the inferior conveyances, if they had intended to extend the act thereunto. (Archbishop of Canterbury’s Case, 2 Rep. 46 b; Copland v. Powell, 1 Bing. 373; 8 Moore, 400.)

Where a statute speaks of indictments to be taken before justices of the peace, or others having power to take indictments, it shall be understood only of other inferior courts, and not of the King’s Bench, or other courts at Westminster. (Canterbury’s Case, 2 Rep. 46; 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 124.)

Where a statute directs a penalty to be recovered in any court of record, this shall not be intended of the quarter sessions, unless it be specially named in such statute; but only of the courts of record at Westminster. (6 Rep. 19, 20; 2 Hale, 29, 30.)

On the other hand, it seems that, if a statute names superiors, it includes inferiors. As, if a statute makes the securities given by the sureties of the farmers of the excise to be exempted out of the act of oblivion, a fortiori, the securities of the farmers themselves shall be exempted. (R. Hard. 424.)

Where the moiety of a penalty is given by statute to the treasurer of a county, riding, or division, the word “division” does not apply to small districts, such as the Cinque-Port of Seaford, in Sussex, but must be construed with reference to county and riding, and means something analogous to them. (Evans, q. t., v. Stevens, 4 T. R. 224, 459.)

Neither can it be applied to the different parts of a county in which the magistrates act under one general commission, but for the convenience of the county adjourn the quarter sessions from one part of it to another, and appoint a separate treasurer for each. (Evans, q. t., v. Stevens, 4 T. R. 225, 459.)

In general, nothing but express negative words will take away the jurisdiction of the Court of King's Bench. (See R. v. Abbott, Douglas, 553, n. 1.; R. v. Fell, 1 B. & Adol. 380.)

The statute itself, especially of late, frequently contains a clause laying down rules of interpretation of doubtful words and clauses therein, as do the statutes relative to Saving Banks, Friendly Societies, Lunatics, Watching and Lighting, Parishes, &c. &c.; and see these respective titles.

The following is the new and important provision of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 14, relative to the interpretation of all criminal statutes. The words of the enactment are—"that wherever this or any other statute relating to any offence, whether punishable upon indictment or summary conviction, in describing or referring to the offence or the subject matter on or with respect to which it shall be committed, or the offender or the party affected or intended to be affected by the offence, hath used or shall use words importing the singular number of the masculine gender only, yet the statute shall be understood to include several matters as well as one matter, and several persons as well as one person, and females as well as males, and bodies corporate as well as individuals, unless it be otherwise specially provided, or there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction; and wherever any forfeiture or penalty is payable to a party aggrieved, it shall be payable to a body corporate in every case where such body shall be the party aggrieved."

Explanatory statutes should not be construed by any strained sense against the letter of the act; for, if any such exposition should be made, there would be no end of expounding. (Butler and Baker's Case, 3 Rep. 25.) They ought to be construed beneficially.

Where there are conflicting decisions upon the construction of a statute, the court must refer to that which ought to be the source of all such decisions; that is, the words of the statute itself. (Per Ld. Ellenborough, R. v. Inhabitants of Leek Wootton, 16 East, 122.)

The power of construing a statute is in the judges of the temporal courts, who, in cases of doubtful construction, are to mould them according to reason and convenience, to the best use. (Sheffield v. Ratcliffe, Hob. 346; Plowd, 109; Heydon's Case, 3 Rep. 7.) And that the courts of common law are intrusted with the exposition of statutes; (see Gould v. Gapper, 5 East, 370; 1 Smith, 528, S. C.; see further, Bac. Ab. Statutes (H.).)

It seems that, if the weight of authority be in construing an act of Parliament one way, however wrong that way may be, the courts are bound by it. (See Booth v. Ibbotson, 1 Y. & J. 360; 1 Bla. Com. 91.)

VII. Repeal of Statute, what shall be, and its Effect.

Repeal of a statute, what shall be.

We have seen, ante, 858, how long a statute remains in force.

A statute may be repealed by the express words of a subsequent statute, or by implication.

The bare recital of a statute is not sufficient to repeal the positive provisions of a former statute, without a clause of repeal. (Dore v. Gray, 2 T. R. 365.)

A statute cannot be repealed by nonuser. (White v. Boot, 2 T. R. 275.)

Where the words of an act of Parliament are plain, it cannot be repealed by nonuser; yet, where there has been a series of practice without any exception, it goes a great way to explain the act where there is any ambiguity. (Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Leigh v. Kent, 3 T. R. 364.)

7. Repeal of Statute, &c.

Where two acts of Parliament come into operation on the same day, and are repugnant, the one which last received the royal assent virtually repeals the other. (R. v. Middlesex, 1 Dowl. P. C. 116.)

Where the common law and a statute differ, the common law gives place to the statute; and an old statute gives place to a new one; and this upon a general principle of universal law, that "leges posteriores priores contrarias abrogant;" consonant to which it was laid down by a law of the twelve tables at Rome, that, "quod populus podremum jussit, id jus ratum esto." (1 Bla. Com. 89; Bac. Ab. Statutes (D.).)

Common law gives place to statute, and an old to a new one.

But this is to be understood only when the latter statute is couched in negative terms, or where its matter is so clearly repugnant, that it necessarily implies a negative. As, if a former act says, that a juror upon such a trial shall have twenty pounds a year, and a new statute afterwards enacts that he shall have twenty marks; here the latter statute, though it does not express, yet necessarily implies a negative, and virtually repeals the former; for if twenty marks be made qualification sufficient, the former statute, which requires twenty pounds, is at an end. (Jenk. Cent. 2, 73; Owen v. Saunders, 1 Ld. Raym. 160.)

The stat. 13 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 5, exempting generally from the impress service any harpooner, &c., or seaman in the Greenland fishery trade, is impliedly repealed by the 26 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 17, which exempts any harpooner, &c., whose name shall be inserted in a list required to be delivered on oath, &c.; and which also exempts any seaman entered on board any ship intended to proceed on the said fishery in the following season, whose name shall be inserted in a list, &c., and who shall give security, &c.; for the latter statute superadds the insertion of the seaman's name in such list as a condition precedent to the exemption. (Ex-parte Carruthers, 9 East's R. 4.)

So, the 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 6, which gives an appeal without limitation as to time against overseers' accounts, is virtually repealed by the 17 Geo. II. c. 38, s. 4, which requires that the appeal shall be to the next general quarter sessions after allowance of the accounts. (R. v. Justices of Worcestershire, 5 Maul. & Sel. 457; and see 1 Price, 438.)

But, if both acts be merely affirmative, and the substance such that both may stand together, here the latter does not repeal the former, but they shall both have a concurrent efficacy.

The law does not favour a repeal by implication, nor is it to be allowed unless the repugnancy be quite plain: for as such repeal carries with it a reflection upon the wisdom of the former parliament, it has ever been confined to the repealing as little as possible of the preceding statute. (11 Rep. 63; Forster's Case, 1 Roll. R. 88; 10 Mod. 118; see R. v. Inhabitants of Idle, 2 Barn. & Ald. 149; R. v. Drake, 6 Maul. & Sel. 116; Goldson v. Buch, 15 East, 372.)

If, by a former law, an offence be indictable at the quarter sessions, and a latter law makes the same offence indictable at the assizes, here the jurisdiction of the sessions is not taken away, but both have a concurrent jurisdiction, and the offender may be prosecuted at either; unless the new statute subjoins express negative words: as, that the offence shall be indictable at the assizes, and not elsewhere. (Foster's Case, 11 Rep. 63; Com. Dig. Parliament, R. 9.)

The 23 Eliz. 1, which gives 20*l.* per month against a recusant, does not take away the penalty of 12*d.* for every Sunday, given by the 1 Eliz. c. 2. (Foster's Case, 11 Rep. 63 b.)

But, where affirmative words in sense contain a negative,—as, where a new ordinance is made which directs the form or order of the proceeding, it shall be otherwise. (Pl. Com. 113.)

Where a new act does not continue the old mode enacted in a prior act, but substitutes a new mode, the substitution of the new mode supersedes, with all its consequences, the old. A variation in the mode implies a change in the intention of the legislature. Had it been intended to continue the old system, the use of the old language, and the continuance of the old mode, would naturally have been expected. Where new language is introduced, and a new mode adopted, it must be supposed a new system was intended. (See, per Bayley, J., Fearnley v. Morley, 5 B. & C. 30; 7 D. & R. 832, S. C.; Gray v. Shilling, 2 B. & B. 3; 4 Moore, 371, S. C.)

7. Repeal of Statute, &c.

In the construction of a general clause in a new act introducing new provisions and creating new liabilities, that the powers, provisions, exemptions, penalties, forfeitures, payments, remedies, matters, and things contained in a former act, relating to the same subject, except as varied by the present statute, should be as effectual for carrying the same into execution as if re-enacted; where the former act took away the right of certiorari it has been held that such right was taken away by the new act. (R. v. Fell, 1 B. & Adol. 380.)

Where the intention appears that the subsequent act shall not have such an operation, though the words, taken strictly and grammatically, would repeal a former act, the courts hold that they ought not to receive such a construction. (See Williams v. Pritchard, 4 T. R. 2.)

Affirmative words in an act of parliament, without any negative, express or implied, do not take away the common law. (Pl. Com. 112; 2 Inst. 200.)

Where, by the 1 Eliz. c. 2, a minister who does not read the common prayer shall lose the profits of his benefice for the first offence, and, being convicted, &c., for a second offence, shall be deprived; yet he might be deprived by the high commission erected by the power of the common law for the first offence, without a conviction, &c., or the methods directed by the statute. (5 Rep. 5 b.; De Jur. Eccl.; Bac. Ab. Statutes, (G).)

So general words do not take away a particular privilege or benefit: as the stat. Wil. II. c. 18, which gives an elegit, does not take away the privilege an infant has, that he shall not be sued during his non-age, if an elegit be against the heir of a conusor, being an infant. (2 Inst. 395.)

A power in an act of parliament to continue private ways does not alter the liability of parties to repair them. (Anon. Lofft, 465.)

So, where Southwark chose scavengers by custom, the 14 Car. II. c. 2, which says, constables and churchwardens, &c., shall meet in Easter week, and choose, does not take away a custom to choose at the leet. (Dub. Mayor &c. of London v. Gatford, 2 Mod. 41.)

So, affirmative statutes do not take away a prior exemption. (R. v. Pugh, Dougl. 188.)

An act lately made may be within the equity of an act made long since. (See Vernon's case, 4 Rep. 1.)

A statute extends to a provision made by a subsequent statute. Therefore, a statute shall be extended to cases provided by a subsequent statute; as, if extendors value goods too high, upon the stat. (Acton Burnel), 13 Edw. I., they shall take them at the same price as was provided by the stat. (de Merc.) 11 Edw. I. (Hard. 211.)

The st. (M. Ch. 9.) Hen. III. c. 9, which says "omnes barones de quinque portibus habeant omnes libertates, et consuetudines suas," shall be restrained to such liberties as are not taken away by another branch of the same statute; and therefore they shall not hold placita coronæ. (2 Inst. 31.)

A statute made in affirmance of the common law extends to all future times. (2 Inst. 236.)

If a statute, before perpetual, be continued by an affirmative statute, for a limited time, this does not amount to a repeal thereof at the end of that time. (Raym. 397; Anon. Hob. 215.)

But subsequent statutes, which add accumulative penalties, and institute new methods of proceeding, do not repeal former penalties and methods of proceeding ordained by preceding statutes without negative words. Nor hath a latter act of parliament ever been construed to repeal a prior act, unless there be a contrariety or repugnancy in them, or at least some notice taken in the former law of the preceding one, so as to indicate an intention in the law-makers to repeal it. Neither is a bare recital in a statute, without a clause of repeal, sufficient to repeal the positive provisions of a former statute. (Cowp. 297; 2 Atk. 675; Sharp v. Warren, 6 Price, 131; Dore v. Gray, 2 Term R. 365.)

If a statute that repeals another is itself repealed afterwards, the first statute is hereby revived, without any formal words for that purpose. So, when the statutes of the 26 and 35 Hen. VIII., declaring the king to be the supreme head of the church, were repealed by a statute, 1 & 2 P. & M., and this latter statute was afterwards repealed by an act of 1 Eliz., there needed not any express words of revival in Queen Elizabeth's statute, but these acts of King Henry were impliedly and virtually revived. (4 Inst. 325.)

Where repealing statute repealed, the first statute revived.

But if a statute be repealed by several acts, a repeal of one act, and not of all, does not revive the first statute. (Case of a Committee concerning Bishops, 12 Rep. 8.)

If an expired statute be afterwards revived by another statute, the law derives its force from the first. (Shipman v. Henbest, 4 T. R. 109.)

Where a statute professes to repeal absolutely a prior law, and substitutes other provisions on the same subject, which are limited to continue only till a certain time, the prior law does not revive after the repealing statute is spent, unless the intention of the legislature to that effect be expressed. (Warren v. Windle, 3 East, 205.)

No proceedings can be pursued under a repealed statute, though commenced before the repeal, unless by special exception. (Miller's case, 3 Wils. 420; 1 W. Bla. 451, S. C.)

A contract declared by a statute to be illegal, is not made good by a subsequent repeal of the statute. (Jacques v. Wittey, 1 H. Bla. 65.)

When an act of Parliament is repealed, it must be considered (except as to transactions past and closed) as if it had never existed. (Per Lord Tenterden, C. J., 9 B. & C., 752; 10 B. & Cres. 41.)

In March, 1825, a trader committed an act of bankruptcy, upon which a commission might have issued under the statutes relating to bankrupts then in force. On the 1st of May those statutes were repealed; on the 2nd of May the repealing act was repealed and the former acts thereby revived. In July a commission of bankrupt issued; it was held that it was supported by the act of bankruptcy committed in March. (Phillips v. Hopwood, 10 B. & Cres. 39; and see Maggs v. Hunt, 4 Bingh. 212; Hewson v. Heard, 9 B. & Cres. 754.)

VIII. How Disobedience to a Statute may be punished, &c.

Where a statute makes a new offence, which was no way prohibited by the common law, and appoints a particular manner of proceeding against the offender, as by a commitment, or action of debt, or information, without mentioning an indictment, it seems to be settled at this day, that it will not maintain an indictment, because the mentioning the other methods of proceeding only seems impliedly to exclude that of indictment: yet it hath been adjudged that if such statute gave a recovery by action of debt, bill, plaint, information, or otherwise, it authorizes a proceeding by way of indictment. (2 Haw. c. 25, s. 4.)

How far an indictment will lie, where another method of prosecution is appointed.

And if there be a prohibitory clause in the act, the offender may be indicted upon the prohibitory clause, notwithstanding the penalty; but otherwise it is, where the act is not prohibitory, but only inflicts the forfeiture, and specifies the remedy. (2 Hale, 171; R. v. Wright, 1 Burr. 544.)

But where the offence was antecedently punishable by a common law proceeding, and a statute prescribes a particular remedy by a summary proceeding, there either method may be pursued, and the prosecutor is at liberty to proceed either at common law or in the method prescribed by the statute: because in that case the sanction is cumulative, and doth not exclude the common law proceeding. (R. v. Robinson, 2 Burr. 803; Sharp Stock in Funds and of Companies'. v. Warren, 6 Price, 131; R. v. Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 161; "Blasphemy," Vol. I. p. 403.)

Where no method of prosecution is appointed.

Where defendant may be prosecuted both by the king and party grieved.

But every contempt of a statute is indictable where no other punishment is limited. (1 Haw. c. 22, s. 5; see "Indictment," Vol. III. p. 403, 404.)

And wheresoever an act of Parliament doth generally prohibit anything, the party grieved shall not only have his action for his private relief, but the offender shall be punished at the king's suit, for the contempt of the law. (2 Inst. 163.)

And when a new offence is created by one clause of an act, and a penalty annexed by a separate and substantive clause, a prosecutor may indict on the clause creating the offence, and is not obliged to sue for the penalty. (R. v. Harris, 4 T. R. 205.)

Stocks.

IT is said that every vill, of common right, is bound to provide a pair of stocks. (2 Haw. c. 11, s. 5; Kitch. 13. See "Fleet," Vol. III.)

They ought to be provided at the charge of the town; for, originally, they were not to punish, but to keep men in hold. (1 Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 1.)

And the constable, by the common law, may confine offenders in the stocks by way of security, but not by way of punishment.

But, by divers statutes, the stocks are also appointed for the punishment of offenders, in sundry cases, after conviction.

Stock in the Funds and of Companies'.

If persons conspire to fabricate shares in addition to the limited number of shares of which a joint-stock company (according to its rules) consists, they may be indicted for it, notwithstanding any imperfection in the original conformation of the company. (R. v. Mott, 1 Carr. & P. 521.)

AS to the Damaging of Stocking-frames, &c., see 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 3, "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. III. p. 837.

By the 28 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 1, if any framework-knitter, who shall rent or take by the hire any stocking-frame, either with or without any machine or engine thereto annexed, or therewith to be employed, shall refuse to yield up and re-deliver the same, with the machine or frame, to the person of whom he shall so rent it, after fourteen days' previous notice, he shall, on conviction by the oath or solemn affirmation of the owner or employer of such frame, or of any other witness, before one justice where the offence is committed, or where the person so charged shall inhabit, for every such offence forfeit 20s. to the poor; and, if not immediately paid, and such frame, &c., delivered up to the owner within six days after conviction, such justice shall commit such offender to goal, or other public prison, to hard labour, for any time not exceeding three nor less than one calendar month.

Framework-knitters hiring frames, and refusing to return them on notice.

Sects. 2 and 3. If any person so renting or taking to hire any stocking-frame, with or without such machine, as aforesaid, shall sell or unlawfully dispose thereof, or the machine, &c., therewith let, without the consent of the owner; or shall wilfully and knowingly receive or purchase any such, so sold or unlawfully disposed of, as aforesaid, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, every such offender, being convicted upon indictment, shall suffer solitary imprisonment in the gaol or house of correction for not less than three nor exceeding twelve calendar months.

Persons so hiring frames, and selling them.

such wicked offenders, and to his majesty's and the kingdom's great damage: for preventing such embezzlements for the future, and for the more effectual execution of the laws and statutes already in force against such embezzlements and thefts," it is enacted, "that it shall not be lawful to or for any person or persons whatsoever, other than persons authorized by contracting with his majesty's principal officers or commissioners of the navy, ordnance, or victualling-office, for his majesty's use, to make any stores of war or naval stores whatsoever, with the marks usually used to and marked upon his majesty's said warlike and naval or ordnance stores; that is to say, any cordage of three inches and upwards, wrought with a white thread laid the contrary way, or any smaller cordage, to wit, from three inches downwards, with a twine in lieu of a white thread, laid to the contrary way as aforesaid (a), or any canvass wrought or unwrought, with a blue streak in the middle, or any other stores with the broad arrow, by stamp, brand, or otherwise, upon pain that every such person or persons, who shall make such goods so marked as aforesaid, not being a contractor with his majesty's principal officers or commissioners of the navy, ordnance, or victuallers, for his majesty's use, or employed by such contractor, for that purpose as aforesaid, shall, for every such offence, forfeit such goods, and the sum of 200*l.*, together with costs of suit; one moiety whereof shall be to his majesty, and the other moiety to the informer, to be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, wherein no essoin, privilege, protection, wager of law, injunction, or order of restraint, nor more than one imparlance, shall be allowed."

Sect. 2. "Such person or persons, in whose custody, possession, or keeping, such goods or stores marked as aforesaid shall be found, not being employed as aforesaid, and such person or persons who shall conceal such goods or stores marked as aforesaid, being indicted and convicted of such concealment, or of the having such goods found in his custody, possession, or keeping, shall forfeit such goods, and the sum of 200*l.*, together with the costs of prosecution, one moiety to his majesty, and the other moiety to the informer, to be recovered as aforesaid, and shall also suffer imprisonment until payment and performance of the said forfeiture, unless such person shall, upon his trial, produce a certificate under the hand of three or more of his majesty's principal officers or commissioners of the navy, ordnance, or victuallers, expressing the numbers, quantities, or weights of such goods, as he or she shall then be indicted for, and the occasion and reason of such goods coming to his or her hands or possession" (b).

Sect. 4. "The said principal officers or commissioners of the navy, ordnance, or victualling-office for the time being, may sell and dispose of any of the stores aforesaid, so marked as aforesaid, as they did or might have done before the making of this act; and that such person or persons as heretofore have or shall hereafter buy any such stores, or other stores so marked as aforesaid, of the said principal officers or commanders, or by their order, may keep and enjoy the same without incurring the penalty of this act, or any law to the contrary whatsoever, upon producing a certificate or certificates under the hand and seal of three or more of the said principal officers or commissioners of the navy, ordnance, or victualling-office, that they bought such goods from them the said principal officers or commissioners, or from such person or persons as did buy the said stores from the said principal officers or commissioners, at any time before such stores were found in their custody; in which certificate or certificates the quantities of such stores shall be expressed, and the time when and where bought of the said commissioners, who, or any three or more of them, for the time being, are 9 & 10 W. 3, c. 41.

Sect. 5. "In case any person or persons shall be sued or prosecuted for or by reason of their discovering or seizing any such stores or goods so marked as aforesaid, that in every such case, such persons so sued or prosecuted, may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence. And in case, that upon the trial of such issue, the defendants so sued shall make proof, that such goods or stores, so discovered or seized by them, were so marked as aforesaid, and that the plaintiffs or prosecutors in such suit or prosecution shall not at such trial make good proof that they were so employed, or had such certificate as aforesaid, before such discovery and seizure made, and that they did show the same unto such defendants before such suit or prosecution commenced or brought, such defendant shall be acquitted and found not guilty thereupon; unless such defendants, upon sight of such certificate, did not deliver back unto such plaintiffs or prosecutors, at their request, or otherwise, all such goods and stores so seized, in as good plight and condition as they were at the time of such certificate shown; and in case any such defendants shall be so or otherwise acquitted on such trial, and that such plaintiffs or prosecutors shall discontinue such their suit or prosecution, or be nonsuited therein, such defendants shall recover treble costs." Persons sued may plead the general issue, &c.

Evidence.

The presumption of the malus animus, arising from the bare fact of possession of the goods, may, of course, be rebutted by circumstances. (2 E. P. C. 765; Coll. Statutes, 112, note; post, p. 880, 881.)

By the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 25, s. 3, any of the principal officers or commissioners of the navy may issue warrants to search for naval stores, as justices may in cases of felony, and punish the offenders by fine not exceeding 20s., or imprisonment not exceeding one week, the value of the goods not exceeding 20s.; and if the offence requires a higher punishment, may commit him to the next gaol or to the custody of their messenger, till he finds surety or sureties to appear in the Exchequer, or other court, where the king shall question him for the same within one year, on process duly served for that purpose on such offender. 1 Geo. I, st. 2. c. 25.
Summary jurisdiction in cases of small embezzlements, &c.

Sect. 6. And every person who shall counterfeit the hand of the treasurer, controller, surveyor, clerk of the acts, or of any commissioner of the navy, or the hand of the signing or vouching officer of his majesty's navy, ships, or yards, to any bill, ticket, or papers, by virtue whereof his majesty's naval treasure may be disposed of, or knowingly produce the same, he may be committed to prison by the said officers and commissioners, or any of them, until he find surety to appear at the next assizes or quarter sessions, to be there proceeded against according to law. Counterfeiting the hand of the treasurer, &c.

By the 9 Geo. I. c. 8, s. 3, reciting that, by the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41, "a penalty of 200*l.*, with costs of prosecution and pain of imprisonment, is inflicted upon persons having in their custody, possession, or keeping, or concealing, contrary to the said act, any warlike, naval, or ordnance stores therein mentioned, or any other stores marked with the broad arrow, by stamp, brand, or otherwise: and whereas it is necessary to give power to mitigate the said penalties, and to explain and amend the said act," it is enacted, "that if any person or persons shall be lawfully convicted of having in his, her, or their custody, any timber, thick stuff, or plank, marked with the broad arrow, by stamp, brand, or otherwise, or of concealing any timber, thick stuff, or plank, so marked, every such person so offending shall suffer, forfeit, and pay, as for having, keeping, or concealing any other warlike, naval, or ordnance stores contrary to the said act." 9 Geo. I, c. 8, having marked timber, altering 9 & 10 Wil. 3, c. 41.

Sect. 4. "It shall and may be lawful to and for any judge, justice, or justices, before whom any offender or offenders shall be convicted of any of the crimes before recited, enacted, or mentioned in this act, to mitigate the penalty for the same, as he or they shall see cause, and to commit the Mitigation of penalties in last act.

offender or offenders so convicted to the common gaol of the county or place where the offence shall be committed, there to remain without bail or mainprize, until payment be made of the penalty and forfeiture imposed by this or the said former act, or mitigated as aforesaid, or to punish such offender or offenders corporally, by causing him, her, or them to be publicly whipped, or (a) committed to some public workhouse, there to be kept to hard labour, for the space of six months, or a less time, as to such judge, justice, or justices, in his or their discretion shall seem meet; anything in the said recited act or in any other act to the contrary notwithstanding."

17 Geo. 2, c. 40.

And the 17 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 10, also reciting, that "some doubts having arisen touching the method of trial and punishment of offenders against the said recited acts, whether, as the said acts are worded, such offender or offenders may be indicted and tried for the crimes and offences in the said acts mentioned, and whether any judge, justice, or justices of assize, or justices of the peace at the sessions, may hear, try, and determine the same, and on conviction set such fine, or mitigate the same, and the forfeitures and penalties inflicted by the aforesaid acts, on such offender or offenders, as the nature of the offences may deserve; or whether such offenders as aforesaid, in order for recovering the said forfeitures and penalties inflicted by the said act, can only be proceeded against by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in some of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster; by reason of which doubts, it has so happened, that offenders against the said recited acts, having been indicted for the same, have escaped unpunished, to the great encouragement of such offenders and others to commit the like crimes and offences for the future; for the remedying whereof, and for the explaining the acts above mentioned," declares and enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for any judge, justice, or justices at the assizes, or justices of the peace at the general quarter sessions to be holden for any county, city, borough, or town corporate, to hear, try, and determine, by indictment or otherwise, all or any the crimes or offences mentioned in the said recited acts; and that the said judge, justice, or justices of assize, or justices of the peace, as aforesaid, before whom such offender or offenders shall be indicted, or tried, and convicted of all or any the crimes or offences in the said recited acts mentioned, may impose any fine, not exceeding the sum of 200*l.*, on such offender or offenders; one moiety to be paid to his majesty, and the other moiety to the informer; and may mitigate the said penalty and forfeitures, inflicted by the said recited acts, or either of them, and to commit the offender or offenders so convicted and fined to the common gaol of the county or place where the offence shall be committed; there to remain without bail or mainprize, until payment be made of the penalty and forfeitures imposed by this or the said former acts, so mitigated as aforesaid; or, in lieu thereof, to punish such offender or offenders in the premises corporally, by causing him, her, or them to be publicly whipped, and committed to some house of correction, or public workhouse, there to be kept to hard labour for the space of three months, or less time, as to such judge, justice, or justices of assize, or justices of the peace, shall in his or their discretion seem meet; anything in the said recited acts or in any other act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Decisions thereon.

Under this act the court have authority to adjudge the offender to suffer corporal punishment, although he be ready and offer to pay the penalty of 200*l.* (Bland's case, 2 E. P. C. 760; 5 T. R. 370, S. C.) In this case the defendant's counsel contended that, as their client could pay the penalty, the court had no authority to inflict corporal punishment. But the court said that the words of the statutes were in the disjunctive, enabling them either to impose a penalty, or to punish the offender corporally; and that this construction had already been put on the statutes in several instances,

(a) It is to be observed, that in this stat. 9 Geo. I. c. 8, s. 4, it is or committed. In the 17 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 10, it is and committed.

particularly in the case of R. v. Newell, M. 33 G. 3. And this appearing to the court to be a gross case, they sentenced the defendant to Clerkenwell Prison for three months, there to be kept to hard labour, and during that time to be publicly whipped on Clerkenwell Green for the space of 100 yards.

Though there was no instance prior to Trinity term, 46 Geo. III., in which the defendant had been ordered to pay the costs, the Court of King's Bench adjudged the defendant (A. Chapple) to pay the penalty of 200*l.*, together with the costs. (5 T. R. 371, note (a)).

The power of sentencing to hard labour is considered to be taken away by the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 89, s. 2, post, 882. (R. v. Bridges, 8 East, 53.) The defendant was brought up to receive judgment after conviction on the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41, s. 2, for unlawfully having in his possession naval stores, &c., and judgment was about to be pronounced that he should be imprisoned in the house of correction for the county of Surrey, and there kept to hard labour for three calendar months, and once during that time publicly whipped. This would have been warranted by the 17 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 10, reciting the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41, and 9 Geo. I. c. 8; but a doubt occurring how far the power of sentencing to hard labour was taken away by the subsequent stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 89, s. 2, the court, upon further consideration and comparing the different provisions of these statutes, were of opinion that the power of sentencing to hard labour was taken away by the latter statute, and therefore pronounced judgment that the defendant should be imprisoned in the house of correction for the county of Surrey for three calendar months, and be once during that time publicly whipped.

By the 9 Geo. III. c. 30, s. 5, the treasurer, controller, surveyor, clerk of the acts, or any commissioner of the navy, may act as justices, in causing the offenders to be apprehended, committed, and prosecuted for the same.

By the 12 Geo. III. c. 24, if any person shall, either in this realm, or in any other place thereto belonging, wilfully and maliciously set on fire, burn, or otherwise destroy, or cause or aid therein, any of his majesty's military, naval, or victualling stores or other ammunition of war, or any place where any such stores or ammunition shall be placed or kept, he, his aiders and abettors, shall be guilty of felony. And they who commit such offence out of the realm may be tried either where the offence was committed, or in any county within this realm. (2 East's P. C. 1094. See this enactment in full, ante, p. 651.)

The 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 89, recites the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41; 9 Geo. I. c. 8; and 17 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 10; and reciting, that "notwithstanding the penalties and punishments inflicted by the said recited acts, the stealers, embezzlers, and receivers of his majesty's warlike, and naval, ordnance, and victualling stores have greatly increased, so that it has become necessary to make some further and more effectual provision for preventing their wicked practices in future," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, every person or persons (such person or persons not being a contractor or contractors, or employed as in the said recited act of the 9th and 10th years of the reign of King William the Third is mentioned,) who shall willingly or knowingly sell or deliver, or cause or procure to be sold or delivered, to any person or persons whomsoever, or who shall willingly or knowingly receive, or have in his, her, or their custody, possession, or keeping, any stores of war, or naval, ordnance, or victualling stores, or any goods whatsoever marked as in the said recited acts are expressed, or any canvass marked either with a blue streak in the middle, or with a blue streak in a serpentine form, or any bewper, otherwise called bunting, wrought with one or more streaks of raised tape (the said stores of war, or naval, ordnance, or victualling stores or goods above mentioned, or any of them, being in a raw or unconverted state, or being new, or not more than one-third worn), and such person or persons who shall conceal such stores or goods, or any of them, marked as aforesaid, shall be deemed receivers of stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen, and shall, on being convicted thereof in due form

c. 89.

Persons in whose custody shall be found canvass or bunting, marked as herein mentioned (not being charged to be new, or not more than one-third worn), and persons who shall be convicted of any offence contrary to so much of the recited act of 9 & 10 Wil. 3, as relates to warlike stores, shall, besides the forfeiture thereby imposed, suffer corporal punishment. Penalty, 200*l.*, may be mitigated.

Nothing herein, or in recited act of 9 & 10 Wil. 3, shall exempt contractors, &c., except so far as concerns stores which shall not have been before delivered into his majesty's store, unless they have been sold, or returned by the commissioners.

of law, be transported beyond the seas for the term of fourteen years, in like manner as other receivers of stolen goods are directed to be transported by the laws and statutes of this realm, unless such person or persons shall, upon his, her, or their trial, produce a certificate under the hands of three or more of his majesty's principal officers or commissioners of the navy, ordnance, or victualling, expressing the numbers, quantities, or weights of such stores or goods, as he, she, or they shall then be indicted for, and the occasion and reason of such stores or goods coming to his, her, or their hands or possession."

Sect. 2. "Such person or persons (not being a contractor or contractors, or employed as aforesaid), in whose custody, possession, or keeping, any of the said stores called canvass, marked with a blue streak in a serpentine form, or bewper, otherwise called bunting, wrought as above mentioned, shall be found (such canvass or bewper, otherwise called bunting, not being charged to be new, or not more than one-third worn), and all and every person and persons who shall be convicted of any offence contrary to so much of the said recited act of the 9th and 10th years of the reign of King William the Third, as relates to the making, or having in possession, or concealing any of his majesty's warlike, or naval, or ordnance stores, marked as therein specified, shall, besides forfeiting such stores, and the sum of 200*l.*, together with costs of suit as therein mentioned, be corporally punished by pillory (a), whipping, and imprisonment, or by any or either of the said ways and means, in such manner and for such space of time as to the judge or justices before whom such offender or offenders shall be convicted, shall seem meet; anything in the said last-mentioned act, or in the before-recited acts of the 9th year of King George the First, and the 17th year of King George the Second, to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding; provided always, that it shall and may be lawful to and for such judge or justices to mitigate the said penalty of 200*l.*, as he or they shall see cause."

Sect. 3. "Nothing in this act, or in the said recited act of the 9th and 10th years of the reign of King William the Third, contained, shall extend, or be deemed, taken, or construed to extend to exempt from the operation of this act, or the said recited act respectively, any person or persons being a contractor or contractors, or employed as in the said last-mentioned act is mentioned, except only so far as concerns stores or goods marked as aforesaid, which shall be bonâ fide provided, made up, or manufactured by such person or persons, or by their order, and which shall not have been before delivered into his majesty's store, unless, having been so delivered, they shall have been sold or returned to such person or persons by the commissioners of his majesty's navy, ordnance, or victualling respectively."

Sect. 4. "If any person or persons shall, from and after the passing of this act, wilfully and fraudulently destroy, beat out, take out, cut out, deface, obliterate or erase, wholly or in part, any of the marks in the said act of the 9th and 10th years of the reign of King William the Third, or in this act mentioned, or any other mark whatsoever, denoting the property of his majesty, his heirs or successors, in or to any warlike, or naval, ordnance, or victualling stores, or cause, procure, employ, or direct any other person or persons so to do, for the purpose of concealing his majesty's property in such stores, such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of felony, and shall, on being convicted thereof, be transported to parts beyond the seas for the term of fourteen years, in like manner as other felons are directed to be transported by the laws and statutes of this realm."

Sect. 5. "If any person or persons who shall hereafter be convicted of any offence contrary to this act, for which he shall not have been transported beyond the seas, or contrary to the said recited act of the 9th and 10th years of King William the Third, shall be guilty of a second offence, either contrary to that act or to this present act, which would not otherwise, as the first offence, subject him, her, or them to transportation, and shall be thereof

Sect. 6. “If any person or persons transported in pursuance of this act, shall return into any part of Great Britain or Ireland before the end or expiration of the term for which he or she shall have been so transported, every such person or persons so returning shall suffer as felons, and shall have execution awarded against him, her, or them, as persons attainted of felony without benefit of clergy.”

Returning from transportation.

Sect. 7. “It shall and may be lawful to and for the court before whom any offender or offenders shall be indicted and convicted of all or any of the crimes or offences hereinbefore mentioned to be punishable with transportation, to mitigate or commute such punishment, by causing the offender or offenders to be set on the pillory (a), publicly whipped, fined, or imprisoned, or by all or any one or more of the said ways and means, as such court in its discretion shall think fit; one moiety of which fine (if any imposed) shall be to his majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety thereof to the informer, and also to order such offender or offenders to be imprisoned until such fine be paid; anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.”

Mitigation of punishment.

Sects. 8, 9, and 10 give rewards for apprehending offenders. But by 2 Wil. IV. c. 40, s. 34, these rewards are reduced, and instead thereof the following rewards shall be paid, that is to say, “any sum not exceeding 10*l.* upon convictions in prosecutions by indictment, and not exceeding 50*s.* upon summary convictions, in the respective cases mentioned in the said act; and that no reward shall be payable in cases where the fine inflicted on the offender shall amount to 20*l.*, unless such fine shall fail to be paid as provided in the said act; and that it shall be lawful to mitigate the pecuniary penalty of 10*l.*, in cases of summary convictions, to any sum not less than 40*s.*”

Not to prevent offenders being prosecuted as receivers of stolen goods.

Sect. 25. "The said commissioners of the navy, ordnance, or victualling for the time being, may sell and dispose of any of the stores aforesaid so marked as aforesaid, as they did or might have done before the making of this act: and that such person or persons as heretofore have or shall hereafter buy any such stores or other stores so marked as aforesaid, of the said respective commissioners, may keep and enjoy the same without incurring the penalty of this act, or any law to the contrary whatsoever, upon producing a certificate or certificates, under the hand and seal of three or more of the said commissioners, that they bought such goods or stores from them at any time before they sold or delivered the same, or before the same were found in their custody, or a certificate from such person or persons as shall appear to have bought the said stores from them the said commissioners, that the stores so sold or delivered by them, or so found in their custody, were the stores or part of the stores so bought of the said commissioners as aforesaid; in which certificate or certificates, the quantities of such stores shall be expressed, and the time when and where bought of the said commissioners, who, or any three or more of them for the time being, and also the person or persons afterwards selling the same, are hereby empowered and directed from time to time to give such certificate to such person or persons as shall desire the same, and have bought and shall hereafter buy any of the aforesaid stores, within thirty days after the sale and delivery thereof."

Sale by commissioners.

Sect. 26. "If any person or persons shall make, sign, or give any false certificate, bill of parcels, or other instrument, purporting the identity or the sale or disposal of any goods or stores as goods or stores so purchased of the said commissioners as aforesaid, or if any person or persons shall utter or publish any such false certificate, bill of parcels, or other instrument purporting as aforesaid, knowing the same to be false, every such offender, upon conviction thereof in due form of law, shall forfeit the sum of 200*l.*, and be further corporally punished, as by this act is directed with respect to persons having in their possession or concealing his majesty's warlike, naval, or ordnance stores, contrary to the said act of the ninth and tenth years of King William the Third; one moiety of which penalty shall be to his majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety thereof, with full costs of suit, to the informer, to be recovered in such manner as the penalty of 200*l.*, inflicted by the said last-mentioned act, is by that act or any law now in force made recoverable."

Sect. 36. "If any person, upon examination upon oath or affirmation before any commissioner of the navy, ordnance, or victualling respectively, or before any justice of the peace in Great Britain, in any matter relating to the execution of this act, shall wilfully and corruptly give false evidence, or shall, in any information or deposition sworn, or affirmation taken in writing before any such commissioner or justice, wilfully and corruptly swear or affirm any matter or thing which shall be false or untrue, every such person so offending, and being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be and is hereby declared to be subject and liable to the like pains and penalties as any persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are by any law now in force subjected and liable to."

By the 49 Geo. III. c. 122, s. 17, "all persons who shall trade or deal in buying and selling anchors, cables, sails, or old junk, old iron, or marine stores of any kind or description, shall have their names with the words 'dealer in marine stores,' painted distinctly in letters of not less than six inches in length upon the front of all their storehouses, warehouses, and other deposits for such goods; and in default of their so doing, they shall, on conviction before any justice or justices of the peace, or magistrate or magistrates of any jurisdiction where such storehouse, warehouse, and depot shall be, upon the oath of one credible witness, or on confession of the party offending, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 20*l*., nor less than 10*l*., one half of which penalty shall be paid to the informer, and the other half to the poor of the parish or township where such offence shall be committed; and that it shall not be lawful for such dealers or traders to cut up any cable, or any part of a cable, exceeding five fathoms in length; or uncant, untwine, or unlay the same into junk or paper-stuff, on any pretence whatsoever, without first obtaining a permit from some justice of the peace or magistrate residing near to the residence of such dealer, which permit shall not be granted unless an affidavit shall have been made that the cable so intended to be cut up had been bonâ fide purchased, and without fraud, by the party so intending to cut up the same, and without any knowledge or suspicion on his or her part that the same had been

Sect. 18. "For the more effectual prevention of such frauds, all dealers in such marine stores as aforesaid shall keep a book or books fairly written, in which entries shall be from time to time regularly made of all such old marine stores as shall be by them from time to time bought, containing a true account and description of the times when the same were so respectively bought by them, and of the names and places of abode of the respective sellers thereof: and before any person who shall obtain such permit for the cutting up of any such cable (as hereinbefore required to be obtained) shall proceed to cut up the same by virtue thereof, there shall be published by the space of one week at least before the cutting up the same, one or more advertisement or advertisements in some public newspaper, printed nearest to the storehouse, warehouse, or depot where the articles shall be deposited, notifying that such party had obtained such permit for the purpose of cutting up such cable, and of such kind and quality as therein described, and also specifying the place where such articles shall be deposited; whereupon it shall be lawful for all and every person or persons who may have just cause to suspect that such articles are the property of such person or persons, and shall have verified upon oath the fact of such his, her, or their suspicion before any justice of the peace or magistrate residing near to the said storehouse, warehouse, or depot, by warrant for that purpose thereupon granted, to require of and from such dealer who shall have so advertised, and shall be sworn to be suspected as aforesaid, the production and examination of the book or books of entries hereby required by him or her to be kept, and inspect and examine the cables described in such permit; and in case any such dealer, when so thereunto required as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to produce to the person named in such warrant as the person on whose oath the same shall have been obtained, the book or books containing the entries of such dealer so required to be made therein as aforesaid, or shall neglect to keep any such book or books in which entries containing accounts of the several particulars hereinbefore required to be entered shall be made, or to permit such inspection or examination as aforesaid, or shall, after obtaining such permit for the cutting up of any such cable, and before the cutting up of the same, neglect to publish such one or more advertisement or advertisements relative thereto as is hereinbefore directed and required, the dealer or dealers so offending in all or any of the particulars hereinbefore mentioned shall forfeit and pay for every such offence, being his, her, or their first offence, any sum not exceeding 20*l.* nor less than 10*l.*, and for every second or third offence any sum not exceeding 50*l.* nor less than 20*l.*, one half of which penalty shall, on conviction before any justice of the peace or magistrate residing near as aforesaid, be paid to the informer, and the other half to the poor of the parish or township in which such offences shall be committed; and in case any of the penalties by this act imposed shall not be paid, with the charges incident to the conviction, immediately upon such conviction, the same shall and may be levied by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice of the peace or magistrate, upon the goods and chattels of any such offender or offenders; and in case no sufficient distress shall be found, then every such offender or offenders shall and may be committed by any such justice of the peace or magistrate as aforesaid, to gaol, in case of any first offence, for the space of six calendar months, and in case of any second or further offence, for the space of twelve calendar months, unless the said penalty and the charges shall be sooner paid."

Persons prohibited from sweeping harbours for lost stores.

By the 54 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 10, all persons, except such as are duly licensed thereto by a commissioner of his majesty's navy, are prohibited from creeping or sweeping for anchors, cables, ropes, rope-yarns, or other stores, lost, or supposed to be lost, in harbours, &c., within certain prescribed limits, under a penalty of 10*l*.

The 55 Geo. III. c. 127, recites the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41; 9 Geo. I. c. 8; 17 Geo. II. c. 40; 40 Geo. III. c. 89; 52 Geo. III. c. 12; 53 Geo. 55 Geo. 3, c. 127.

By the 56 Geo. III. c. 80, "from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every, or any one of the principal officers and commissioners of his majesty's navy, resident on any foreign station, to grant certificates under his or their respective hand or hands, for any such stores or goods which shall hereafter be sold by, or by the order of any such principal officer or commissioner, at any such foreign station, of such and the same, or the like tenor and effect, and that the same certificates so to be granted as aforesaid shall be in all places of such and the same force and effect as certificates under the hands of three or more of the principal officers and commissioners of the navy in England are of, for any such stores or goods sold by or by the order of the said commissioners in England."

56 Geo. 3, c. 80. Principal officers and commissioners of the navy at foreign stations may grant certificates of stores sold by them.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 53, it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, every person who shall be lawfully convicted of stealing or embezzling his majesty's ammunition, sails, cordage, or naval or military stores, or of procuring, counselling, aiding, or abetting any such offender, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding seven years." The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, s. 1, repeals the 31 Eliz. c. 4, and 22 Car. II. c. 5. It also repeals the 4 Geo. IV. c. 53, "except so far as relates to any person convicted of stealing or embezzling his majesty's ammunition or ordnance, naval and military stores, or of being accessory to any such offence." See the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 25, s. 3, ante, p. 879, as to summary punishment.

Decisions on statutes.

Embezzle, &c., to the Value of 20s.]—Though the statute 31 Eliz. c. 4, only spoke of embezzling or stealing stores to the value of 20s., still any of the officers who had a bare charge of the stores in the king's warehouses, or a mere authority to deliver them out, may be guilty of felony at common law in stealing them, to any amount, from such places of deposit. Accordingly, in Thorne's case, 2 East's P. C. 622, where it appeared that the prisoner was foreman of one of the storehouses in Plymouth Dock, containing naval stores, and had given security in 200*l.* for the faithful discharge of his duty, and was intrusted with the receiving and delivering out again of the stores in the absence of the clerk whose proper duty it was, when present; and that certain kersey was cut off by him from a bale in the stores, and delivered by him to an accomplice to be taken out of the yard, though the value were under 20s., he was, by the direction of the court, convicted of larceny at common law in stealing the kersey.

Embezzlement, what.

Receive or have in his possession]—Under the statutes for protecting the king's stores, the king's mark denotes the original ownership; and there the onus probandi lies on the party to account satisfactorily for his possession, according to the regulations prescribed; otherwise the bare fact of possession

What a receiving or having in possession.

*Stores, Naval

concludes him. But even here the presumption of the malus animus arising from the bare fact of possession may be rebutted by circumstances, as in the following case:—A widow woman was indicted before Mr. Justice Foster, upon the western circuit, on the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41, for having in her custody divers pieces of canvass, marked with the king's mark, in the manner described in the act, she not being a person employed by the commissioners of the navy to make the same for the king's use. The canvass was marked as charged in the indictment, and was clearly proved to be such as was made for the use of the navy, and to have been found in the defendant's custody. The defendant did not attempt to show that she was within any exception of the act, as being a person employed to make canvass for the use of the navy; nor did she offer to produce any certificate from any officer of the crown, touching the occasion and reason of such canvass coming into her possession. Her defence was, that when there happened to be in his majesty's stores a considerable quantity of old sails, no longer fit for that use, it had been customary for the persons intrusted with the stores to make a public sale of them in lots, larger or smaller, as best suited the purpose of the buyers; and that the canvass produced in evidence, which happened to have been made up long since, some for table-linen and some for sheeting, had been in common use in the defendant's family a considerable time before her husband's death; and, upon his death, came to the defendant, and had been used in the same public manner by her to the time of the prosecution. This was proved by some of the family, and by the woman who had frequently washed the linen. This sort of evidence was strongly opposed by the counsel for the crown, who insisted that, as the act allows of but one excuse, the defendant, unless she could avail herself of that, could not resort to any other; that, if the canvass were really bought of the commissioners, or of persons acting under them, there ought to have been a certificate taken at the time of the purchase, and the second section admits of no other excuse. But the judge was of opinion, that though the clause of the statute, which directs the sale of these things, had not pointed out any other way for indemnifying the buyer than the certificate, and though the second section seemed to exclude any other excuse for those in whose custody they should be found, yet still the circumstances attending every case which might seem to fall within the act ought to be taken into consideration; otherwise, a law calculated for wise purposes might, by too rigid a construction of it, be made a handle for oppression. There was no room to say that this canvass came into the possession of the defendant by any act of her own: it was brought into family use in the lifetime of her husband, and it continued so to the time of his death; and by act of law it came to her. Things of that kind had been frequently exposed to public sale; and, though the act pointed out an expedient for the indemnity of the buyers, yet, probably, few buyers, especially where small quantities had been purchased at one sale, had used the caution suggested to them by the act. And if the defendant's husband really bought the linen at a public sale, but neglected to take a certificate, or did not preserve it, it would be contrary to natural justice, after such a length of time, to punish her for his neglect. He therefore thought the evidence given by the defendant proper to be left to the jury; and directed them, that if, upon the whole evidence, they were of opinion that the defendant came to the possession of the linen without any fraud or misbehaviour on her part, they should acquit her; and she was accordingly acquitted. (Fost. App. 439, edit. of 1792; 2 East's P. C. 765.)

Difference between receiving and having in possession.

An indictment, Winchester, March, 1801, cor. Le Blanc, J., 2 East's P. C. 767, charged that Thomas Cole, on the 28th January, 1801, unlawfully, willingly, and knowingly did receive and have in his custody, possession, and keeping, certain naval stores of the king, being all marked with the broad arrow, he not being a contractor, &c., against the statute, &c. The jury found the prisoner guilty; but said they did not find that he received the stores after the 28th July, 1800, but only that he had them in his possession after that day. Judgment was thereupon respited to take the opinion of the judges, a majority of whom inclined to think that the statute was to be construed in the disjunctive, and the word or (receive or have) not to be taken as and; but, because of the disagreement of some, and that the case was not likely to occur again, the prisoner, on the finding of the jury, was recommended to mercy. It seemed, however, to be agreed, that the case was not within the 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41, because the goods were not charged to have been found in the prisoner's possession.

A defendant against whom the possession of stores is proved may discharge himself by other evidence than that of a navy-board certificate; as will appear from the case of R. v. Banks, 1 Esp. 144, wherein Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, that though in prosecutions under the statutes 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 41, and 17 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 10, it was sufficient for the crown to prove the finding of the stores with the king's mark in the defendant's possession, to call upon him to account for that possession and the manner of his coming by them, so as to throw the onus upon the defendant, of proving that he had legally become possessed of them; yet, that the defendant had other means of showing that he had lawfully become possessed of them than by the production of the certificate from the navy board; as, for example, he might show that he had bought them from another person who was in the practice of buying stores at the navy sale; and who, therefore, might fairly be presumed to have had the regular certificate, but who, when he sold part to the defendant, could not, consistently with his own safety, part with the certificate he had obtained, of his having been the purchaser of the whole lot.

Summons.

IN all legal proceedings, the person complained of ought to have notice of the charge laid against him, and to have an opportunity of being heard in his own defence, and there is no case of a judicial proceeding by which a man is to be deprived of any part of his property, without his having an opportunity of being heard. (See per Bayley, Capel v. Child, 2 C. & J. 579; R. v. Benn, 6 T. R. 198; R. v. Justices of Stafford, 5 Nev. & M. 94; 1 H. & W. 328; Painter v. Liverpool Gas Company, 6 Nev. & M.; 3 Adol. & Ell. 433.) Consequently, where a person is accused before the justices, they ought to summon the party to appear, or issue their warrant to bring him before them. The manner of conveying the parties is sometimes directed by the acts of parliament creating the respective offences, which, therefore, ought to be pursued accordingly. In other cases, where it is left discretionary in the justices, it seemeth most agreeable to the mildness of our laws to put the party to no more inconvenience than needs must; and therefore, where the case will bear it, a summons seems more apposite than a compulsory process.

But, in cases of sureties of the peace, petty larcenies, and other felonies, and generally where the king is a party, and also in cases between party and party, where the body of the offender is liable, a warrant is the regular process, and not a summons.

In some cases, a party may be apprehended without either a summons or warrant. See "Arrest," Vol. I.

Surety of the Peace.

Surety of the peace.

OUT of the Latin word pax, the Normans formed their paix, and we (out of that) our peace. (Lamb. 5.)

Surety of the Peace is the acknowledging of a recognizance or bond to the king, taken by a competent judge of record, for keeping the peace. (Dalt. c. 116.)

Who may take it.

And this surety of the peace every justice of the peace may take and command by a twofold authority: 1. As a minister, commanded thereto by a higher authority; as, when a writ of supplicavit directed out of the Chancery or King's Bench is delivered to him. 2. As a judge, and by virtue of his office, derived from his commission. (Dalt. c. 116.) And, by the first clause of the commission, justices in session may take surety for the peace.

By the commission of the peace, justices of peace have power to cause to come before them, or any one of them, all these who, to any of the king's people, concerning their bodies, or the firing of their houses, have used threats, to find sufficient security for the peace, or their good behaviour towards the king and his people; and, if they shall refuse to find such security, to cause them in the king's prisons to be safely kept, until they shall find such security. See the form of the commission, Vol. III. p. 449.

For what cause to be granted.

Upon which Mr. Hawkins observes, that it seemeth clear that, wherever a person has just cause to fear that another will burn his house, or do him a corporal hurt,—as, by killing or beating him, or that he will procure others to do him such mischief, he may demand the surety of the peace against such person; and that every justice of the peace is bound to grant it, upon the party's giving him satisfaction upon oath that he is actually under such fear, and that he has just cause to be so, by reason of the other's having threatened to beat him, or laid in wait for that purpose; and that he doth not require it out of malice or for vexation. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 6; see Butt v. Conant, 1 B. & B. 548; 4 Moore, 195, the case a libel.)

Fear of corporal hurt, or burning his house.

Also, it seems the better opinion, that he who is threatened to be imprisoned by another has a right to demand the surety of the peace: for every unlawful imprisonment is an assault and wrong to the person of a man. And the objection that one wrongfully imprisoned may recover damages in an action, and therefore needs not the surety of the peace, is as strong in the case of battery as imprisonment; and yet there is no doubt but that one threatened to be beaten may demand the surety of the peace. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 7.)

Being threatened with imprisonment.

But, if the justice shall perceive that surety is demanded merely of malice, or for vexation only, without any just cause or fear, it seemeth he may safely deny it. (Dalt. c. 116.)

Where demanded through malice or vexation.

Implied malice is no ground for granting the sureties: direct malice must be shown from particular facts.

Also, if a man will require the peace, because he is at variance or in suit with his neighbour, it shall not be granted. (Dalt. c. 116.)

Also, Mr. Lambard says, he takes it to be somewhat clear that a justice may not by the commission award a precept of the peace in behalf of a man that will require it, because he feared that he will do harm to his servants or cattle. (Lamb. 83.)

Fear of harm to his servants or cattle.

And Mr. Dalton says, where a man is in fear that another will hurt his servants, or his cattle, or other goods, this surety of the peace shall not be granted by the justice. But, in this case, Fitzherbert saith, the party may have a special writ out of the Chancery directed to the sheriff, that he shall cause such person to find surety that he shall do no hurt or damage to the other man in his body, or to his servants or goods; and, if he will not find surety, that then he shall arrest and detain him in prison until he shall find surety. (Dalt. c. 116.)

The reason why a man may not have sureties of the peace against another, for that he feareth he will do harm to his servants, seemeth to be, because it should be the servant's fear in such case, and not the master's; and the servant's own oath before the justice is necessary. And as to his goods, it seemeth clear that no sureties of the peace ought to be granted in that case: for the recognizance of the peace, when taken, is only that the party shall keep the peace towards the king and all his liege people.

But Mr. Dalton says, that if a man shall threaten to hurt his wife or child, he thinks he may crave the peace at the justice's hands, by the words of the commission, and that the justice ought to grant it. (Dalt. c. 116.)

Threatening a man's wife or child.

Note, also, the surety of the peace shall not be granted but where there is a fear of some present or future danger, and not merely for a battery or trespass that is past, or for any breach of the peace that is past; for this Must be a fear of present or future danger.

3. Against whom granted.

K. B. will not interfere with decision of magistrate.

surety of the peace is only for the security of such as are in fear; but the party wronged may punish the offender by indictment, and the justice, if he see cause, may bind over the affrayer. (Dalt. c. 11.) That is, he may bind him over to answer unto the indictment.

If the justice, in his discretion, think that there is a ground for requiring the defendant to enter into recognizances to keep the peace, the Court of King's Bench will not interfere with his decision. Therefore, where a party gave information on oath before a magistrate, that from certain language used towards him he was in bodily fear from another, and the magistrate, upon hearing the complaint, required the latter to enter into recognizances to keep the peace. On motion to discharge the recognizances, on the ground that the language was used in a metaphorical sense only, the court refused to interfere, because it was for the magistrate to judge in what sense the language was used. (Rex v. Tregarthen, 2 Nev. & M. 379; 5 B. & Ad. 678.)

II. At whose Request granted.

May be demanded by any person.

As to this, Mr. Hawkins says, it seems to be agreed at this day, that all persons whatsoever, under the king's protection, being of sane memory, whether they be natural and good subjects or aliens, or attainted of treason, &c., have a right to demand surety of the peace. And it is certain a wife may demand it against her husband threatening to beat her outrageously, and that a husband also may have it against his wife. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 2; Cromp. 118.)

Upon which Mr. Crompton observeth, that if the wife, in such case, cannot find sureties, she shall be committed; "and so (says he), a man may be rid of a shrew." (Crompt. 118. (a))

And Mr. Dalton says, an infant under the age of fourteen years may demand this surety, and it shall be granted to him. (Dalt. c. 117.)

But, as to a person of none-sane memory, Mr. Dalton says, this surety shall neither be granted against him nor to him, upon his own request; but yet, if there shall be cause, the justice ought to provide for his safety. (Dalt. c. 117.)

A peeress may demand surety of the peace against her husband. (See the cases of Lord Vane, 2 Stra. 1202; 13 East, 171, n. S. C.; Marquis Carmarthen, Fort. 359; Earl Ferrers, 1 Burr. 631, 703; Earl Stamford, Cas. T. Hardw. 74; Lord Strathmore, 1 T. R. 696; Lord Howard, 11 Mod. 109.)

III. Against whom granted.

Against whom.

Peers.

There seems to be no doubt but that it ought, upon a just cause of complaint, to be granted by any justice of the peace against any person whomsoever, under the degree of nobility, being of sane memory, whether he be a magistrate or private person, and whether he be of full age or under age. But infants and femes coverts ought to find security by their friends, and not to be bound themselves. And the safest way of proceeding against a peer is by complaint to the Court of Chancery or King's Bench. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 3; 4 Bla. Com. 253. See, ante, "Peers.")

(a) If the marriage be disputed, the court will order the recognizance to be worded so as not to admit the fact. And it was directed to be as follows: "To keep the peace towards our sovereign lord the king, and all his liege people, and particularly towards Hannah Penn, who hath exhibited articles of the peace against him, the said James Bambridge, by the name of Hannah Bambridge, wife of him the said James, and that he shall not depart the court without leave," &c. (R. v. Bambridge, 2 Str. 1231.)

IV. By whom and how granted.

The Courts of Chancery or King's Bench, or any justice or other conservator of the peace, may, it should seem, compel surety of the peace. Who may compel it.

If a person require immediate surety of the peace, and there be no sessions sitting, he should go before a justice or justices out of session, and make complaint on oath of the facts which require the surety. The complaint is usually in writing. See form, (No. 1,) post, p. 915. Before a single justice.

If the offending party be present, he may be required at once to enter into the requisite recognizance.

If he be absent, the justice may make out a warrant to bring the party before himself or some other justice, or he may make it to bring the party before himself only: for he that maketh the warrant, for the most part, hath the best knowledge of the matter, and therefore he is the fittest to do justice in the case. (5 Rep. 59. See form of warrant, post, (No. 2,) p. 915.)

It seemeth certain, that if the person to be bound be in the presence of the justice, he may be immediately committed, unless he offer sureties; and from hence it follows, à fortiori, that he may be commanded by word of mouth to find sureties, and committed for his disobedience. But it is said, that, if he be absent, he cannot be committed without a warrant from some justice, in order to find sureties, and that such warrant ought to be under seal, and to show the cause for which it is granted, and at whose suit, and that it may be directed to any indifferent person. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 9. See form of commitment, post, (Nos. 4, 5.)).

It is said, a justice cannot enjoin another to keep the peace under a penalty. (Com. Dig.) Nor commit him for not finding security, until the party has been required and refused so to do. (Per Pratt, C. J., R. v. Wilks, 1 Haw. c. 60, s. 9, 7th edit. note.)

It is more usual, and is considered as the better way, except under very special circumstances, for the justice to bind the party against whom the peace is required by recognizance to appear at the next session of the peace, and, in the mean time, to keep the peace to the king and all his liege people, especially to the party claiming the security; and, though the recognizance should be removed by certiorari, it is no discharge of the obligation to appear. (2 Haw. c. 27.) The recognizance, however, may be to keep the peace for any indefinite period. (Willes v. Bridger, 2 B & Ald. 278. See further, as to the form of the recognizance, post, p. 903.)

The party requiring the surety may at once apply to the court of sessions; and this is the most usual and best course, when the court is sitting. Before the sessions.

The application should be made to the court upon articles on oath (or on the affirmation of a Quaker), stating fully all the facts which justify the applicant in his fearful apprehensions. See form, post, p. 915, (No. 1).

The articles should be exhibited on parchment.

If the applicant has already been before a justice out of sessions, and the defendant has been bound by recognizance to appear before the justices in session, the court may make proclamation, that "if any man can show cause why the peace granted against such a one shall be continued, he shall speak;" and if no person come to demand the peace against him, or to show cause why it should be continued, then the court may discharge him. (Dalt. 120.)

It is said, that if a man be bound to keep the peace, and especially if to keep it towards a certain person, though such person come not to desire the peace may be continued, yet the court, by their direction, may bind him over till the next session, and that may be to keep the peace against that person only, if they shall think fit: for it may be that the person who first craved the peace is sick, or otherwise prevented, so as he cannot come to that session to demand the continuance of the peace further. (Talf. Dick. Sess. 404.) The power of the sessions, however, to do this seems questionable. In R. v. Bowes, where Lady Strathmore had exhibited articles of the peace against the defendant (her husband), the Court of King's Bench ordered him to give security for fourteen years (it being a case of great outrage, and articles of the peace having been once before exhibited against him on a different complaint), himself in 10,000*l.* and two sureties in 5,000*l.* each. The defendant afterwards applied to the court to reduce the time to one year instead of fourteen, and also to diminish the sum; and in the course of the argument in support of the rule, the defendant's counsel suggested that the court might take bail for one year at first, and afterwards renew that from year to year, if they should see occasion, without any fresh facts being exhibited against him. But though the court, on the particular circumstances of the case, ordered the time to be reduced to two years, because an information then depending for the outrage complained of would be disposed of within that time, when the court might deal with the defendant as they thought proper, in the event of his being convicted, Mr. J. Ashhurst, in answer to the suggestion at the bar, that new bail might be required of the defendant at the end of the first year on the original complaint, said, "I very much doubt whether we have such a power. It has been admitted that there never was any instance of the kind; and I confess I should be very loath to establish such a precedent." (R. v. Bowes, 1 T. R. 700.)

4. *By whom

If the applicant appear, he may then move the court to receive articles of the peace against the offender (with which articles ready drawn on parchment, (see Form, post 918, No. 10,) he should come prepared, in order that they may be delivered to the clerk of the peace), and further, to bind him by recognizance to the next session; and so on from session to session, so long as he shall be able to make it appear that his reasonable apprehensions continue. Or the justices may bind him for a certain definite period, without reference to any succeeding session, at their discretion, as the individual justice might have done in the first instance. (Ante, 899; Talf. Dick. Sess. 405.)

If the party refuse to enter into the recognizance, he may be committed. (Ante, p. 899.)

Chancery or K.B.

As to granting process of the peace or good behaviour out of the Chancery or the King's Bench, it is enacted by the 21 Jac. I. c. 8, that it shall not be granted but upon motion in open court, and declaration in writing, and upon oath to be exhibited by the party desiring such process, of the causes for which such process shall be granted; the motion and declaration to be mentioned on the back of the writ. And if it shall afterwards appear that the causes are untrue, the court may order costs to the party grieved, and commit the offender till paid.

Verification on oath.

The articles must be verified by the oath of the exhibitant. (R. v. Green, 1 Str. 527; Hilton v. Byron, 12 Mod. 243.) Since the 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, and 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 49, the solemn affirmation or declaration of a Quaker or Moravian would, it seems, suffice. And since the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 82, it would seem, that the solemn affirmation or declaration of a Separatist would suffice. See "Oaths," Vol. III.

Affidavits in corroboration.

The articles may be supported by the corroboratory affidavits of third persons, and it is desirable so to support them. The affidavits ought not, it seems, to be entitled with names, &c., there being no previous cause in court. (R. v. Jones, 1 Str. 704; Bevan v. Bevan, 3 T. R. 601; King v. Cole, 6 T. R. 642.) But affidavits in answer must. (Id.)

Affidavits in contradiction.

A person demanding sureties of the peace (whether it be in the first instance before a single justice for immediate security, or by exhibiting articles before the justices in session) swears only to his own apprehensions, of which no other person can form an adequate judgment; from which it has been deduced by the judges, in many cases, as a general rule, that articles of the peace cannot be resisted on any ground, except by showing direct evidence of express malice; such as declarations to that effect; but not inferred malice, collected from general reasoning, or collateral circumstances; and, moreover, that wherever particular facts of violence are stated by the complainant, it is not permitted for the defendant to controvert them; for they must be taken to be true, till negatived through the medium of an appropriate prosecution. (Dick. Sess. 504. And see the cases of Lady Vane, Countesses Strathmore and Doherty, infra.)

5. How the Peace-Warrant may be superseded.

In R. v. Doherty, 13 East, 171, articles of the peace having been exhibited against the defendant by his wife, process issued thereon to enforce appearance; and when he appeared in court with his sureties, his counsel tendered affidavits to the court in contradiction of the facts sworn to in the articles, for the purpose of discharging them. But the court were satisfied they could not receive affidavits on the part of the defendant to contradict the truth of the articles exhibited against him, and prevent his giving surety. (And see Lord Vane's case, 13 East, 171, n.)

But in R. v. Bringloe, 13 East, 174, note, though it was refused the defendant to controvert the facts, yet an explanation was allowed of such parts of the articles as were ambiguous.

And where an application was made to the court to enforce the subsequent process, and the articles manifestly appeared, from the corroborated affidavit of the defendant, to contain malicious, voluntary, and gross perjury, the court resisted the application and committed the offender. (R. v. Parnell, 2 Burr. 806; R. v. Hon. P. Mackenzie, 3 Burr. 1922.)

The court will not in general receive articles of the peace if the parties live at a distance in the country, unless they have previously made application to a justice in the neighbourhood, and he has improperly refused to receive them. (R. v. Waite, 2 Burr. 780.)

Where parties reside at a distance.

And where articles of the peace were exhibited, and it appeared that the facts charged were done at Portsmouth, the court ordered an indorsement to be made upon the attachment of the peace, authorizing and directing any justice in that county to take the security there, specifying the particular sums wherein the principals and also their sureties should be bound. (Hutt's case, 1 Bla. Rep. 233; 2 Burr. 1039, S. C.)

On an affidavit that the defendant was seventy years of age, and unable to travel, a mandamus was granted to three justices in Brecon to take security on articles of the peace exhibited in the King's Bench. (R. v. Lewis, 2 Str. 835.)

V. How the Peace-Warrant may be superseded.

It is said, that if one who fears that the surety of the peace will be demanded against him, find sureties before any justice of the same county, either before or after a warrant is issued against him, he may have a supersedeas from such justice, which shall discharge him from arrest from any other justice at the suit of the same party, for whose security he has given such surety. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 14.)

Finding sureties before arrest.

In which supersedeas it is not necessary to name either the sureties or the sums in which they are bound: but yet it is the better form to express them both. (Dalt. c. 118.)

Also, it is said that an appearance upon a recognizance for the peace may be superseded, by finding sureties in the Chancery or King's Bench, and purchasing a writ, testifying the same; but this practice having been often abused, it is enacted, by the 21 Jac. I. c. 8, that no writs of supersedeas shall be granted out of the Chancery or King's Bench but upon motion in open court, and on such sufficient sureties as shall appear on oath to the court to be assessed in the subsidy-book at 5*l.* lands, or 10*l.* in goods; and unless it shall also first appear to the court, that the process of the peace or good behaviour is prosecuted against him, desiring such supersedeas bonâ fide, by some party grieved, in that court out of which the supersedeas is desired to be awarded. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 14.)

Supersedeas in the Chancery or K. B.

VI. How the Peace-Warrant shall be executed.

See in general, post, "Warrant," Vol. VI.

By whom to be executed.

It can be executed only by the persons to whom it is directed, or some of them, unless it be directed to the sheriff, who may, either by parole or by precept in writing, authorize an officer sworn and known to serve it, but cannot empower any other person without a precept in writing. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 11.)

Breaking open doors.

Where a person, authorized to arrest another who is sheltered in a house, is denied quietly to enter it, in order to take him, it seems generally to be agreed that he may justify breaking open the doors, (among other instances there stated) upon a capias from the King's Bench or Chancery, to compel a man to find sureties for the peace or good behaviour, or even upon a warrant from a justice of the peace for such purpose. (2 Haw. c. 14, s. 2.)

But no one can justify the breaking open another's doors to make an arrest, unless he first signify to those in the house the cause of his coming, and request them to give him admittance. (2 Haw. c. 14, s. 1. See title "House," Vol. III.; post, "Warrant," Vol. VI.)

What justice to be carried before.

If the warrant specially direct that the party shall be brought before the justice who made it, the officer ought not to carry him before any other; but if the warrant be general, to bring him before any justice of such place, the officer has the election to bring him before what justice he pleaseth, and may carry him to prison for refusing to find surety before such justice. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 13.)

Supersedeas.

And if the party be carried before another justice, and not before him who issued the warrant, such other justice must take the surety, and bind him by recognizance, in all points, as the form of the precept doth require; and thereupon such other justice, having so taken surety of the peace, may and ought, upon request, to make his supersedeas to all officers, and to all other justices of the same county; and thereby the said party shall be discharged from finding other surety, and from any other arrest from the same cause; but by such supersedeas the other justice cannot discharge the warrant of the first justice, until the party be bound indeed; nor give any other day to the party to appear. (Dalt. c. 118.)

Whether he may be carried to prison without any further warrant.

If the warrant be in the common form, directing the officer to cause the party complained of to come before a justice to find sufficient surety, and if he shall refuse so to do, to convey him immediately to prison, without expecting any further warrant, until he shall willingly do the same, the officer who serves it, before he makes any arrest, ought first to require the party to go with him, and find sureties according to the purport of the warrant; but upon refusal to do either, that is, either to go before the justice or to find sureties, he may carry him to the gaol by force of the same warrant, without more. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 12; Dalt. c. 118.)

And yet the constable or officer may bring him, in that case, before the justice; and if he refuse there to give sureties, he may commit him without further warrant or mittimus. (2 Hale, 112.)

Best not to leave the proceeding to the judgment of the constable.

Nevertheless, notwithstanding these great authorities, it may not be convenient for the justice to leave so much to the constable's judgment as to determine what shall or shall not be deemed a refusal to find such sureties; for that the constable is constituted a judge in such case by no law. And much less doth it seem advisable to require in the warrant, as is usual, that the constable shall carry the party to gaol, if he shall refuse to find sufficient sureties. It doth not appear how the constable can any way be deemed a competent judge of that; for it is certain that he cannot administer an oath to such sureties or others, whereby to inform himself of such sufficiency.

If the officer do arrest the party, and do not carry him before the justice to find sureties; or, upon the refusal of the party, if the officer shall arrest him and do not carry him to the gaol; in both these cases the officer is punishable by the justices for this neglect, by indictment and fine at their sessions. And also the party arrested may have his action of false imprisonment for the arrest; for where the officer doth not pursue the effect of his warrant, his 8. How recognizance shall be warrant will not excuse him of that which he hath done. (Dalt. c. 118.) certified.

When the party cometh before the justice, he must offer sureties, or else Sureties.
the justice may commit him; for the justice needeth not to demand surety of him. (Dalt. c. 118, 169.)

The amount of the security is, it seems, wholly discretionary in the justice, and the Court of King's Bench cannot afterwards interfere to reduce its amount. (Rex v. Holloway, 2 Dowl. P. C. 525; and see ante 898.)

If the justice was deceived in the sufficiency of the sureties, he or any Insufficient sure- other justice may afterwards compel the party to find and put in other suffi- ties.
cient sureties, and may take a new recognizance for the same. (Dalt.
c. 116, 119.)

If the sureties die, the party principal shall not be compelled to find new Sureties dying.
sureties, (Dalt. c. 119,) because their executors and administrators are liable.

But if a man that was bound to keep the peace hath broken his bond, the Breaking of the justices ought, of discretion, to bind him anew. (Lamb. 78.) bond.

But not until he be thereof convicted by due course of law; for, before conviction, he standeth indifferent whether he hath forfeited his recognizance or not. (Crompt. 125.)

VII. Form of a Recognizance for the Peace.

The form of the recognizance, when taken before a justice upon a complaint Form of recog- below, is chiefly in the discretion of such justice, both as to the number and nizance.
sufficiency of the sureties, and the largeness of the sum, and the continuance of the time for which the party shall be bound. See form, post 917 (No. 6.)
The form of a recognizance, when taken in pursuance of a writ of supplicavit, may be wholly governed by the direction of such writ.

A recognizance to keep the peace as to any person, for a year, or for life, or without expressing any certain time (in which case it shall be intended for life), or without fixing any time or place for the party's appearance, or without binding him to keep the peace against all the king's people in general, is good. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 15; and see this fully recognized in Willes v.
Bridger, 2 B. & Ald. 278, S. C.)

However, it is the most usual way for justices out of sessions to bind the party to appear at the next sessions of the peace, and in the meantime to keep the peace as to the king and all his liege people, especially as to the party.
(Hawk. c. 60, s. 16.) But this is not absolutely requisite, and justices out of sessions are not bound to take recognizance to the next sessions only.
(Willes v. Bridger, 2 B. & Ald. 278.)

If the recognizance be to appear at the sessions, and application be made for an order of court for finding sureties, it seems that articles of the peace must be exhibited for that purpose, and that the practice that once existed of calling on the party at the following sessions, at which he is bound to appear to find sureties to the following sessions, and so on from sessions to sessions without any fresh complaint, is improper. (See R. v. Bowes, 1 T. R. 696;
3 Burn. J., 27th ed. 882.)

The fear of one cannot be the fear of another; and, therefore, every recog- Recognizance nizance must be separate. (Pult. 18.) But the court of King's Bench have must be separate.
allowed three women to file joint articles of the peace against three men.
R. v. Nettle, &c. 1 Haw. P. C. c. 60, note, 7th edit.

VIII. How Recognizance shall be certified.

If it be taken by force of a writ of supplicavit, it needs not be certified till How to be certi- the justice receive a writ of certiorari to that purpose. But if it be taken fied.
upon a complaint below, it must be certified, sent, or brought to the next sessions, by force of the 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, that the party so bound may be called. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 18.)

IX. How Recognizance may be forfeited.

What is deemed no forfeiture.

There are divers things which may be done against the peace and divers offences for which an indictment against the peace will lie, and yet the committing or doing such offence or act shall be no forfeiture of the recognizance for the peace; for that the act that shall cause a forfeiture of such recognizance must be done or intended unto the person as is aforesaid, or in terror of the people. Therefore to enter into lands, where he ought to bring his action; or to disseise another of his lands; or to enter into lands or tenements with force, being without offer of violence to any man's person, and without public terror; or to do a trespass in another man's corn or grass, or to take away another man's goods wrongfully, so it be not from his person; or to steal another man's horse, or other goods feloniously, being not from his person: all these, and the like, are breaches of the peace, and yet these will make no breach of this recognizance, nor breach of the peace within the meaning of the commission of the peace. (Dalt. c. 121.)

What shall be a forfeiture.

But the recognizance is forfeited if the party make default of appearance, and the same default shall be recorded. (3 Hen. VII. c. 1.)

However, if the party have any excuse for his not appearing, it seems that the sessions are not bound peremptorily to record his default, but may equitably consider of the reasonableness of such excuse. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 18.)

Case of sickness.

And Mr. Dalton says, in case of the sickness of the party, so that he cannot appear, he has known that the justices, upon due proof thereof, have forborne to certify or record such forfeiture or default; and that they have taken sureties for the peace of some friends of his present in court, until the next sessions; for that the principal intent of the recognizance was but the preservation of the peace. But he queries how this is warrantable by their oath. (Dalt. c. 120.)

Actual violence.

Also, there is no doubt but that it may be forfeited by any actual violence to the person of another, whether it be done by the party himself, or by others through his procurement: as manslaughter, rape, robbery, unlawful imprisonment, and the like. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 20.)

Also, it hath been holden, that it may be forfeited by any treason against the king's person, and also by any unlawful assembly in terrorem populi, and even by words directly tending to a breach of the peace, as by challenging one to fight, or in his presence threatening to beat him. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 21.)

Otherwise it is if the party be absent; and yet, if the party so bound shall threaten to kill or beat a person who is absent, and after shall lie in wait for him to kill or beat him, this is a forfeiture of the recognizance. (Dalt. c. 121.)

However, it seems that it shall not be forfeited by bare words of heat and choler, as calling a man a knave, teller of lies, rascal, or drunkard; for though such words may provoke a cholerick man to break the peace, yet they do not directly challenge him to it, nor does it appear that the speaker designed to carry his resentment any farther; and it hath been said that even a recognizance for the good behaviour shall not be forfeited for such words; from whence it follows, a fortiori, that a recognizance for the peace shall not. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 22.)

to a forfeiture.

Also, there are some actual assaults on the person of another, which do not amount to a forfeiture of such recognizance: as if an officer, having a warrant against one who will not suffer himself to be arrested beat, or wound him in the attempt to take him; or if a parent in a reasonable manner chastise his child; or a master his servant, being actually in his service at the time; or a schoolmaster his scholar; or a gaoler his prisoner, or even a husband his wife, as some say; or if one confine a friend who is mad, and bind and beat him, in such a manner as is proper in such circumstances; or if a man force a sword from one who offers to kill another therewith; or if a man gently lay his hands upon another, and thereby stay him from inciting a dog against a third person; or if a man beat another (without wounding him, or 11. How re-throwing at him a dangerous weapon, who wrongfully endeavours with cognizance may violence to dispossess him of his lands or goods, or the goods of another be discharged. delivered to him to be kept, and will not desist upon his laying his hands gently on him, and disturbing him; or if a man beat, or (as some say) wound or maim one who makes an assault upon his person or that of his wife, parent, child, or master, especially if it appear that he did all he could to avoid fighting before he gave the wound; or if a man fight with or beat one who attempts to kill any stranger; or if a man even threaten to kill one who puts him in fear of death, in such a place where he cannot safely fly from him; or if one imprison those whom he sees fighting, till the heat is over. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 23, 24.)

X. How the Recognizance, being forfeited, shall be proceeded on.

Before the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, it was said, that the sessions could not in any case proceed against the party for a forfeiture of his recognizance, either in respect of his not appearing, or breaking the peace; but that the recognizance itself, with the record of default of appearance, ought to be removed into some of the courts at Westminster, who should proceed by scire facias upon such recognizance; and so it ought to have been before that act, if it be presented by the jury or grand inquest that the party had forfeited his recognizance by breach of the peace. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 18; Dalt. c. 70.) But see now the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46; ante, title "Fines and Forfeited Recognizances," Vol. II. p. 842.

How forfeited recognizance proceeded on.

This writ of certiorari is obtained on laying an affidavit of the circumstances before a judge at chambers, who will grant a fiat for the writ to issue; when the writ has been served and the recognizance is returned, a writ of scire facias is sued out at the Crown Office, stating the recognizance and suggesting the breach of it. This is delivered to the sheriff of the county in which the defendant resides, and he gives notice of it to the defendant, who must enter an appearance at the Crown Office, and plead any matter in defence; and on this issue is joined, and that issue tried in the same way as any other issue joined in the Crown Office, except that no proclamation is made at the trial, there being no crime to be tried. If the jury find the recognizance has been forfeited, they find a verdict for the crown, and judgment is entered up, and a fi. fa. or ca. sa. issued out of the Crown Office for the amount of the recognizance; but if to these writs there be a return of nihil or non est, or if the prosecutor take no steps on the judgment so signed, the recognizance is estreated into the Exchequer by the master of the Crown Office, in the same way as the recognizance forfeited by the non-appearance of a party to receive judgment; and process issues from the Exchequer. (R. v. Wiblin, 2 C. & P. 11, n.)

XI. How Recognizance may be discharged.

He who is bound to the peace, and to appear at a certain day, must appear at that day and record his appearance, although he who craved the peace cometh not to desire that it may be continued; otherwise the recognizance cannot be discharged. (Dalt. c. 120.)

Discharged on appearance.

If the recognizance be made to keep the peace generally, without any time or day limited, it shall be construed to be during the party's life; and this the justice may do upon reasonable cause: but if such surety be so taken during the offender's life, neither the king, nor the justice, nor the party, can release or discharge it; and, therefore, the justice must be well advised how he granteth such surety. (Dalt. c. 119.)

But it seems to be agreed, that it may be discharged by the death or death of the king.

mise of the king in whose reign it was taken, or of the principal party who was bound thereby, if it were not forfeited before. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 17.)

Also it hath been holden, that it may be discharged by the release of the party at whose complaint it was taken, being certified together with it; but this may justly be questioned, because the recognizance is not to the subject, but to the king, and consequently cannot be discharged by the subject, who is not a party to it: however, such a release will be a good inducement to the court to which such a recognizance shall be certified, to discharge it. (Id.)

It is certain that such a recognizance cannot be pardoned or released by the king before it be broken, because the subject hath a kind of interest in it; but being forfeited, then the king, and no other, may release and pardon the forfeiture. (Id.)

And it is said that the sureties are not discharged by their death, but that their executors continue to be bound as their testators were. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 17; Dalt. c. 120.)

And if a man be bound to keep the peace towards the king and all his people, but not towards any person certain, and to appear at such a sessions, the court at that sessions may make proclamation, that if any man can show cause why the peace granted against such a one shall be continued, he shall speak; and if no person cometh to demand the peace against him, or to show cause why it should be continued, then the court may discharge him. But if a man be bound as aforesaid, and especially to keep the peace towards a certain person, there, though such person cometh not to desire the peace may be continued, yet the court by their discretion may bind him over till the next sessions, and that may be to keep the peace against that person only, if they shall think good; for it may be that the person who first craved the peace is sick, or otherwise letted, so as he cannot come to that sessions to demand the continuance of the peace further. (Dalt. c. 120. Sed vide ante, p. 899.)

Likewise, if the party be imprisoned for default of sureties, and after he that demandeth the peace against him happen to die, it seemeth the justice may make his liberate or warrant for the delivery of such prisoner; for, after such death, there seemeth no cause to continue the other in prison. Also, any justice may, upon the offer of such prisoner, take surety of him for the peace, and may thereupon deliver him. (Dalt. c. 118.)

Surety for the Good Behaviour.

Good behaviour includeth the peace.

A MAN may be compelled to find sureties both for the good behaviour and for the peace; and yet the good behaviour includeth the peace; and he that is bound to the good behaviour is therein also bound to the peace. (Dalt. c. 122.)

This surety for the good behaviour being of near affinity to surety for the peace, both as to the manner in which it is to be taken, superseded, and discharged, it seemeth not to require a particular consideration, save only as to these two points:

I. For what Misbehaviour it is to be required, p. 906.

II. For what it shall be forfeited, p. 914.

I. For what Misbehaviour it is to be required.

For what misbehaviour it is to be required.

It doth not appear that the conservators of the peace at common law had any power as touching the good behaviour, further than as it had a relation to the peace; and not as it is contradistinguished from it. And it seemeth that the power which the justices of the peace do exercise at this day, in relation thereto, doth solely depend upon the commission of the peace, and the statute of the 34 Edw. III. c. 1. (Except in some special instances, wherein the power of binding to the good behaviour is given to them by particular statutes, which pertain not to this general title.)

1. For what misbehaviour it is to be required.

The words in the commission are these: "We have assigned you jointly and severally, and every one of you, our justices, to keep our peace, and to cause to come before you, or any one of you, all those who to any one or more of our people concerning their bodies, or the firing their houses, have used threats; to find sufficient security for the peace or their good behaviour towards us and our people; and if they shall refuse to find such security, then them in our prisons, until they shall find such security, to cause to be safely kept."

Power given to justices by the commission.

The 34 Edw. III. c. 1, as to this matter, runs thus: "In every county shall be assigned for the keeping of the peace one lord, and with him three or four of the most worthy in the county, with some learned in the law; and they shall have power to restrain the offenders, rioters, and all other barrators, and to pursue, arrest, take, and chastise them according to their trespass or offence; and to cause them to be imprisoned and duly punished according to the law and customs of the realm, and according to that which to them shall seem best to do by their discretions and good advisement; and also to inform them, and to inquire of all those that have been pillors and robbers in the parts beyond the sea, and be now come again, and go wandering, and will not labour as they were wont in times past; and to take and arrest all those that they may find, by indictment, or by suspicion, and to put them in prison; and to take of all them that be not of good fame, where they shall be found, sufficient surety and mainprize of their good behaviour towards the king and his people, and the other duly to punish, to the intent that the people be not by such rioters or rebels troubled nor endangered, nor the peace blemished, nor merchants nor others passing by the highways of the realm disturbed, nor put in the peril which may happen of such offenders."

34 Edw. 3, c. 1.

This statute seems to have had in view chiefly the disorders to which the country was then liable, from great numbers of disbanded soldiers, who having served abroad in the wars of that victorious king, were grown strangers to industry, and were rather inclined to live upon rapine and spoil. (Barl. 524.)

But whatever the natural and obvious sense of it may be when compared with the history and circumstances of those times, it is certain that it hath been carried much further by construction, and the purport of it hath been extended by degrees, until at length there is scarcely any other statute which hath received such a largeness of interpretation.

And that I may proceed with clearness in a matter so essential to the office of a justice of the peace, I will set down the several expositions which have been given of this statute from time to time by learned men, and then raise such observations thereupon as the subject will naturally suggest.

Observations of learned men on the subject.

The first unfolding of the sense of this statute which has occurred, was in the case of Sir Richard Croftes and Sir Richard Corbet, in the second year of the reign of king Henry VII., wherein it was resolved by all the judges, for that purpose assembled, that he who is bound to the good behaviour ought not to do anything which shall be cause of breach of the peace, or to put the people in fear, dread, or trouble: and so shall be intended of all things which concern the peace: but not in misdoing of other things which touch not the peace. Yet a diversity was observed between a breach of the peace and a breach of the good behaviour, for the peace is not broken without an affray or battery, but the good behaviour may be forfeited by the number of people a man has, and by their harness, or weapons, and the like, although they break not the peace. (2 Hen. VII. c. 2.)

Surety of good behaviour relates to matters concerning the peace.

The second instance, and upon which much stress hath been laid, was in the 13th year of the same king. In trespass of assault, battery, and imprisonment at D., the defendant saith that one Alice B. had a house in the same town, and kept there suspicious people, to wit, of common bawdry, and that the plaintiff oftentimes resorted to the same house suspiciously with women of bad fame and name, whereby the constable of the same town required the defendant to aid him to arrest the plaintiff, to find surety of his good behaviour; whereby the defendant came with the said constable at the hour of twelve in the night, and him found suspiciously in the same place; whereupon he took him and put him in ward; and it was holden by all the justices to be a good justification; for they said, that it is lawful for every constable to take suspected persons, which wake in the night and sleep in the day, or that keep suspicious company. (13 Hen. VII. c. 10.)

In the next place, Sir Anthony Fitzherbert, who lived in the reign of king Henry VIII., saith, that it seemeth that one justice may, by the commission, issue a warrant against a person to find surety of the good behaviour, by his discretion, as well as two justices may: and the words of the statute of the 34 Edw. III. are to the same effect. Otherwise, he says, damage may happen to some of the king's subjects, if the party be not attached, before that two justices have made the precept; yet, he says, the common usage is, to make such precept of the good behaviour in the name of two justices, and it is good to observe this direction. (Fitz. 7; see Crompt. 122, 126, and post 912.)

In the next place, it is proper to take notice of a case adjudged in the Court of King's Bench, in the 30th of queen Elizabeth, reported by Ld. Coke, 4 Inst. 181, which was thus:—At the sessions at Bridgewater, in the county of Somerset, one William King with sureties was bound by recognizance to appear at the next general sessions of the peace in the same county, and in the mean time to be of the good behaviour towards the queen and all her people. And after, at the next sessions, William King appeared, and was indicted for slanderous words spoken since his binding, to wit, for saying at one time to Edward Kyrton, Esq., “Thou art a peller, thou art a liar, and hast told my lord lies.” And he was further indicted, that since the said recognizance, “the close of one John Wick with force and arms he broke and entered, and the cattle of the said John depasturing in the said close unlawfully vexed and chased.” And afterwards, at another time, he said to the said Kyrton, “Thou art a drunken knave.” Which indictment was removed into the King's Bench. And hereupon it was debated divers times, both at the bar and the bench, whether, admitting all that is contained in the indictment to be true, anything therein was, in judgment of law, a breach of the said recognizance. And it was resolved, that neither any of the words, nor the trespass, were any breach of the good behaviour, for that none of them did tend immediately to the breach of the peace; for though the said words, “Thou art a liar, thou art a drunken knave,” are provocations, yet they tend not immediately to the breach of the peace; as if William King had challenged Kyrton to fight with him, or had threatened to beat or wound him, or the like; these tend immediately to the breach of the peace, and are therefore breaches of the recognizance of the good behaviour. And this diversity (Ld. Coke says) was justly collected upon the coherence and context of the statute of the 34 Edw. III., whereby justices are assigned for keeping the peace, and to restrain the offenders, rioters, and all other barrators, and to chastise them according to their trespass and offence; and to inquire of pillors and robbers in the parts beyond the seas, and be now come again, and go wandering, and will not labour. And thus much for the punishment of offences against the peace after they be done. Then followeth an express authority given to justices, for prevention of such offences before they be done, namely, “and take of all them that be not of good fame” (that is, that be defamed and justly suspected that they intend to break the peace), “where they shall be found, sufficient surety and mainprize of their good behaviour towards the king and his people” (which must concern the king's peace, as is also provided by the words subsequent), “to the intent that the people be not by such rioters troubled or endamaged, nor the peace blemished, nor merchants nor others passing by the highways disturbed, nor put in peril that may happen of such offenders.” And as for the trespass: although every wrongful trespass is by force and arms, and against the peace, yet these are not taken to be such as shall make a breach of the good behaviour.

Opinion of Lambard.

After this, Mr. Lambard, who wrote towards the beginning of the reign of king James the First, saith thus:—Surety of the good abearing is of great affinity with that of the peace, as being provided for preservation of the peace, as that other is; for in the commission of the peace they are both conveyed under one tract of speech, against such as threaten to hurt men's bodies, or fire their houses; which things (he says) are now commonly prevented by surety of the peace only. (Lamb. 115.)

And in the 2 Hen. VII. c. 2 (above recited), the surety of the good abearing is set forth to rest in this point chiefly, that a man do nothing that may be cause of a breach of the peace; and that it doth not consist in the observation of things that concern not the peace; and that it should differ from surety of the peace in this, that where the peace is not broken without an affray, or battery, or such like, the surety may be broken by the number of a man's company, or by his or their weapons or harness.

And herewithal (he says) do also agree certain precedents in the King's Bench.

But all this notwithstanding, he thinks that a man may reasonably affirm, that the surety of good abearing should not be restrained to so narrow bounds.

In proof of which, he proceeds to comment on the above-mentioned statute of the 34 Edw. III., enabling the keepers of the peace "to take of them all that be not of good fame, where they shall be found, sufficient surety and mainprize of their good abearing towards the king and his people;" so that, if a man be defamed, he may, by virtue hereof, be bound to his good behaviour at the discretion of the justices. Now, the doubt resteth in this—to understand concerning what matters this defamation must be: and this (he thinks) may be partly gathered out of the said statute; for after it hath first given power to the wardens of the peace to arrest and chastise offenders (that is to say, against the peace, rioters, and barrators), then it willeth them to "inquire of such as, having been robbers beyond the sea, were come over hither, and would not labour as they were wont;" and, lastly, it authorizes them "to take surety of the good behaviour of such as be defamed," namely, for any of those former offences; for so it standeth well together that they should both punish such as have already so offended, and shall also provide that others shall not likewise offend.

But he says, the further this bond of the good abearing doth extend, the more regard there ought to be taken in the awarding of it; and therefore (says he) although the justices have power to grant it, either by their own discretion or upon the complaint of others, even as they may that of the peace, yet I wish rather that they do not command it but only upon sufficient cause seen to themselves, or upon the complaint of other very honest and credible persons.

And then being about to set forth the form of a warrant, and of a recognizance for the good behaviour, he says, "And here, forasmuch as one justice alone, and out of sessions, may both, by the first clause of the commission, and also by the opinion of Fitzherbert, grant this surety of the good abearing (although the common practice be, that two such justices do join in that doing, whereof also Fitzherbert hath very good liking), I will not stick to set forth the common forms, as well of the precept as of the recognizance for the same, wherein if I shall use the names of two justices, you must take that to be done according to the common fashion, and not of any necessity in law. For as I would more gladly use the assistance of a fellow-justice in this behalf, if I may conveniently have it, so if that may not be gotten, I would not greatly fear, when good cause shall require, to undertake the thing myself alone."

"And besides this," he says, "you may see admitted by the opinion of the court, 13 Hen. VII., that if a man in the night season haunt a house that is suspected for bawdry, or use suspicious company, then may the constable arrest him to find surety for his good abearing; for bawdry is not merely a spiritual offence, but mixed and sounding somewhat against the peace of the land."

"And, therefore," says he, "it shall not be amiss at this day, in my slender opinion, to grant surety of the good abearing against him that is suspected to have begotten a bastard child, to the end that he may be forthcoming when it shall be born; for otherwise there will be no putative father found, when the justices shall, after the birth, come to take order for his punishment." (Lamb. 119.)

Opinion of Pulton.

In the next place, Mr. Pulton, who lived about the same time with Mr. Lambard, writeth thus:—"The surety of the good abearing is ordained for the preservation of the peace, and it doth differ in nothing from that of the peace, but that there is more difficulty in the performance of it, and the party bound may sooner slide into the peril and danger of it. The surety of good abearing is most commonly granted in open sessions, or by two or three justices; or, upon a supplicavit, and great cause shown and proved, it is granted in the Chancery or King's Bench. And though one justice alone may grant it if he will, yet it is seldom done so, unless it be to prevent some great, sudden, and imminent enormity or danger. The surety of the peace is most times taken at the request of one for the preservation of the peace chiefly against one. But the surety for the good abearing is oftentimes granted at the suit of divers, and those must be men of credit, and to provide for the safety of many; for the effect and purport thereof is, that the party bound shall demean himself well in his port, behaviour, and company, and do nothing that may be the cause of breach of the peace, or in putting the people in fear or trouble; and it is chiefly granted against common barrators, common rioters, common quarrellers, common peace-breakers, and persons greatly defamed for resorting to houses suspected to maintain incontinency or adultery, and against those that be generally feared to be robbers or spoilers of the king's people, or which do endamage, disturb, trouble, or put in peril passengers by the way." (Pult. 18.)

Opinion of Dalton.

Afterwards, Mr. Dalton, who wrote towards the latter end of the reign of King James the First, says, "The surety of good behaviour is of great affinity with that of the peace, and is provided chiefly for the preservation of the peace; and is most commonly granted either in the open sessions, or by two or three justices out of sessions. Yet by the words of the commission, as also by the common opinion of the learned, one justice alone out of sessions may grant this surety of the good behaviour. But this is not usual, unless it be to prevent some great and sudden danger, especially against a man that is of any good estate, carriage, or report. And it shall be good discretion in the justices that they do not grant it, but either upon sufficient cause seen to themselves, or upon the suit or complaint of others, and the same very honest and credible persons." (Dalt. c. 123.)

Opinion of Hawkins.

In the next place, Mr. Hawkins, who wrote in the reign of King George the First, saith thus:—"There seem to have been some opinions that the statute, speaking of those that be 'not of good fame,' means only such as are defamed and justly suspected that they intend to break the peace, and that it does not any way extend to those who are guilty of other misbehaviours not relating to the peace. But this seems much too narrow a construction; since the above-mentioned expression of persons of 'evil fame,' in common understanding, as properly includes persons of scandalous behaviour in other respects, as those who by their quarrelsome behaviour give just suspicion of their readiness to break the peace; and accordingly it seems always to have been the better opinion, that a man may be bound to his good behaviour for many causes of scandal, which give him a bad fame, as being contrary to good manners only: as for haunting bawdy-houses with women of bad fame; or for keeping bad women in his own house; or for speaking words of contempt of an inferior magistrate, as a justice of the peace, or mayor, though he be not then in the actual execution of his office; or of an inferior officer of justice, as a constable and such like, being in the actual execution of his office." (1 Haw. c. 61, s. 2.)

May be required of those who lead ill lives.

Who abuse justices, &c.

"However, it seems the better opinion, that no one ought to be bound to the good behaviour for any rash, quarrelsome, or unmannerly words, unless they either directly tend to a breach of the peace, or to scandalize the government, by abusing those who are intrusted by it with the administration of justice, or to deter an officer from doing his duty; and therefore it seems that he who barely calls another rogue or rascal, or teller of lies, or drunkard, ought not for such cause to be bound to the good behaviour." (1 Haw. c. 61, s. 3.)

"However," says he, "I cannot find any certain precise rules for the direction of the magistrate in this respect; and therefore am inclined to think, that he has a discretionary power to take such surety of all those whom he shall have just cause to suspect to be dangerous, quarrelsome, or scandalous; as of those who sleep in the day, and go abroad in the night; and of such as keep suspicious company; and of such as are generally suspected to be robbers, and the like; and of eves-droppers; and common drunkards; and all other persons, whose misbehaviour may reasonably be intended to bring them within the meaning of the statute, as persons of evil fame, who being described by an expression of so great latitude, seem in a great measure to be left to the judgment of the magistrate. But if he commit one for want of sureties, he must show the cause with convenient certainty." (1 Haw. c. 61, s. 4.)

1. For what misbehaviour it is to be required.
Quarrelsome and dangerous persons.

And thus the sense of the statute hath been extended not only to offences immediately relating to the peace, but to divers misbehaviours not directly tending to a breach of the peace; insomuch as it is become difficult to define how far it shall extend, and where it shall stop.

Mr. Dalton, in order to determine the same with some kind of certainty, hath (notwithstanding his opinion as above mentioned) inserted a number of instances, wherein sureties of the good behaviour may be granted; and they are these that follow: (a)

Against whom in general sureties of the good behaviour may be granted.

1. Against rioters.
2. Barrators.
3. Common quarrellers, and common breakers of the peace.
4. Such as lie in wait to rob, or shall be suspected to lie in wait to rob, or shall assault, or attempt to rob another, or shall put passengers in fear or peril, or shall be generally suspected to be robbers by the highway.
5. Such as are like to commit murder, homicide, or other grievances, to any of the king's subjects in their bodies.
6. Such as shall practise to poison another; one instance of which may be the poisoning of their food. Thus, Mr. Dalton granted the good behaviour against one who had bought ratsbane, and mingled it with corn, and then cast it among his neighbour's fowls, whereby most of them died.
7. Such as in the presence and hearing of the justice shall misbehave themselves in some outrageous manner of force or fraud.
8. Such as are greatly defamed for resorting to houses suspected to maintain adultery or incontinency.
9. Maintainers of houses commonly suspected to be houses of common bawdry.
10. Common whoremongers and common whores; for bawdry is an offence temporal as well as spiritual, and is against the peace of the land.
11. Night-walkers and eves-droppers.
12. Suspected persons, who live idly, and yet fare well, or are well-apparelled, having nothing whereon to live; unless upon examination they shall give a good account of such their living.
13. Common gamesters, especially if they have not whereon to live.
14. Such as raise hue and cry without cause.
15. Libellers.
16. Putative father of a bastard child.
17. Such as persuade or procure the putative father to run away, or the mother to be conveyed away, whereby she leaveth her child to the charge of the town.
18. Such as abuse a justice's warrant, or shall abuse him or the constable in executing their offices. Nay, it seemeth, he says, that he who shall use words of contempt, or contrary to good manners, against a justice of the peace, though it be not at such a time as he is executing his office, yet he shall be bound to his good behaviour.

19. Such as charge another before a justice with felony, riot, or forcible entry, and yet will not prosecute or give evidence.

20. In general, whatsoever act or thing is of itself a misbehaviour, is cause sufficient to bind such an offender to the good behaviour. (Dalt. c. 124.)

To which others have added other instances; as—

21. Forcible entry. (1 Haw. c. 64, s. 8.)

22. Mr. Hawkins says, “that he hath heard it agreed in the Court of King’s Bench, that a writing full of obscene ribaldry, without any kind of reflection upon any one, is not punishable at all by any prosecution at common law; yet it seems,” he says, “that the author may be bound to his good behaviour, as a scandalous person of evil fame.” (1 Haw. c. 73, s. 9.)

23. A man did beat a woman in Westminster Hall, and he was bound to the good behaviour; and so, says Mr. Crompton, “he may be bound to the peace and good behaviour, where he striketh a person in the presence of the justices in sessions.” (Crompt. 124.)

24. A man was bound to the good behaviour by the Court of King’s Bench, for assaulting and threatening a person, so that he could not attend the court in suit there, without great cost. And so it seemeth that it may be done where one cometh to the sessions about a traverse to be tried there, or to prefer a bill of indictment, if he be assaulted or threatened. (Crompt. 125.)

Observations by Dr. Burn.

I have omitted to make any remarks in the progress of these authorities, being willing to exhibit them together in one view; I proceed now to take notice of such observations as do occur upon the whole.

Power of one justice.

First, it appears from hence, that the universal practice of one justice binding to the good behaviour is but of a modern date; although the law for it is the same now that it was near four hundred years ago; and that it was a long time doubted whether one justice alone could require sureties of the good behaviour. But here a distinction ought to be made between the power given by the commission of the peace and the power given by the above-mentioned statute: as to the commission, there seemeth to be no foundation for any doubt, but that thereby one justice alone may require such sureties; for the words are express, “We have assigned you, jointly and severally, and every one of you:” but then that extends only to two instances, namely, to “the threatening of a person concerning his body, or the firing of his house.” As to the statute, the doubt seems to have arisen upon this; in that, having appointed who shall be assigned for justices, it then directeth that “they shall have power to restrain offenders;” and it is holden, Mr. Lambard hath observed, “that if no power be expressly given by any statute to any one justice alone, he cannot otherwise compel the observation thereof, than by the help of his fellow-justices.” And Mr. Hawkins, speaking hereof in the case of riots, says, “that if one justice alone, proceeding upon this statute, shall arrest an innocent person as a rioter, it seemeth that he is liable to an action of trespass, and that the party arrested may justify the rescuing of himself; because no one single justice is by this statute made a judge of the said offence: yet, nevertheless,” he says, “by a favourable construction which this statute hath received for the advancement of justice, it hath been resolved, that any one justice upon this statute, ‘if he find the persons riotously assembled,’ may, without staying for his companions, arrest the offenders, and bind them to their good behaviour.”

Extension of cases in which surety may be required.

Secondly, it seemeth, from what hath been rehearsed, that the words, “not of good fame,” were generally understood for a long time to refer to such offences only as have a relation to the peace, and not to other things which concern not the peace.

Thirdly, that one great inlet to the larger, and at length almost unlimited interpretation of the words, was the case above mentioned, 13 Hen. VII., wherein it was adjudged to be lawful to arrest a man for the good behaviour, for frequenting a suspected bawdy-house, with women of bad fame. And 1. For what this is the reason which Mr. Dalton gives for many of his instances above specified,—namely, that they are more properly against the peace than this same case of avoutry. (Dalt. c. 124, p. 289.) misbehaviour it is to be required.

Fourthly, That when once the gap was opened for the admission of other offences not immediately relating to the peace, they flowed in and multiplied. Thus, in the case of bastardy, having some affinity with the other, of frequenting bawdy-houses, Mr. Lambard thought that, with equal reason, the reputed father of a bastard child might be bound to the good behaviour; and, in a few years after, Mr. Dalton delivers it absolutely, that he may be so bound.

Fifthly, That, therefore, the natural and received sense of any statute ought not to be departed from without extreme necessity; for that one concession will make way for another, and the latter will plead for the same right of admission as the former.

Sixthly, That, notwithstanding the aforesaid instances given by Mr. Dalton and others, it may not be safe in all cases to rely upon every one of them without distinction; not only because it is almost impossible for any two cases to be exactly alike in all other circumstances, but also because in fact divers of them, at different times, have been adjudged otherwise, and others have not prevailed without much difficulty and contradiction in the courts above, and, perhaps, were at length admitted rather from the conveniency and reasonableness of the thing itself, and from an indulgence usually allowed to those gentlemen who serve their country without gain, and oftentimes with much trouble, than from any clear, positive, and express power given to them by the commission, or by the said statute.

Seventhly, That, notwithstanding all which hath been said, perhaps the case before recited, concerning the frequenting of a suspected bawdy-house, will not support the weight which so many authors have laid upon it. For the question, whether a justice of the peace had cognizance of the offence by virtue of the commission of the peace, or of the statute of the 34 Edw. III., was no part of the dispute; for it was an arrest by the constable ex officio, as a conservator of the peace at common law, and without any warrant from a magistrate; and the question was not whether the constable might require sureties for the good behaviour, as a thing different from sureties for the peace, but whether in that case he could arrest at all or not.

And if the authority of this case shall be abated, several of the above-mentioned instances will abate in proportion.

Eighthly, It is to be observed, that others of the above said instances were established upon matters originally determined in the Court of King's Bench, and Mr. Crompton himself refers to the authority and practice of that court in several instances. (Crompt. 120.) But it doth by no means follow, from what the justices of the Court of King's Bench may do, that the justices of the peace may do the like; for their authority is circumscribed and limited by their commission and the statute law.

Ninthly, That it will perhaps abate some other of the foregoing instances, if we attend to this consideration: that there is a great difference between what the justices in sessions may do, after a conviction by a jury, for an offence committed, and what a single justice out of the sessions may do, before an offence is committed, and to prevent the same from being committed; or what a single justice may do, upon a summary conviction before him, for an offence, as directed by some special act of parliament. The truth is, binding to the good behaviour was a discretionary judgment at the common law, given by a court of record for an offence at the suit of the king, after a common law conviction by verdict of twelve men. Trial by his peers is the Englishman's birthright by the great charter, and cannot be taken away but by an authority equal to that which established it,—that is, by act of parliament; and, therefore, where an act gives a summary conviction before a justice of the peace, and inflicts a punishment upon such conviction, such statute must be pursued both as to the conviction and punishment. And it seemeth incongruous, that a justice of the peace shall have power to Binding to good behaviour after a common law conviction.

2. For what it shall be forfeited.

Great caution recommended.

bind a man to the good behaviour, for an offence which he himself hath no power to hear and determine; for that is, in effect, giving judgment, and awarding execution, when it doth not and cannot legally appear to him that the person is guilty.

Tenthly, That, therefore, upon the whole, it may be proper to conclude, that the magistrate, in this article of the good behaviour, cannot exercise too much caution and good advisement; that in matters which the law hath left indefinite, it is better to fall short of than to exceed his commission and authority; that to bind a man to the good behaviour upon the statute for evil fame in general may not always be with safety: not only because upon an action brought it may be hard to prove such evil fame, but also because in fact it is not always true, for many a good man hath been evil spoken of; that although, in some cases, a justice of the peace may have a discretionary power (as Mr. Hawkins expresseth it), yet he must remember withal that it is a legal discretion, as Mr. Barlow terms it, in which, in favour of liberty, great tenderness is to be used; or, as Lord Coke hath defined it, discretion is a knowledge or understanding to discern between truth and falsehood, between right and wrong, between shadows and substance, between equity and colourable glosses and pretences, and not to do according to our wills and private affections; and such discretion ought to be limited and bounded with the rules of reason, law, and justice. (5 Rep. 100; Keighley's case, 10 Rep. 140.) And see further, as to this, title "Justices," Vol. III., p. 560.

II. For what it shall be forfeited.

For what forfeited.

This hath been handled in part as it fell in with the former section; and agreeably to the doctrine there laid down, Mr. Dalton says, that he who is bound to the good behaviour ought to demean himself well in his carriage, and in his company, not doing anything which shall be a cause of breach of the peace, or to put the people in fear, dread, or trouble; and so shall be intended of all things which concern the peace, but not in misdoing of other things which touch not the peace. (Dalt. c. 122.)

And Mr. Hawkins saith, it hath been laid down as a general rule, that whatever will be a good cause to bind a man to his good behaviour will forfeit a recognizance for it; but that this hath since been denied, and indeed seems by no means to be maintainable, because the statute, in ordering persons of evil fame to be bound in this manner, seems, in many places, chiefly to regard the prevention of that mischief which they may justly be suspected to be likely to do; and in that respect requires them to secure the public from that danger which may probably be apprehended from their future behaviour, whether any actual crime can be proved upon them or not; and it would be extremely hard in such cases to make persons forfeit their recognizances, who yet may justly be compellable to give one, as those who keep suspicious company, or those who spend much money idly, without having any visible means of getting it honestly, or those who lie under a general suspicion of being rogues, and the like. (1 Haw. c. 61, s. 5.)

However, it seems that such a recognizance shall not only be forfeited for such actual breaches of the peace for which a recognizance for the peace may be forfeited, but also for some others, for which such a recognizance cannot be forfeited: as, for going armed with great numbers to the terror of the people, or speaking words tending to sedition; and also for all such actual misbehaviours which are intended to be prevented by such a recognizance, but not for barely giving cause of suspicion of what, perhaps, may never actually happen. (1 Haw. c. 61, s. 6.)

(11.) Articles of the peace exhibited by a wife against her husband, in the King's Bench.

Of Easter Term, in the [seventh] year of the reign of King [William the Fourth].

England. Articles of the Peace exhibited by C. B., wife of A. B., of _____, [gentleman], against the said A. B., her husband, through fear of death, or of receiving some great bodily harm.

[Here state the causes producing the fear; and the mode of stating them may be collected from the following matters:]

First. This exhibitant, on her oath, saith, that she hath been married to the said A. B. for the space of [six years and upwards]; and that, for the space of [one year and ten months] before the [1st day of November] last past, the said A. B. hath treated this exhibitant with great cruelty and barbarity, and without any provocation whatever from this exhibitant; and, in particular, hath frequently, during the time last aforesaid, struck and threatened to strike this exhibitant, and dragged her about his [dwelling-house].

Secondly. This exhibitant, on her oath, saith, that the said A. B., having made a voyage to the [East Indies], returned on or about the [29th day of September, A. D. 1826]; and, soon after his return, commenced or renewed an acquaintance with a woman who was known by the name of E., with whom, as well as with other women, the said A. B. frequently cohabited, as this exhibitant hath great reason to believe; this exhibitant having known the said woman called by the name of E. shut into the said A. B.'s [bed-room], where she hath remained with him several hours. And this exhibitant saith, that the said A. B. compelled this exhibitant to reside in mean lodgings, different from his place of residence; and that, whenever this exhibitant ventured to go to the said A. B.'s [chambers] to expostulate with him on his ill-treatment, he hath beaten or threatened to beat this exhibitant; and this exhibitant saith that, at one time in particular, during the time last aforesaid, the said A. B. did, with a violent blow, knock this exhibitant down in the said [chambers], and that this exhibitant, in consequence of the said blow, lay senseless for a considerable time.

Thirdly. This exhibitant, on her oath, saith, that, by means of the cruel treatment of the said A. B., before set forth, and particularly of his having, at divers times within the space of [three months] last past, as this exhibitant hath been informed and believes, threatened to seize, confine, beat, maim, or ill-treat this exhibitant, she, this exhibitant, is put into the utmost fear and danger, and verily believes that the said A. B. will put his said threats into execution, and will do this exhibitant some bodily hurt; and therefore this exhibitant is prevented from going out about her lawful occasions, until she can obtain that protection from the laws of this country which this honourable court has authority to grant. And this exhibitant further saith, that she is now under great fear and apprehension that the said A. B. will take the first opportunity of doing this exhibitant some bodily hurt, unless he is restrained therefrom by this honourable court; and therefore this exhibitant most humbly craves that the said A. B. may be ordered by this honourable court to find sufficient sureties for keeping the king's peace towards this exhibitant.

Lastly. This exhibitant saith, that she doth not make this complaint against the said A. B. through any hatred, malice, or ill-will, which she hath or beareth towards him, but merely for the preservation of her life, and also of her person from bodily harm.

The above-named C. B. was sworn to the truth of the above premises on [Saturday] next after , in the [seventh year of the reign of King William the Fourth.]

ing, if unknown,

Sect. 3. "In case any person or persons shall profanely swear or curse, in the presence and hearing of any constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer, it shall and may be lawful for any and every such constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer, and they and each of them are hereby authorized and required (in case any such person shall be unknown to such constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer) to seize, secure, and detain such offender or offenders, unknown to him or them as aforesaid; and such offender or offenders forthwith to carry before the next justice of the peace for the county, riding, division, or liberty, or before the mayor, justice, bailiff, or other chief magistrate of the town corporate, wherein such offence was committed; and the said justice, mayor, or other chief magistrate, is hereby authorized and required on the oath of such constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer, to convict the offender in manner and form hereinafter directed: and in case any such person so profanely swearing or cursing, in the presence or hearing of any such constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer, shall be known to any of them, every such constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer, shall and is hereby required speedily to make information before some justice of the peace for the county, riding, division, or liberty, mayor, justice, bailiff, or chief magistrate, of any town corporate as aforesaid, in order that the offender or offenders may be by such justice, mayor, bailiff, or other chief magistrate, convicted thereof and punished for the same, in manner and form as in and by this act is directed."

and if they are known, information to be made.

Justices, &c.

Sect. 4. "Every such justice of the peace, mayor, or other chief magistrate as aforesaid, shall immediately, upon information given upon oath of any such constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer, or of any other person whatsoever, cause the offender or offenders to appear before him; and upon such information being proved as aforesaid, convict such offender or offenders in such manner as in and by this act is prescribed : and in case such offender or offenders shall not immediately pay down the respective sum so forfeited, or give security to the satisfaction of such justice, mayor, or other chief magistrate, before whom such conviction is made, it shall and may be lawful for such justice, mayor, or other chief magistrate, to commit the offender to the house of correction for the county, riding, division, liberty, city, or town corporate where such offence shall be committed, there to remain, and be kept to hard labour for the space of ten days." 19 Geo. 2, c. 21.

Sect. 5. "In case any common soldier belonging to any regiment in his majesty's service, or any common sailor or common seaman belonging to any ship or vessel, shall be convicted of profane cursing or swearing as aforesaid, and shall not immediately pay down the penalty by him forfeited, or give security for the same as aforesaid, and also the cost of the information, summons, and conviction, as in and by this act is directed ; every such common soldier, common sailor, or common seaman, instead of being committed to the house of correction, as by this act is directed, shall by the said justice, mayor, bailiff, or other head officer, be ordered to be publicly set in the stocks for the space of one hour, for every single offence ; and for any number of offences, whereof he shall be convicted at one and the same time, two hours." Common soldiers, &c. not paying penalty, &c. Set in stocks.

Sect. 6. "If any justice of the peace of any county, riding, division, or liberty, mayor, justice, bailiff, or other chief magistrate of any town corporate, shall wilfully and wittingly omit the performance of his duty, in the execution of this act, he shall forfeit and lose the sum of 5*l.* ; one moiety thereof to the use of the informer, and the other moiety thereof to the use of the poor of the parish wherein such justice, mayor, or other chief magistrate shall reside ; to be recovered by action, suit, bill, or plaint, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster ; wherein no essoin, protection, or wager of law shall be allowed, or more than one imparlance." Justices, not doing their duty, forfeit 5*l.*

Sect. 7. "If any constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer, shall wilfully and wittingly omit the performance of his duty in the execution of this act, and be thereof convicted by the oath of one witness, before any justice of the peace for any county, riding, division, or liberty, or before the mayor, justice, bailiff, or other chief magistrate of any town corporate, every such constable, petty constable, tithingman, or other peace-officer so offending, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 40*s.*, to be levied and recovered by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, by virtue of a warrant under the hand and seal of such justice, mayor, or other chief magistrate, and to be disposed of, one moiety thereof to the use of the informer, and the other moiety to the use of the poor of the parish where such offence shall be committed ; and in case such offender shall not have sufficient goods and chattels whereon to levy the said penalty, it shall and may be lawful for such justice, mayor, or other magistrate, to commit such offender to the house of correction for the county, riding, division, liberty, city, or place, there to remain, and be kept to hard labour for the space of one month." Constables not doing their duty, forfeit 40*s.* and for want of distress, to be committed for one month to the house of correction.

Sect. 8. "All and every justice of the peace for any county, riding, division, or liberty, and all and every mayor, justice, bailiff, or other chief magistrate of any town corporate, before whom any person or persons shall be convicted of profane swearing or cursing, shall cause the conviction to be drawn up in the words and form following :—

taken to be final to all intents and purposes whatsoever; and the said justice, mayor, bailiff, or other chief magistrate before whom such conviction shall be made, shall cause the same to be fairly wrote over upon parchment, and returned to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county wherein such conviction was made, to be filed by the clerk of the peace, and remain and be kept amongst the records of the said county."

Sect. 9. "All and every justice of the peace for any county, riding, division, or liberty, and every mayor, justice, bailiff, or other chief magistrate of any city or town corporate may, and they are hereby authorized and required to put this in execution against any person or persons within their several jurisdictions, although such justice, mayor, bailiff, or other chief magistrate shall be rated and pay to the relief of the poor of any parish, town, or place, where any offence contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act shall be committed; any law or statute to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 10. "All and every penalty or penalties inflicted by this act, upon any person or persons, for profane cursing and swearing, shall be disposed of for the benefit of the poor of the parish wherein such offence was committed; and that all charges of the information and conviction of any such offender shall be borne and paid by the party offending, if able, over and above the penalties inflicted by this act, which charges shall be settled and ascertained by the justice of peace, mayor, bailiff, or other chief magistrate before whom such conviction shall be made: and in case such party shall not be able, or shall not immediately pay the said charges and expenses, or give security for the same to the satisfaction of such justice of the peace, mayor, bailiff, or other chief magistrate before whom such information and conviction shall be made, to commit such offender to the house of correction as aforesaid, there to remain and be kept to hard labour for the space of six days, over and above such time for which such offender may be committed in default of payment of the penalties inflicted by this act; and in such case no charges of information and conviction shall be paid by any person whatsoever."

Sect. 11. "If any action or suit shall be commenced or brought against any justice of the peace, constable, or other officer or person whatsoever, for doing or causing to be done any thing in pursuance of this act concerning the said offences, the defendant in that action may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence; and if upon such action verdict be given for the defendant, or the plaintiff become nonsuit, or discontinue his action, then the defendant shall have treble costs."

Sect. 12. "No person shall be prosecuted or troubled for any offence against this statute hereinbefore or hereinafter mentioned, unless the same be proved or prosecuted within eight days next after the offence committed."

Sect. 13, requiring the act to be read four times in the year in all churches and chapels, is repealed by 4 Geo. IV. c. 31.

Sect. 14. "The clerk of the justice, mayor, bailiff, or other chief officer before whom proceedings upon this act shall be had, shall and may receive and take for the information, summons, and conviction of every offender against this act, the sum of 1s., and no more."

Sect. 15. "An act made in the twenty-first year of the reign of King James the First, intituled, 'An Act to prevent and reform profane Cursing and Swearing;' and also an act made in the sixth and seventh years of the reign of King William the Third, intituled, 'An Act for the more effectual suppressing profane Cursing and Swearing,' shall be and are hereby repealed."

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 33, persons belonging to his majesty's ships of war, guilty of profane oaths or curses, shall incur such punishment as a court-martial shall impose.

(a) It should seem the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 3 (see "Distress under Justice's Warrant," Vol. I.) authorizing the party to be discharged on payment of the penalty and costs, is not applicable to a commitment for swearing.

Taxes, Assessed, &c.

General observations.

IN the preceding parts of this work, the taxes called duties of Excise and Customs, Land-Tax, Post-Horse Duty, and Stamp Duties, have already been considered. In the prior editions, as well as in the present, under the above head of Taxes, the other branches of revenue principally denominated Assessed Taxes are considered, together with the provisions relative to the commissioners of the affairs of taxes, and their inferior officers, and the regulations affecting the assessment, raising, levying, and paying these taxes, and the acts relating to compositions for taxes.

Assessed Taxes consist of the duties on Windows or lights, on Inhabited Houses, on Servants, Carriages, Horses, Mules, and Dogs, Armorial Bearings, Game Certificates, and other the duties transferred to the commissioners for the affairs of taxes. The origin of some of these taxes is stated in 1 Bla. Com. 324, 325.

As all justices of peace duly qualified may act as commissioners of land-tax and assessed taxes, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 75, s. 1; and 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 95; and see 52 Geo. III. c. 95, rule 31, it is essential that all justices should make themselves well acquainted with every regulation respecting every description of tax, and the regulations respecting them. Indeed, as the principal sources of revenue, no subject is more important.

Before we proceed to divide and consider this subject, it may be useful to give, first, a list of the repealed or expired acts; secondly, a list of those acts still in force; and thirdly, a list of those which relate to compositions for taxes:—
